The first & last letters were signed by deft., but the first only was stamped:—Held: one stamp was sufficient, as it fell within the proviso in Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), Sched. Part I., Title Agreement.—HEMMING v. PERRY (1828), 2 Moo. & P. 375.

PARRY* (1840), 1 Man. & G. 604; 1 Scott, N. R. 576; 9 L. J. C. P. 298; 4 Jur. 967; 133 E. R. 474.

He afterwards, by an agreement, stamped with a lease stamp, but which did not contain words of demise, though it referred to the lease, let the same premises to pltf.:—Held: the terms of the lease were incorporated in, & formed part of the agreement; & the former was admissible in evidence, though it was not stamped.—*PEARCE v. 404. —.]—A. writes to B., "I hereby agree, according to our conversation of last evening, to pay you fifty guineas for the occupation of your first floor furnished, from Mar. 4 to Sept. 4. I also agree either to occupy the rooms from Sept. 4 to Dec. 4, furnished, on the same terms, that is to say, twenty-five guineas for the three months, or take them unfurnished at the rate of eighty guineas per annum." To prove this contract, under a plea of non assumpsit in an action by B. against A. for refusing to occupy the rooms furnished till Dec. 4, or to take them unfurnished after the three months at the rate of £84 per annum, A.'s letter was put in stamped with a 30s. stamp. To show that the real contract between the parties was for a yearly tenancy of the unfurnished rooms, A. produced a contemporaneous letter written to him by B., unstamped, in which B. stated that he agreed to let the rooms by the year:—Held: this letter was properly rejected, inasmuch as if it created a new or substituted contract, it required a 30s. stamp, & if it formed part of the original agreement, a 35s. stamp was required for some one of the letters, under Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), Sched. Part I., Title Agreement.—ATHERSTONE v. BOSTOCK (1841), 2 Man. & G. 511; Drinkwater, 96; 2 Scott, N. R. 637; 10 L. J. C. P. 113; 5 J. P. 259; 133 E. R. 850.

405. —.]—In order to prove the terms on which certain notes were deposited by A. with a banking co., deft. produced a paper signed by the manager, & stamped as an agreement, which acknowledged the receipt from A. of the notes as a collateral security "for bills discounted for you," by the bank. The judge was of opinion that that meant "which have been discounted"; & pltf. then produced a paper of the same date signed by A. in these words:—Held: "In consideration of your discounting for me bills from time to time, I deposit as collateral security" the notes in question. It was objected that that was inadmissible for want of a stamp, but the judge thought that it was a part of the same contract, that one stamp was sufficient for the two, & that deft. was bound to give it in evidence:—Held: the judge was right.—LAURIE v. HAMMOND (1847), 2 New Pract. Cas. 379; 10 L. T. O. S. 130.

406. —.]—It was agreed to run a foot race for £25. The agreement was contained in two written documents. It was alleged that there was no race; & in an action brought by one of the parties against the stakeholder to recover the deposit:—Held: one of the written documents must be stamped before it could be put in evidence; but the second might be used without being stamped, the one stamp covering both documents, they being evidence of one agreement.—SOUTHEY v. SMITH (1867), 17 L. T. 323, N. P.

407. — Agreement contained in letters.—Where a contract is contained in letters, it is sufficient if one of the letters bear a £1 15s. stamp, although, on the part of one of the contracting parties, the letters are written & signed by an agent.—*GRANT v. 398 i. Stamp on one sufficient.—Where a letter of proposal & acceptance were carried into effect by an impeached lease duly stamped, was offered in evidence, & objected to as not being stamped:—Held: if there be a series of paper-writings leading

409. — Policy of insurance—Letter giving authority to effect.]—B. & co., by letter, authorised the managers of a mutual marine insurance assocn. to insure a ship with the assocn. & undertook to abide by the rules & regulations thereof. By the rules, each insurer became liable to contribute to the losses of any other insurer in certain proportions. In pursuance of the authority given by B. & co., a duly stamped policy was issued to them, which, however, contained no reference to the rules:—Held: the letter, although not stamped, was admissible in evidence, & B. & co. were contributories.—BLYTH & Co.'s CASE (1872), L. See Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 4.

424. Stamp duty measured by principal object.]—The proper stamp to be borne by a written instrument must depend on what is the leading character of such instrument.

A., by deed, demised lands to B., & this deed contained a covenant by C. to pay the rent. The deed bore a stamp of £1 10s., which was the proper stamp for it, as a lease. In an action of covenant against C., for non-payment of the rent:—Held: this stamp was sufficient, & the deed did not require a £1 15s. stamp.—PRATT v. THOMAS (1831), 4 C. & P. 554, N. P.; subsequent proceedings, sub nom. PRICE v. THOMAS, 2 B. & Ad. 218.

425. —.—(1) Where a document has several objects, of which some are merely ancillary to the main one, the amount of stamp duty is to be measured by the principal object.

(2) Where a document has a double object, & has an unappropriated stamp on it large enough for it in either sense, it is admissible when offered to establish one of its objects.—WALKER v. GILES (1849), 6 C. B. 662; 2 Car. & Kir. 671; 18 L. J. C. P. 323; 13 L. T. O. S. 209; 13 Jur. 588; 136 E. R. 1407.

428. — Surrender of—Agreement to grant new lease by vendor of property.]—On surrender of a lease for lives, purporting to be made in consideration of £120 & of a new lease to be granted to the surrenderor for his life, the deed does not require an agreement stamp in addition to the ad valorem stamp; the stipulation for a new lease not being a "matter or thing besides what" is "incident to the sale & conveyance" within Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), Sched., Part I., Title Conveyance.—*DOE d. 429. Sale of ship—Provisions securing payment.]

(1) An agreement, that A. will sell a ship to B.; that part of the price shall be secured by mtge. of the ship; that A. will procure the ship to be chartered on a voyage; that the earnings on the voyage shall be paid to A. as part of the price; & that at the end of the voyage the mtge. shall close; is an agreement for & relating to the sale of goods, & requires no stamp.

An agreement for the sale of a ship is within the exemptions as an agreement for the sale of goods, & the mere circumstance of other matters connected with the principal object being introduced, does not take the instrument out of the exemption (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).

(2) The instrument was not intended to operate as a transfer of the vessel, pursuant to 6 Geo. 4, c. 110, because the vessel was to be mortgaged as a security for the payment of the purchase-money, & she was to be chartered to London, & her earnings upon that voyage were to go in part payment of the purchase-money (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—MEERING v. DUKE (1828), 2 Man. & Ry. K. B. 121; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 211; sub nom. TOOKE v. MEERING, Dan. & Ll. 35.

430. Transfer of shares—Covenant by transfer to observe regulation of company.]—By the deed of settlement of a joint stock co., the shares were made transferable, & the directors were empowered to regulate the transfer, & to require, in respect of such transfer a covenant from the transferee to observe the co.'s regulations, etc., as to holders of shares. The directors prescribed a form of transfer under seal, by which the shareholder conveyed his shares to the transferee, to hold subject to the regulations & covenants contained in & resolved upon pursuant to the deed of settlement, & the transferee covenanted with the party conveying, & also separately with trustees on behalf of the co., to abide by & perform all the regulations, etc.:—Held: such transfer required an ad valorem stamp only, & not an additional stamp under Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), sched. Part I., Title Conveyance, as containing matter besides that which was "incident to the sale & conveyance of the property sold."—WOLSELEY v. COX (1841), 2 Q. B. 321; 11 L. J. Q. B. 9; 6 Jur. 599; 114 E. R. 126.

431. Mortgage—Resettlement of property.]—A mtge. deed, which was expressed to be made in consideration of the advance, & also for the purpose of resettling the property, & reserved the equity of redemption to the mtgor. & his wife, or the survivor:—Held: not to require an extra stamp for a settlement in addition to the ad valorem stamp on the mtge.—DAWSON v. MEDHURST (1866), 14 L. T. 622.

432. — Provisions making expenses a further charge on property.]—By an indenture dated May 28, 1897, certain freehold & leasehold hereditaments were by direction of a brewery co., respectively conveyed & demised to trustees. The indenture contained a covenant to surrender to the use of the trustees certain copyholds, & an assignment to them of a goodwill & other matters. By the indenture it was agreed that the trustees should stand possessed of the hereditaments & premises upon the trusts contained in an indenture dated May 20, 1897.

The indenture of May 20, 1897, after reciting (inter alia), that the co. had determined to issue certain debenture stock, to be constituted & secured as therein provided, contained a covenant by the co. with the trustees that the co. would cause the hereditaments to be forthwith conveyed to & vested in the trustees for securing the payment by the co. of the debenture stock & the dividends thereon, with a provision for reconveyance to the co. upon proof that all the stockholders had been paid off or satisfied & upon payment of all costs incurred by the trustees in relation to the indenture. The indenture also created a floating charge upon all the property & assets for the time being of the co. In addition to other provisions for the maintenance & enforcement of the security thereby created, the indenture contained (clause 33) a provision that if default should be made in keeping the mtged. premises in a good state of repair & working condition, & so insured as in the indenture specified, the trustees might from time to time repair or renew, or insure, as the case might require, the mtged. premises or any part thereof, & the co. would on demand repay to the trustees every sum of money expended by them for the above purposes, with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from the time of the same having been expended, & until such repayment the same should be a charge upon the mtged. premises.

The indenture was stamped with 2s. 6d. per cent. upon £230,000, the amount to which the stock was limited, & £23,000, the premium at which the stock was redeemable at the co.'s option.

Debenture stock to the amount of £223,200

was subsequently issued by the co. upon the security of the indentures:—Held: (1) clause 33 of the indenture of May 20, 1897, although one of the provisions referred to in the indenture of May 28, 1897, subject to which the trustees were to stand possessed of the hereditaments, did not make the latter indenture a security for money or stock without limit within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 12 (6) (b), & therefore the Comrs. of Inland Revenue were bound to adjudicate the liability of the indenture to duty; (2) the indenture of May 20, 1897, was the primary security, & the indenture of May 28, 1897, a mtge. by way of further assurance, within the meaning of the head of the schedule I. to the Stamp Act, 1891—"Mortgage, Bond, Debenture, Covenant," sub-head (2) & therefore, in addition to the duty to which the indenture of May 28, 1897, was liable as a conveyance on sale, duty at the rate of 6d. per cent. upon £223,200, the amount of the debenture stock issued, was payable upon it.

(3) Sect. 88 of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), contemplates that a primary security may be a deed on which, at the time it is executed, there has been no money lent or advanced.

(4) Sect. 7 of Revenue Act, 1903 (c. 46), is not retrospective, & the duty which is payable on a deed is that which was payable at the date of its execution.—SUFFIELD (LORD) v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1908] 1 K. B. 865; 77 L. J. K. B. 746; 98 L. T. 405; 24 T. L. R. 371; 15 Mans. 233.

433. Licence granting monopoly—Covenant securing payment by instalments.]—By an indenture between a co. & a licensee, in consideration of £7,500, of which £1,500 was then paid, & the remainder was to be paid in monthly instalments of £1,000, the co. granted to the licensee "the sole & exclusive right, licence, & authority to carry on with the asphalt of or to be supplied by the co., but not with any other asphalt, the business of asphalt paving, & of therein & otherwise using, vending, & dealing in asphalt, & of an asphalt co. or asphalt business generally, within the counties of Lancaster & Chester," during the continuance of the co.'s concessions. The co. covenanted to supply the licensee with asphalt, but were not to be bound to prevent the use or sale of asphalt within the counties by any other person, excepting only the use or sale of such asphalt as was agreed to be supplied under the contract, either by the co. or by persons purchasing from the co.; & the licensee agreed not during the continuance of the licence to use, sell, or deal within the counties in any other asphalt than that to be supplied by the co. The licensee covenanted to pay the remaining £6,000 by six monthly instalments of £1,000, & if he should assign the licence, to pay the whole of the remaining instalments or the expiration of two months from the date of the assignment:—Held: (1) the deed was not chargeable as a conveyance on sale, no property being in fact conveyed by it; (2) if it had been so chargeable, one duty only could have been charged in respect of the £7,500. & not a second duty in respect of the covenant to pay by instalments the £6,000 remaining unpaid; (3) such a payment by instalments was a periodical payment within Stamp Act, 1870 (c. 97), s. 72.—LIMMER ASPHALTE PAVING CO. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 211; 41 L. J. Ex. 106; 26 L. T. 633; 20 W. R. 610.

434. Promissory note—Stipulation as to giving of time.]—A document, in the form of a joint & several promissory note by a principal debtor & a surety for £5 payable by instalments, with the proviso that, in case of default in payment of any one of the instalments, the whole amount remaining unpaid should become due, concluded with the following clause namely, "Time may be given to either without the consent of the other & without prejudice to the rights of the holders to proceed against either party, notwithstanding time may be given to another":—Held: the document was not by reason of such a clause an agreement requiring to be stamped as an agreement, but a good promissory note.

Even if the clause in question amounts to an agreement, it is by Stamp Act, 1870 (c. 97), exempted from stamp duty, the subject-matter not exceeding £5.—YATES v. EVANS (1892), 61 L. J. Q. B. 446; 66 L. T. 532; 56 J. P. 565; 36 Sol. Jo. 274, D. C.

435. Sale by auction—One instrument in respect of several lots.]—If an interest in land be of the value of £20 an agreement for it requires an agreement stamp. If on a sale by auction the same person is declared the highest bidder for several lots, a distinct contract arises for each lot; & although all the lots together amount to a greater value than £20 no stamp is required if the lots were separately of less value than £20.—EMMERSON v. HEELIS (1809), 2 Taunt. 38; 127 E. R. 989.

436. ———.]—Where several lots are knocked down to a bidder at an auction & his name marked against them in a catalogue a distinct contract arises for each lot; & a memorandum, signed afterwards by the bidder stating that he agrees to become the purchaser of the several lots set against his name does not require a stamp, though the aggregate exceed £20 in value, no single lot being of that price.—ROOTS v. DORMER (LORD) (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 77; 1 Nev. & M. K. B. 607; 100 E. R. 384.

437. ———.]—Leasehold & copyhold premises were put up to auction in two separate lots, which were knocked down to deft., & he signed the following memorandum: "I do hereby acknowledge that I have this day purchased by Public Auction Lots 1 & 2 of the estates mentioned in the annexed particulars, at the sum of £245, £150 for Lot 1 & £95 for Lot 2," etc. Upon refusal of deft. to complete the purchase, the premises were resold, & an action was brought to recover the difference of the price:—Held: the memorandum required two stamps.—WATLING v. HORWOOD (1847), 12 Jur. 48.

438. Conveyance of land on trust—Deed containing declaration of similar trust of stocks.]—By indenture to which A., exor. & devisee in trust, & C. & D. were parties, it was agreed & declared that certain stock, formerly testator's, should be transferred to C. & D. in trust, according to the dispositions of the will; & in pursuance of an agreement, which was recited, A., by the same indenture, bargained, sold, released, etc., lands of A. to C. & his heirs, in trust that C. should, out of the proceeds, make certain payments directed by the will. The indenture bore a £1 15s. stamp:—Held: such stamp was sufficient under Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), Sched. part I.; & the indenture did not require to be stamped both as a "deed not otherwise charged," etc., in respect of the disposition of stock, & as a "conveyance not otherwise charged," etc., in respect of the bargain, sale, & release of lands.—DOE d. HARTWRIGHT v. FEREEDAY (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 23; 4 Per. & Dav. 287; 11 L. J. Q. B. 19; 113 E. R. 718.

439. Lease—To trustee for purchaser—Conveyance of reversion to purchaser.]—Land was conveyed upon a sale by an instrument, dated Oct. 28, 1847, in the following manner: the land was first bargained & sold by the vendor to a trustee for the purchasers for a term of three months, & then the reversion conveyed to the purchaser. The instrument was twice executed by the vendor, once by a mere signature, & then immediately afterwards by his signing, sealing, & delivery:—Held: two stamp duties were chargeable upon the instrument as having two distinct operations, one as a lease, & the other as a conveyance on a sale.—BRIGHTMAN v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1868), 18 L. T. 412.

440. Appointment of new trustees of charity—Vesting property in trustees.]—An order of charity comrs., by which new trustees of a charity are appointed & the property of the charity vested in them, is chargeable, under Stamp Act, 1870 (c. 97), s. 8, with duty in respect both of the appointment & of the vesting order, & does not come within the proviso to Stamp Act, 1870 (c. 97), s. 78, as a conveyance or transfer made for effectuating the appointment of a new trustee.—HADGETT v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1877), 3 Ex. D. 46; 37 L. T. 612; 42 J. P. 216; 26 W. R. 115, D. C.

F. Instruments Containing Provisions Implied by Law.

441. Necessity for stamp in respect of provision—Memorandum of deposit of bills.]—A mere acknowledgment, which does not bind the party signing it to do any more than he was otherwise bound to do by law, does not require an agreement stamp. Thus, an acknowledgment in these words: "I have in my hands, three bills, which amount to £120 10s. 6d. which I have to get discounted, or return on demand," was held to require no stamp, because it did not bind the party to get the bills discounted; & the law would compel him to return them on demand. So, an acknowledgment in these words: "I have received a bill, drawn by P. upon H., bearing my indorsement & the indorsement of P. which I hold, as your attorney, to receive the value from the respective parties, or to make such other arrangement for your benefit as may appear to me, in my professional capacity, reasonable & proper," was held to require no stamp.—*MULLETT v. 442. ———.]—“ I have received a bill of exchange which I hold as your attorney to recover the value of from the parties or to make such other arrangement for your benefit as may appear to me in my professional character reasonable & proper ” is not an agreement or a receipt & may be read in evidence without any stamp.—LANGDON v. WILSON (1828), 7 B. & C. 640, n. ; 2 Man. & Ry. K. B. 10 ; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 177 ; 108 E. R. 862. Annotation :—Mentd. Parker v. Housefield (1834), 2 My. & K. 419.

443. Joint & several bond by principal & surety—Covenant by principal to indemnify surety.]—Where by bond A, as principal, & B., as surety, were jointly & severally bound to pay to the creditors of C. 14s. in the pound on the amount of their debts, & by the same bond A. was bound to indemnify B. against all loss by reason of his becoming surety :—Held : a stamp of £1 15s. was sufficient in amount for this instrument, & it did not require a second stamp on account of A.'s obligation to indemnify B., the whole being one transaction.—ANNANDALE v. PATISON (1829), 9 B. & C. 919 ; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 66 ; 109 E. R. 342.

444. Admission of tenancy on sufferance—Agreement to give up tenancy on demand.]—An instrument in these terms : “ I hereby certify that I remain in the house No. 3, Swinton Street, belonging to W. on sufferance only, & agree to give him immediate possession at any time he may require ” :—Held : not to amount to an agreement for a tenancy, so as to require a stamp.—BARRY v. GOODMAN (1837), 2 M. & W. 768 ; Murp. & H. 124 ; 6 L. J. Ex. 188 ; 150 E. R. 967.

445. — Admission of debt in consideration of withdrawal of distress—Authority to re-enter & distrain—In default of payment.]—A memorandum, by which, in consideration that A. will withdraw a distress for a sum exceeding £20, which B. admits to be due from him as tenant to A., until a future day, B. declares, that in case of default it shall be lawful for A. to enter & distrain, & to pursue all remedies for the recovery of the rent, as if no distress had been taken, is admissible in evidence to prove the tenancy without an agreement stamp.—HILL v. RAMM (1843), 5 Man. & G. 789 ; 6 Scott, N. R. 571 ; 1 L. T. O. S. 109 ; 134 E. R. 779 ; sub nom. HILL v. RANSOM, 12 L. J. C. P. 275.

446. — Bill of exchange—Agreement to meet accommodation bill when due.]—In an action against the acceptor of an accommodation bill, the following memorandum, with reference to the bill declared on, was held to be admissible in evidence without a stamp : “ I hereby acknowledge that you have for my accommodation, accepted a bill of even date herewith, for £25, payable, etc. ; & I agree to provide for the same when due.”—NOTLEY v. WEBB (1848), 5 C. B. 834 ; 136 E. R. 1107.

447. — Acknowledgment of receipt containing condition—Rendering bill null & void.]—Declaration stated that pltf. employed deft. to obtain a partner for him in his trade ; that deft. obtained such partner, to wit, S., who entered into co-partnership with pltf., upon certain terms ; that pltf. paid to deft. £25 for obtaining for him the said partner, & it was then agreed between pltf. & deft. that pltf. should accept & deliver to deft. a bill of exchange for £27 10s. payable eighteen months after date, upon condition that S. should accept the partnership beyond two years, but if S. should, at the expiration of eighteen months give notice of his wish to retire from the trade, & not rescind it, the bill should be void ; that in consideration pltf. would accept the bill, & deliver the same accepted to deft. upon the said condition, deft. promised that if he should negotiate the bill, & if S. should give to pltf. the notice, & not rescind it, deft. would indemnify pltf. from the payment of the said bill & all costs ; that pltf. delivered the bill to deft., who took & received it upon the condition aforesaid, & deft. negotiated it, & thereby pltf. had been compelled to pay the amount ; & that S. gave the said notice to pltf., & did not rescind it, Breach, that deft. had not indemnified pltf. Plea, that deft. did not take or receive the bill upon the condition in the declaration mentioned. On the trial, pltf. offered in evidence the following writing, signed by deft. :—“ Memorandum.—I have this day received of F. a bill for £27 10s., at eighteen months' date, on condition that S. accepts the partnership beyond two years ; but should S. give notice at the expiration of eighteen months, & not afterwards rescind the same, the bill to be null & void ” :—Held : admissible without a stamp, not being “ an agreement, or any minute or memorandum of an agreement,” or “ evidence of a contract ” within Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), sched., Part I., Title “ Agreement ” ; because it was only evidence of the contract as a subsequent admission ; & because it only expressed the same consequence which the law would imply.—DE PORQUET v. 451. — Correction of mistake.]—An alteration in the terms of a written contract, after it has been executed, unless made to correct some mistake, or supply some omission, will render a new stamp necessary, in order to make it admissible in evidence as a security, or to sustain an action founded upon it.—SUTTON v. TOOMER (1827), 7 B. & C. 416; 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 125; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 49; 108 E. R. 778.

452. — Grant of annuity—Indorsement containing redemption clause.]—Where a former rule for setting aside an annuity was discharged because it did not appear that an indorsement, not memorialised, containing a clause of redemption, bearing date after the deed, had been made prior to the execution of it; in which case it could not be received in evidence for want of being stamped; the ct. will not enter into the question on a subsequent rule, although it appear clearly that the indorsement was made before the deed was executed; & that such clause of redemption was not inserted in the memorial of the annuity enrolled according to 17 Geo. 2, c. 26.—SCHUMANN v. WEATHERHEAD (1801), 1 East, 537; 102 E. R. 207.

453. — Rectification of mistake—Bill of sale.]—26 Geo. 3, c. 60, s. 17, avoiding a bill of sale of a registered ship, which does not truly & accurately recite the certificate of registry; where parties by mistake mis-recited in a bill of sale the certificate of registry, by stating Guernsey as the port where the certificate was granted instead of Weymouth; which mistake was rectified when discovered by consent of all parties, & the deed delivered de novo:—Held: no new stamp was necessary upon such re-execution; the deed taking no effect from its first delivery, & the defect arising not from intention but from mistake, & the alteration merely making the contract what it was originally intended to have been.—COLE v. PARKIN (1810), 12 East, 471; 104 E. R. 184.

456. — Immaterial variation—Affidavit.]—A plea puis darrein continuance may be pleaded at any time after the last continuance, either in bank, or at Nisi Prius, & it is imperative on the judge at Nisi Prius to receive it. Pltf. cannot object, at Nisi Prius, that the plea is such a one as ought not to be received. An affidavit which is annexed to a plea, refers to the plea, & therefore need not be entitled of the cause; if, however, on the objection being made, deft. entitle it, that is not such an alteration as to make a new stamp necessary.—PRINCE v. NICHOLSON (1814), 1 Marsh. 70; 5 Taunt. 333; 128 E. R. 718.

457. — Warrant of attorney.]—By Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), sched., Part I., a warrant of attorney is required to have an ad valorem stamp, except where it is given for securing a sum of money for which the party giving it is in custody, when a £1 stamp is sufficient. Where a warrant of attorney was given under such circumstances:—Held: an interlineation in the instrument made by consent of both parties, after execution, stating the party to be “now a prisoner in the custody of the sheriff of K.” was not an alteration in a material part of the instrument, so as to render a new stamp necessary.—HARTLEY v. MANSON (1842), 4 Man. & G. 172; 1 Dowl. N. S. 711; 4 Scott, N. R. 728; 11 L. J. C. P. 199; 134 E. R. 71.

458. — Bill of exchange.]—In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor of a bill of exchange, the declaration stated that the drawer, “on Mar. 22, 1844, made his bill of exchange,” etc.:—Held: deft. was not at liberty to prove, under non accepit, that the bill had been altered from Mar. 2 to Mar. 22, there being no variance, as the date was immaterial, & therefore the objection that the alteration was such as to require a new stamp unavailing.—PARRY v. NICHOLSON (1845), 13 M. & W. 778; 2 Dowl. & L. 640; 14 L. J. Ex. 119; 4 L. T. O. S. 399.

After the making of the agreement, but before the day for its completion arrived, the parties agreed, by an indorsement on the former agreement, to enlarge the time for its performance for a few days:—Held: this amounted to a fresh agreement. Qu.: whether it was an agreement, the subject-matter whereof was of the value of £20, so as to require a fresh stamp.—*BACON v. 468. — Transfer of shares by deed—Completion of transfer—Substitution of new transferee.—A railway Act makes the shares transferable by deed, & directs that on every sale, the deed being executed by the seller & the purchaser, shall be kept by the co., or by the secretary or clerk of the co., who shall enter, in some book to be kept for that purpose, a memorial of such transfer & sale, & indorse the entry of such memorial on the deed of sale or transfer; & that until such memorial shall have been made & entered, the seller shall remain liable for all future calls, & the purchaser shall have no part or share in the profits.

The deed of transfer was executed by A., the seller, with the name of B. inserted as the purchaser; before any execution of the deed by B., it was arranged that C. instead of B. should be the

484. — — — — —.]—A chartered banking co., the principal business of which was in Australia, stopped payment, & was ordered to be wound up in this country. A scheme of reconstruction was proposed, by which a new bank was to be established, which was to defray the liabilities of the old bank with certain exceptions. The judge directed meetings of the shareholders & creditors to be held in order to ascertain their wishes as to the scheme. It being necessary that this should be done without delay, & the great majority of the creditors being resident in Australia, the judge made an order directing a form of proxy to be sent by the Official Receiver by telegraph to Australia appointing specified persons to vote for or against the scheme at the London meeting; the proxy papers were to be executed by the creditors in Australia & deposited at the offices of the co. at the principal cities in Australia not later than three days previous to the meeting in London, & the particulars & number of the proxies for & against the scheme were to be telegraphed to the Official Receiver. This was done, & the result declared at the meeting in London, when it was found that more than the statutory number of the creditors, including the Australian creditors, were in favour of the scheme, but that if the Australian votes were not counted the resolution in favour of the scheme would not have been carried. Under these circumstances the judge sanctioned the scheme. Some of the Scottish & English creditors appealed from this decision on the grounds (a) that the scheme was improvident & unfair towards the creditors generally; (b) that the judge had no power to order the result of the Australian proxies to be communicated by telegram to the meeting, but that the proxies ought to have been produced at the meeting; (c) that the Australian proxy papers were irregular in naming a particular person as agent for the voter; (d) that as to some of the proxy papers, which were stamped with a penny stamp, the day of the meeting at which they were to be used was not inserted, & therefore, they were void under Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 80 :—Held: the proxies on which the day of meeting was not named would be good if stamped with a ten shilling stamp within thirty days of their being received in England under Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 15 (3).—RE ENGLISH, SCOTTISH & AUSTRALIAN CHARTERED BANK, [1893] 3 Ch. 385; 62 L. 485. Burden of proof that instrument exempt—On party offering instrument in evidence.—Where an unstamped indenture of apprenticeship recited that a premium of £12 had been paid; but added, that it was paid out of a charitable donation fund belonging to the parish, & the master being called, proved that the premium had been paid by the parish officers, who told him at the time of paying it that it was charity money:—Held: the fact of payment being proved, the recital in the indenture, & the declarations of the parish officers, were not admissible in evidence, so as to bring the case within the exception in 44 Geo. 3, c. 98, s. 190, & the indenture, being unstamped, was void. Semble: a charitable donation fund belonging to a parish is a public charity, within such exception.

542. ——— Undertaking by tenant to give possession—In consideration of forbearance from sale of goods.]—The following document was held not to require an agreement stamp: "I, N. F. do hereby request S. B. bailiff to my landlord, who on Nov. 4, 1848, having distrained my goods on the premises which I now hold, situate at, etc., for the sum of £100 as rent due to S. B.; & I request him to forbear the sale thereof until Feb. 2, 1849, to enable me to discharge the said rent; & I do hereby request, agree, & consent that the goods so distrained shall remain at my proper cost in his possession upon the premises until Feb. 2, 1849; & I undertake to give up the same goods, & not to replevy the same, & that this distress shall remain in full force during that time; & I do hereby undertake to give up peaceable possession of the premises & effects distrained on Feb. 2, 1849, & pay all costs & charges attending this distress."—FISHWICK v. MILNES (1850), 4 Exch. 825; 19 L. J. Ex. 153; 154 E. R. 1450.

543. Accounts showing balance between partners.]—In an action by a coach proprietor against his co-proprietor for the amount of certain monthly balances of accounts, it appeared that up to July 5, 1842, pltf. & another proprietor horsed the coach between them; that on that day the latter sold a part of his interest to deft., upon certain terms contained in a written agreement of that date, which, although not seen by pltf., was communicated to him; & that the business was afterwards carried on according to its terms. After July 5, the accounts between the three were settled every 28 days by a clerk who had formerly settled for the two; he made them out monthly, & sent them to deft., without ever hearing any complaint from him as to his not having received them, or of any incorrectness in them:—Held: these accounts were admissible in evidence, as tending to show the striking of a balance between the parties, & they need not be stamped either as awards or agreements.—DIXON v. WING (1843), 1 L. T. O. S. 647; subsequent proceedings (1844), 3 L. T. O. S. 159.

546. Circular—Undertaking to return deposit.]—WARD v. LONDESBOURGH (LORD), No. 597, post.

547. ———.]—The provisional directors of a projected railway co. of whom deft. was one, after the subscribers' agreement had been prepared, issued a circular letter referring to certain arrangements made with another existing co., & stating that in the event of the Act not being obtained, the directors undertook to return the whole of the deposits without deduction. Upon the faith of this pltf. applied for, & obtained, an allotment of shares in the projected co. The letter of allotment was accompanied with a copy of the circular "

Sect. 6.—Duties upon particular instruments: Subsect. 3, B. & C. (a).]

& stated in the usual form that the bankers' receipt for the deposits would be exchanged for scrip on pltf. executing the subscribers' agreement. Pltf. paid the deposits on his shares, obtained the bankers' receipt, & signed the subscribers' agreement & obtained scrip certificates. The subscribers' agreement contained a clause fully indemnifying the provisional directors in respect of all contracts & things made & done in pursuance of the powers given to them, & authorised them to reimburse themselves out of the funds of the co. all costs & expenses which they might incur or be put to, in, or incident thereto, & to apply the deposits & calls, among other things, in defraying the preliminary expenses & the expenses of the application to Parliament. The deed also contained a general covenant of indemnity against all costs & charges incurred by the directors in the execution of their duty. The directors failed in obtaining an Act of Parliament, & £1 per share was returned to the shareholders, the rest of the funds having been spent in defraying the preliminary & parliamentary expenses. Afterwards, pltf., by letter, demanded repayment of the whole of the deposits on his shares, & adding that he should expect to be paid £5 per cent. interest from a certain date:—Held: (1) the contract upon which pltf. had paid his deposits was, that, in the event of an Act not being obtained, the whole of his deposits should be returned, & the express undertaking to that effect in the circular was not in any way affected by the terms of the subscribers' agreement executed by pltf., (2) the contract for the shares was not entirely evidenced by writing, & did not therefore require a stamp.—MOWATT v. LONDESBOROUGH (LORD) (1854), 3 E. & B. 307; 23 L. J. Q. B. 177; 22 L. T. O. S. 303; 18 Jur. 1094; 118 E. R. 1156; on appeal, 4 E. & B. 1, Ex. Ch.

549. Notice to treat—In negotiations for compulsory purchase.—A decree having been made for specific performance of a contract by the M. Ry. 550. Advertisement in newspaper — Offer of reward.—Defts. advertised that they would pay £100 reward to any person who contracted influenza after having used their Carbolic Smoke Ball according to the printed directions supplied. Pltf. purchased a smoke ball, used it according to the directions, but subsequently contracted influenza, & relying on the advertisement, claimed the £100:—Held: the offer or proposal in the advertisement, coupled with the performance by pltf. of the condition, created a contract on the part of defts. to pay the £100 in the event mentioned in the proposal. The advertisement did not require to be stamped as an agreement or memorandum of agreement under Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39).—CARLILL v. CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL CO., [1892] 2 Q. B. 484; 61 L. J. Q. 552. Value must be proved affirmatively.—(1) Where the subject-matter of an agreement is a limited interest worth less than £20, in a thing worth more than £20, the agreement does not require a stamp.

The right of occupation could not be worth £20, because the occupation was determinable at any time upon giving six months' notice, & the right of occupation was the subject-matter of the agreement, & consequently no stamp was requisite (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).

(2) As a stamp is required only where the value of the subject-matter exceeds £20, it was for deft., who relied upon the objection, to make out the affirmative of that proposition (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—DOE d. MORGAN v. AMOS (1828), 2 Man. & Ry. K. B. 180; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 226.

At the expiration of the week, pltf. having in the meantime acted upon agreement by removing part of the furniture, & selling other part, deft. & others entered took possession. 564. — — — — —.]—Payment of interest.]—The following document held not to require a stamp, either as an agreement or a promissory note: “1839, Nov. 11, I.O.U. £45 13s. which I borrowed of Mrs. M. & to pay her 5 per cent. till paid.—R. T.”

The only agreement of which the paper is evidence, is an agreement to pay £5 per cent. interest on £45, which is not necessarily of the value of £20. It is not enough that the agreement should be possibly of that value, it must be so in its nature & inception (POLLOCK, C.B.).—MELANOTTE v. TEASDALE (1844), 13 M. & W. 216; 1 New Pract. Taylor the sum of £170 for value received, for which I promise to pay her at the rate of £5 per cent. from the above date. A. N. S.:—Held: not to require a stamp, either as a receipt, a promissory note, or an agreement of the value of £20.

It must appear on the face of the instrument or with reference to the subject-matter be capable of being ascertained, that the agreement was of the value of £20 at the time it was entered into. Applying that rule to the present case, it is impossible to say that this instrument was an agreement of the value of £20 at the time it was signed, for the interest might never have amounted to £20 (PARKE, B.).—*TAYLOR v. 567. Agreement of indemnity.]—The son of J. having been arrested, & W. becoming his bail, J. signed an agreement to indemnify W. from all liability which he might incur in consequence:—Held: as one of the liabilities to which J. thereby subjected himself was to pay the debt for which the son of J. had been arrested, & as that must have amounted to £20, the subject-matter of the agreement must have been of that value, & the agreement therefore required a stamp within Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), sched. 593. Whether admissible in evidence without stamp.—A. applied by letter for shares in a railway co., & thereby undertook to accept the shares which might be allotted to him, to pay the deposit, & to sign the Parliamentary contract & subscribers' agreement. In answer to this he received a letter, allotting to him a certain number of shares, & requiring him to pay the deposit thereon on a certain day, & stating that the committee reserved the power to cancel the allotment, without notice, on non-payment. In an action by A. to recover the deposit, the scheme having failed:—Held: the letter of allotment did not require a stamp.—VOLLANS v. FLETCHER (1847), 1 Exch. 20; 2 New Pract. 594. —[.]—To a letter in the ordinary form, applying for shares in a projected railway co., pltf. received in answer a letter of allotment, headed "not transferable," & requiring him to pay a deposit of £2 2s. per share. The words relating to the deposit were erased, & the letter was indorsed with a memorandum, that the committee of management being of opinion, that it would be an accommodation to the subscribers if they were allowed the option of either paying the whole or a portion of their deposits at that time, & the remainder at a future day, & considering it unnecessary to lock up the large sum of money over & above what any expenses could require in the then state of the money market, there being no necessity for so doing, proceeded to state that pltf. was directed to pay 10s. per share on a certain day, & £1 12s. on a subsequent day. The scheme failed, the money having been expended in preliminary expenses. In an action by pltf. to recover back his deposit of 10s. per share:—Held: the letter of allotment did not require a stamp.—WILLEY v. PARRATT (1848), 3 Exch. 211; 6 Ry. & Can. Cas. 32; 18 L. J. Ex. 82; 13 L. T. O. S. 141; 154 E. R. 819.

595. —[.]—In an action for money had & received by an allottee of railway scrip, for the recovery of his deposit on the abandonment of the scheme, the letter of allotment was offered in evidence by pltf., who called upon deft. to produce the letter of application, which he refused to do:—Held: under such circumstances, the letter of allotment was receivable in evidence without a stamp.—MOORE v. GARWOOD (1849), 4 Exch. 681; 19 L. J. Ex. 15; 14 L. T. O. S. 224; 154 E. R. 1388, Ex. Ch.

596. —[.]—In an action by an allottee of shares in a projected joint stock co. to recover back the deposit, pltf. gave secondary evidence of the letter of allotment, the original having been lost, but did not produce the letter of application. Pltf. also gave in evidence the banker's receipt, stamped with a 20s. stamp:—Held: (1) the banker's receipt so stamped was admissible in evidence.

It is argued that the document given by the bankers, on receipt of the deposit, required a receipt stamp. It is not necessary to decide whether that document was an accountable receipt within the exemption of Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), because assuming it to be a receipt for a debt it is clear that by sect. 10 of that Act, where a document is not required to be stamped with a stamp of a particular denomination, it is sufficient if any stamp be impressed provided it be the right amount & is not specifically appropriated to any other instrument (PATTESON, J.).

(2) If the contract was made by the letter of allotment, coupled with the payment of the deposit, then it was not an agreement within Stamp Act. An offer in writing accepted by parol does not require a stamp (MAULE, J.).—CHAPLIN

597. —[.]—Pltf. received a letter of allotment, allotting him 100 shares in a projected railway, upon which he paid a deposit of £2 2s. per share. With the letter of allotment, the board of directors, one of whom was deft., caused to be sent to pltf. a circular containing, amongst others, the following provision, "In the event of the Act not being obtained, the directors undertake to return the whole of the deposits, without deduction." There was no evidence of any application by pltf. for shares, or that his allotted shares had been exchanged for scrip; & it appeared that he had never signed the parliamentary contract or subscribers' agreement. The project proving abortive:—Held: the letter of allotment & circular were admissible in evidence without being stamped, inasmuch as they did not constitute the whole agreement between the directors & the allottees.—WARD v. LONDESBOURGH (LORD) (1852), 12 C. B. 252; 18 L. T. O. S. 209; 138 E. R. 900.

620. Transfer of shares.—The residuary personal estate consisted (inter alia) of certain shares in the L. Gaslight co., & of several principal sums of money secured on several mtges., transfers of mtges., further charges, bonds, notes, & other securities, & it had not been necessary for any of the purposes of the will to call in, sell, or convert into money any portion of such residuary estate.

At the request of R. H., the residuary legatee, A. & B. agreed as trustees & exors., to transfer to him the above mentioned shares & principal sums of money, & a deed dated June 1, 1866, & made between the said A. & B. of the one part, & R. H. of the other part, was accordingly prepared & executed, which recited all the facts & matters above stated. By the first testatum clause of the deed, all the said gas shares & also all the several principal sums of money secured by the said several mtges., etc., specified in three several schedules therein underwritten, & all interest, etc., together with the said several mtge. deeds, were assigned & transferred by the said A. & B., unto the said R. H., his exors., administrators, & assigns absolutely. By a second testatum clause, "to the intent that the several hereditaments comprised in the said several mtges., etc., might be duly vested in the said R. H., his heirs & assigns," all the messuages, etc., comprised in the said several mtges., etc., were granted & conveyed by the said A. & B. unto & to the use of the said R. H., his heirs & assigns for ever, subject to the equity of redemption then subsisting therein respectively. The aggregate amount of the several principal sums secured by the several mtge. deeds was £32,499:—Held: the deed on the face of it was a technical, substantial, & real transfer both of the gas shares & the mtges. specifically to R. H. & as such came within the description of the Act of Parliament, & was therefore liable to the stamp duty of £10 12s. 6d., assessed as follows: As a transfer of shares in the stock of the L. 625. —.]—By an agreement made in England, applts., a limited co., bought from a firm of soap manufacturers in the United States their freehold works, book & other debts, together with the goodwill of the business & the trade marks used in connection therewith. The vendors were the owners of a trade mark, registered in England, relating to their soap, which trade mark was extensively circulated throughout England in newspapers & pictorial advertisements at the expense of the vendors, who had an office in London for that purpose, & by this means a large demand for the soap had been created in the United Kingdom. The vendors did not sell direct to the retail dealers in the United Kingdom but to a syndicate of three firms, who gave orders for soap which was despatched to them in England & paid for by them by remittances sent to the vendors; the syndicate then resold it to retail dealers, & others at such prices as they thought fit; about two-thirds of the total sales of the vendors were made to the English syndicate:—Held: the English trade mark & goodwill were “property” within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 59 (1), & the agreement was liable in respect of them to ad valorem stamp duty.—*BROOKE (BENJAMIN) & CO. v. Two days afterwards a declaration of trust was executed, by which the equitable interest in the premises vested in the purchaser:—Held: the contract being one for the sale of a legal estate, & there being no obligation on the purchaser to accept a declaration of trust, it was not a contract for the sale of an equitable estate or interest in property within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 59 (1).

(2) The goodwill of a public-house is not neces-

An agreement in writing to sell the premises of a wholesale manufacturing business carried on abroad together with the goodwill of the business for a lump sum was executed by the vendor abroad & by the purchaser in England. The vendor covenanted not to engage in any similar trade within fifty miles of the existing premises. All the customers of the business were abroad:—Held: (1) the agreement was “made” in England, but (2) the goodwill was “property locally situate out of the United Kingdom” within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 59, & the agreement was therefore not chargeable with the ad valorem duty.—*INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. Plea: that it was given to secure the payment of £660 & interest agreed, after the passing of Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), to be paid for equality of partition of certain lands in which pltf. & deft. were interested; & that on the principal deed, by which pltf. conveyed to deft. her interest in the estate taken in severalty by deft., no mention was made of this sum. On demurrer:—Held: Probate & Legacy Duties Act, 1808 (c. 149), s. 24, incorporated by Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), s. 8, applied only to sales properly so called; & an exchange upon which money was paid for equality of partition was not a sale; & therefore, the enactment in that sect., enabling the purchaser to recover from the seller any part of the purchase-money not expressed in the deed of sale, was inapplicable; though the deed ought to have been stamped with an ad valorem stamp as an exchange, the improper stamping of the conveyance was no bar to an action on the bond given to secure the price.—HENNIKER v. Ry. co.'s preferential stock of £298,000 be substituted for it, & it was directed by the Act that the transfer should be evidenced by a deed of transfer, duly stamped, wherein the full consideration for the deed should be fully & truly stated. The transaction was carried into effect & a deed was executed, whereby, in consideration of the agreement, the whole undertaking of the U. & L. Ry. co., subject to their debts, was, by virtue of the Act, transferred to & vested in the F. Ry. co., absolutely & for ever, & the Comrs. of Inland Revenue having charged ad valorem duty on the deed as a "conveyance upon sale" in consideration of £390,380 the admitted average selling price of the £298,000 preferential stock at the date of the deed:—Held: part of the consideration for the sale was "stock within the second paragraph in Schedule to 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, Title Conveyance, & the deed was rightly stamped with ad valorem duty in respect of such stock.—ULVERSTONE & LANCASTER RY. The railway co. thereupon gave notice to the colliery co. under Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 78, that they were willing to make compensation for the coal. The amount of the compensation having been fixed by arbn., the railway co. paid that amount, & the colliery co. executed an instrument under seal by which they acknowledged receipt of the amount in satisfaction of all claims by them in respect of the coal, & undertook to leave the coal unworked :—Held : the instrument so executed was not chargeable with the ad valorem stamp duty payable upon a “conveyance on sale” under the Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39).

Annual rentcharge—Redeemable on payment of lump sum.]—A deed made between E. of the first part; G. of the second part; the Plymouth Great Western Dock co. of the third part, & P. of the fourth part, recited (inter alia) that G. had, pursuant to an Act of Parliament, constructed certain piers, & was entitled to take tolls thereon, & that it had been agreed between G. & the Plymouth Great Western Dock co. that the piers, etc., should be purchased of G. by the Plymouth Great Western Dock co., & that the consideration for the purchase should be the sum of £37,000, & that £10,000 only, part of the sum of £37,000, should be paid in gross by the co. & that £15,000, further part of the £37,000, should be represented by an annual rentcharge of £750, subject to redemption at any time thereafter, on payment of £15,000, after twelve calendar months' notice given by the co., & that £12,000, residue of the £37,000, should be represented by an annual rentcharge of £600, subject to the power of redemption hereinafter mentioned. The pier, etc., were for the consideration aforesaid, by the deed conveyed by G. to the co., subject to the rentcharges of £750 & £600 before mentioned. The deed contained a proviso for redemption of the rentcharges of £750 at the option of the co. pursuant to the agreement recited, & also a proviso that if at any time after Sept. 29, '858, G., or his heirs or assigns, should desire to have the rentcharge of £600 redeemed, & should give twelve months' notice to the co., the co., should pay G. £12,000 for the redemption or repurchase thereof, & a further proviso that, if no such notice should be given after Sept. 29, 1858, then that the co. might, at any time after Sept. 29, 1868, redeem the rentcharge of £600 for £12,000 on giving to G. twelve months' notice:—Held: an ad valorem duty was payable as if the £12,000 had been a payment in money; but that no ad valorem duty was payable in respect of the rentcharge of £750.—*PLYMOUTH GREAT WESTERN DOCK CO. v. 654. Sale of land—Annual sum payable to vendor for tithe—Vendor liable for tithe.]—The owners in fee simple of a certain piece of land offered the land for sale in lots as a building estate, & by an indenture which recited that the vendors had agreed with the purchaser for the sale to him of a certain lot or piece of the land for the sum of £50, the vendors granted the lot to the purchaser in fee simple in consideration of the sum of £50 then paid by the purchaser, amongst other conditions, subject to & charged with the payment to the vendors & their assigns of the annual sum of 1s. in accordance with a stipulation providing that the piece of land thereby conveyed was in consideration of the vendors paying the whole of the tithe in respect of the land of which the plot formed part, subjected & charged with the payment to the vendors of the perpetual sum of 1s. per annum; & the purchaser for himself & his assigns covenanted to make this annual payment of 1s. to the vendors & to perform the other stipulations of the agreement. The payment of the 1s. was in consideration of the vendors paying the whole of the tithe. In assessing the stamp duty upon the indenture:—Held: the annual payment of 1s. per annum was part of the consideration for the sale; the consideration for the sale was therefore the £50 plus the annual sum of 1s. & having regard to Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 56 (2), the whole consideration for the sale was £50, plus 1s. multiplied by twenty, namely, £51, & the indenture was to be stamped as a conveyance on sale for a consideration of £51, namely, with a stamp of 7s. 6d.; but even if the annual payment was not part of the consideration, the stipulation to pay it would be a separate collateral covenant which would require to be stamped as such.—MARTIN v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1904), 91 L. T. 453.

655. Part of consideration payable on contingency—Periodical payment of money.]—Part of the consideration for the sale of a co.'s assets to another co. was that the buying co. should pay out of its profits to the selling co. an annual dividend of 3 per cent. upon capital issued, after paying to its own shareholders a 5 per cent. dividend upon its shares:—Held: the dividend of 3 per cent., though payable on a contingency or more than one contingency, was "money payable periodically" within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 56 (2).—*UNDERGROUND ELECTRIC RYS. v. Applt., not having obtained a conveyance, contracted to sell portions of the property to sub-purchasers, & in consequence, F. by divers conveyances conveyed those portions to the various sub-purchasers, each of the conveyances being stamped with ad valorem conveyances duty on the purchase-money paid by each sub-purchaser, the total consideration stated in these various conveyances amounting to £45,000 & upwards. Applt. then took a conveyance to himself from F. of the remaining portion of the property. By that conveyance, which recited the agreement for sale between F. & applt. & that the £45,000 had already been paid to F. by or under the direction of applt. on the execution of the conveyances to the sub-purchasers, applt. covenanted to assume liability for the charges of £997 5s. 9d. :—Held: the conveyance to applt. was liable to stamp duty on so much of the original purchase-money, £45,997 5s. 9d., as, having regard to the relative values of the property sub-sold & not sub-sold, was apportionable to that part of the property conveyed to applt.—*MAPLES v. On a case stated by the Comrs. of Inland Revenue pursuant to Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 13 :—Held: (1) the words of exception in sect. 59 (1) of that Act, do not apply to an equitable estate or interest in property locally situate out of the United Kingdom & therefore the general words "any equitable estate or interest in any property whatsoever" apply, & ad valorem duty is payable on an agreement made in England for the purchase of such an estate; (2) also New South Wales Trust Property Act, 1862, does not confer the legal estate in mtged. property on the mtgor.; therefore ad valorem duty was payable on the purchase by appls. of the equity of redemption.—*FARMER & CO. v. 661. — Book debts of foreign business.—An agreement was made & executed in England for the sale of a business carried on at Buenos Ayres in Argentina & its assets, which included certain book debts owing by persons resident in Argentina to the vendor of the business :—Held: the book debts were not property "locally situate out of the United Kingdom" within the meaning of the exception in Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 59 (1), & ad valorem duty was, therefore, payable on the apportioned consideration for the sale of the book debts.—*VELAZQUEZ, LTD. v. See Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74; Finance Act, 1920 (c. 18), ss. 36 (1), (2), 64, sched. IV.

667. How duty calculated.]—The ad valorem stamp duty payable on a voluntary disposition, such as a resettlement, including cases where a substantial benefit is conferred upon the parties taking under it, for an inadequate consideration, is to be calculated upon the value of the property conveyed or transferred, & not only on the value of the interests taken by the persons to whom it is transferred.—WESTMORELAND (EARL) v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1927), 71 Sol. Jo. 946, C. A.

668. Conveyance for consideration less than full value—Duty only on consideration mentioned—Effect on purchaser for value.]—When property has been conveyed for a consideration less than its full value, the fact that stamp duty has only been paid in respect of the consideration mentioned in the conveyance, & not, as required by Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74, in respect of the value of the property, will not affect a subsequent purchaser for value.—Re WEIR & PITT'S CONTRACT (1911), 55 Sol. Jo. 536.

669. Resettlement of real estate—Conveyance of land subject to mortgages—Whether charges to be regarded as purchase-money.]—By deed of conveyance or settlement, dated May 27, 1847, between A., B. & C. A. conveyed his life interests in some estates, & his reversion in fee in others, to B. & C. subject to mtges. & other incumbrances of nearly £1,500,000, B. having before cut off the entail of a large portion of the estates of which he was tenant in tail in remainder for the purpose of raising a large part of that sum; no price or purchase-money was stipulated to be paid by B. or C. to A., but the debts of A. were to be paid off out of the rents & profits by B. & C. The comrs. were of opinion that as the estates were conveyed subject to the mtge., etc., the deed ought to be stamped with an ad valorem stamp upon the amount of those charges as if the purchase-money had been to that amount. Upon appeal:—Held: (1) the determination of the comrs. was wrong: in the clause [Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), sched., Part I., Title Conveyance] which is to define what is the consideration or purchase-money, the terms "to be paid by the purchasers" mean where it is stipulated that he is to pay it; the provision applies only to those cases where, in consideration of the conveyance of the estate, the vendee agrees to pay a certain sum to the mtgee., or other incumbrancer; where the purchaser does not bind himself to pay it, but is left to pay it or not, as he pleases, it cannot be a part of the consideration money.

(2) In the construction of revenue Acts a duty

tion of natural love & affection, transferred certain lands to his two sons as tenants in common. The land was subject to two mtges. securing the repayment of sums amounting to £5,000:—Held: the transaction was not a conveyance on sale, & ad valorem stamp duty was not payable.—BREWER v. STAMPS COMRS., [1903] S. R. Q. 143.—AUS.

670. — Valuable consideration of small amount —Substantial benefit conferred on transferees.—The life interest of E. in certain settled estates having been mortgaged by him & the mtgees. having foreclosed, an arrangement was proposed for the repurchase of E.'s life interest by means of moneys to be raised out of the fee of the settled estates. His eldest son F., the tenant in tail in remainder, being then a minor, an application was made to the ct. for the approval of a scheme for carrying out the arrangement & the resettlement of the estates. On coming of age F., with the consent of E. as protector of the settlement, executed a disentailing deed, & thereafter the indenture of resettlement was executed, under which F. received, an allowance during the joint lives of E. & himself, a right to £5,000 if he married, & a power to jointure:—Held: Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74, applied to a settlement of real estate, & though there was some valuable consideration for the deed of resettlement, such consideration could not, having regard to the terms of the latter part of Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74 (5), & to the opinion of the comrs., with which the House agreed, that the deed of resettlement conferred a substantial benefit upon the persons to whom the settled property was transferred, be deemed to be a valuable consideration within the exception contained in the former part of Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74 (5).—*BAKER v. 692. — Lease in consideration of premium.]—Deft. became the purchaser at an auction of a lot described as “the herbage of Upper Townshend’s Close, Lower Townshend’s Close, & the Priory,” at the price of £45; by the conditions of sale it was agreed that a deposit of 10 per cent. should be paid, & a bill given for the residue, & that the purchaser should be entitled to possession of the lot until Sept. 29. The contract of purchase at the foot of the conditions, signed by deft., was stamped with a £1 stamp.—Held: this was a lease of hereditaments granted in consideration of a sum of money by way of premium under £50, without any yearly rent; & therefore properly stamped with a £1 stamp.—CATTLE v. GAMBLE (1838), 5 Bing. N. C. 46; 7 Dowl. 98; 6 Scott, 733; 1 Arn. 405; 8 L. J. C. P. 162; 2 Jur. 922; 132 E. R. 1021.

697. — Agreement to let apartments.]—By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 4, in force from & after Dec. 31, 1844, & repealed by Real Property Act, 1845 (c. 106), from Oct. 1, 1845, it was enacted that no lease in writing of any freehold, copyhold, or leasehold land should be valid, unless the same should be made by deed, but that any agreement in writing to let any such lands should be valid & take effect as an agreement to execute a lease. By a document dated July 3, 1845, & purporting to be a memorandum of agreement made while that sect. was in force, H. agreed to let & B. to take certain rooms in a house from July 7, for the monthly rent of 36s. to be paid every four weeks:—Held: it was only an agreement to execute a lease, & was well admitted in evidence as such agreement, without a stamp, being of no certain value above £1 16s. Qu.: whether, since the repeal of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76, s. 4, by Real Property Act, 1845 (c. 106), such a memorandum would require a stamp of £1 15s. as a lease under Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), sched. Part I, Title Leases.—BURTON v. REEVELL (1847), 16 M. & W. 307; 16 L. J. Ex. 85; 8 L. T. O. S. 367; 11 Jur. 71.

698. Ad valorem duty on consideration—To what consideration applicable.]—Declaration in consideration that pltf. would procure A. to grant a lease to deft.; the latter promised to pay pltf. £170. The proof was, that A. having agreed to grant a lease to pltf., the latter undertook originally to assign it to deft., for the consideration mentioned; but that afterwards, a lease, to which pltf. was a party & assented, was granted immediately by A. to deft. The consideration to be paid by deft. to pltf. was not mentioned in that lease:—Held: the lease was not void on account of this omission, the ad valorem duty imposed by Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), applying only to considerations passing between lessor & lessee.—BOONE v. MITCHELL (1822), 1 B. & C. 18; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 25; 107 E. R. 8.

699. — Uncertainty of amount.]—Where the covenant in a lease, or in an agreement for a lease, runs thus:—“& that the premium for the said insurance shall be added to the rent,” this makes the rent uncertain & liable to the higher stamp duty.

Where the rental is certain, say £50 per annum, on an ordinary lease, without any uncertainty as to amount, £1 10s. would be the proper stamp; but if the wording of the covenant bears the character of uncertainty, £1 15s. will be the amount.—WATSON v. SMITH (1843), 1 L. T. O. S. 507.

lease stamp.—FITZPATRICK v. KING (1854), 6 Ir. Jur. 314.—IR.

n. Letter of renunciation.]—The tenant under a lease by which he was bound to remove at a certain term on receiving made pursuant to Tramways Act, 1870 (c. 78), the co. were to pay rent at a fixed rate per cent. on the cost of the original purchase. They were also to pay to the lessors a given sum per mile of road along which the tramways were laid, in lieu of repairing any portion of such road & maintaining the tramways, except the rails & electrical bonds laid thereon. The minimum amount payable under this clause was £900 per annum & power of distress was reserved in respect of it. They were also bound to purchase from the vendors all electrical energy required for the purpose of the tramways & to pay for the same at a given rate, the minimum sum payable in any one year being £4,000. On a case stated:—Held: (1) the £900 payable in respect of the repair of the road was rent, & ad valorem duty was payable upon it under Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 4; (2) the £4,000 payable in respect of the supply of electrical energy was not rent, but it was payable under a covenant made in further consideration for the lease, & relating to the matter of the lease within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 77 (2), & the instrument was not chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of it.—*BRITISH ELECTRIC TRACTION CO. v. The holder of a debenture in England received a circular from the London office of the new co., signed by its London agent, saying: “Your debenture will have to be sent to Chicago to be exchanged there for the new bond. I shall be pleased to forward your debenture to Chicago free of all cost to yourself if you will lodge the same at this office, taking my receipt for the same.” The debenture-holder sent his debenture to the London agent, who sent it to the officials of the new co. in America; a bond of the new co. was transmitted by them to the London agent, who delivered it to the debenture-holder in England:—Held: the bond was not “issued,” or “offered for subscription & given or delivered to a subscriber,” or “assigned or transferred,” in the United Kingdom, within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 82 (1) (b).—*CHICAGO RAILWAY TERMINAL ELEVATOR CO. v. The bonds were expressed not to be valid for any purpose unless authenticated by the certificate of the trustee. Some of the bonds were sent to England & the trustee having come to England there certified them & delivered them to the persons entitled to them:—Held: since the bonds were not marketable till they were certified, the bonds certified in England were “marketable securities” by a foreign co. which were made & issued in the United Kingdom within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 82, (1) (b) (i.), & liable to the stamp duty imposed by that Act upon such securities.—*REVELSTOKE (LORD) v. 706. ——— Bonds “offered for subscription”—Exchange of bonds under reconstruction scheme.—A scheme for the reorganisation of an American railway co. was prepared, by which it was proposed that an executive committee should be formed in America to carry out the scheme, that a new co. should be formed in America to take over the undertaking of the old co., & that the new co. should issue new bonds in order to take up the bonds of the old co. & provide further capital for the new co.

The English holders of bonds of the old co. were invited by circular to accept the scheme & to deposit their bonds with named depositaries in London, in exchange for which they would subsequently receive bonds of the proposed new co.

The scheme was carried out. The new co. executed & delivered to the appointed trustee in America the stipulated number of new bearer bonds, which were duly certified by the trustee & then handed to the executive committee. The executive committee had full power to deal with any of the new bonds, by sale, pledge, or otherwise, for the purposes of the scheme & for the uses of the new co., in its discretion & without accountability to the new co.

The new bonds in question were forwarded by the executive committee to the depositaries in London, by whom they were handed to the persons who had deposited bonds of the old co.:—Held: the new bonds given to the holders of old bonds in England were neither “issued” nor “offered for subscription” in England within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 82 (1) (b) (i), (ii).—

It was admitted that such certificate with the transfer in blank therein were by usage treated as sufficient for the purpose of effecting the sale in the stock markets of the United Kingdom of the stock referred to therein; but such stock was really transferable only in the books of the railway co. upon production of such certificate. The debenture stock was share capital of the railway co., enabling the holder to vote at the election of directors, but it was secured or preferred under a trust deed which enabled the holders of the debenture stock, if the interest on their stock was not duly paid, to take the management of the railway out of the hands of the directors, & vest it in a finance committee elected by themselves:—Held: the certificate as indorsed was a marketable security within Finance Act, 1891 (c. 9), s. 4 (1).—NOAKES v. 709. — — — Reconstruction of company—Certificate for shares in new company.]—In order to facilitate the reconstruction of a co. certificates for shares in the new co. were given to some London agents, who transferred them to the persons beneficially entitled when called upon:—Held: by the assignment of the legal title & appropriation of the shares to the several beneficial owners, these certificates were assigned or transferred within Finance Act, 1891 (c. 9), s. 4.—SPEYER BROTHERS v. 710. — “Security given in substitution for a like security”—Debenture in English company—Exchange for debenture in new colonial company.]—Applt. co., incorporated under the laws of Victoria, was formed to take over the assets & liabilities of two existing cos., one of which was a co. registered in England having an issue of debentures. The holders of these debentures by agreement delivered them up, & accepted in lieu thereof debentures of an equivalent amount issued by applt. co.:—Held: the debentures of applt. co. were not “given in substitution for a like security” within the meaning of sub-head 4 of the heading “Marketable Security” in schedule I. to Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & were therefore liable to bear stamp duty to the full amount.—MOUNT LYELL MINING & RY. 711. — Debenture of foreign company.]—An American railway co., as security for a temporary loan, handed through their agents in England to the lender an instrument which stated that for value received they promised to pay twelve months after date to the order of themselves the amount named in it. It also contained a statement that it was one of a series, & was secured by a deposit of gold bonds which, or a sufficient amount of their proceeds, were under an existing trust deed to be held in trust for the benefit of the holders of the instruments. The instruments, which had been indorsed before issue, were dealt in upon the London Stock Exchange, but were not officially quoted there:—Held: the instrument was not a mere promissory note; it contained a contract that the holder should be entitled to the benefit of the security mentioned in it; it was, therefore, a security for the money lent upon it, & it required to be stamped as a “marketable security” within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), ss. 82 (1) (b), 122.—BROWN, SHIPLEY & Co. v. 713. — Debenture charged on ships—Equitable interests.]—A co. gave legal mtges., duly registered, of three steamships to trustees for debenture-holders as a security for sums to be borrowed on the issue of debentures. The trustees also executed a debenture trust deed in the usual form. Debentures were then issued, in each of which the co. covenanted to pay the registered holder thereof the amount for which it was issued, & did “hereby charge” with the payment of such sum the three steamships:—Held: the substance of the transaction was the creation of negotiable securities, & a debenture, one of the above-mentioned issue, although incidentally it gave the holder the benefit of the registered charge under the trust deed, was not an instrument for the sale, transfer, or other disposition of any interest in any ship within the second of the “General Exemptions from all Stamp Duties” in schedule I. to Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), but was liable to duty under the head of “Marketable Security” in the same schedule. Qu: whether the second exemption has any application to an “equitable interest.”—DEDDINGTON S.S. 714. Amount of duty—Dependent on money secured—Debenture—Undertaking to repay principal moneys & premium.]—A co. issued a series of debentures of £100 each, each debenture containing an undertaking by the co., to pay to the registered holder upon a specified date “the sum of £100 together with a premium thereon at £7 10s.” The debentures were marketable securities not transferable by delivery within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), sched. 715. — — — Option to redeem at premium.]—A limited co. issued a series of debentures for £100 each redeemable at par by annual drawings on & after July 1, 1902. Each debenture contained a stipulation that the co. might, at any time after July 1, 1900, on giving six months' previous notice in writing to the registered redeem the debenture at £103 which sum, at the expiration of the six months, should become payable, as if the same were the amount of the principal moneys thereby secured:—Held: ad valorem stamp duty was chargeable on each debenture under the head of "Marketable Security" in sched. I. to Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), upon £100 only, as being the "money secured" by the debenture within the meaning of the sched. —KNIGHTS DEEP, LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1900] 1 Q. B. 217; 69 L. 716. Security by way of mortgage—Conveyance to creditors generally.—By a deed of assignment, five persons conveyed all their crops, goods & effects to trustees, in trust to sell, & with the proceeds to be produced by such sale, to discharge first, debts due to the trustees, with interest from the date of the deed; then debts due to other creditors, with a resulting trust as to the residue to the parties conveying:—Held: such deed did not require an ad valorem stamp, as upon a "conveyance" or "mtge." under Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), Sched. Part I., as the former clause operated only as to actual sales between vendor & vendee; & it fell within the exception in the latter, viz: "where such conveyance shall be made for the benefit of creditors generally" & therefore a common deed stamp was sufficient.—*COATES v. 719. — Trust deed for securing debenture stock.—A limited co. issued in 1892 £500,000 4 per cent. debenture stock, secured by a trust deed duly stamped, by which freehold & leasehold property of the co. were conveyed to trustees to secure payment of the amount of the stock & interest as provided for by the deed. By a subsequent trust deed for securing debenture stock made in 1897, the trustees of which were the same as those of the deed of 1892, after reciting that the £500,000 debenture stock was still outstanding & that the co. were intending to issue further irredeemable 3½ per cent. debenture stock, it was provided (inter alia) that the amount of stock to be issued was limited in the first instance to £300,000, the co. acknowledging in the deed that they were indebted to the trustees in that sum carrying interest at 3½ per cent. per annum; that the co. should be at liberty to issue further irredeemable 3½ per cent. debenture stock not exceeding £540,000, making a total of £840,000 but only for the purpose of redeeming or paying off the £500,000 4 per cent. stock at the rate of not more than £108 of the new stock for every £100 of the stock redeemed or paid off:—Held: in respect of the £540,000 as well as the £300,000, the deed of 1897 was chargeable with the ad valorem duty specified in sched. I. to Stamp Act, 1891, under the heading "Mortgage, Bond, Debenture, Covenant," & not being an "additional" or "substituted" security within the meaning of those words in the sched., it was chargeable with the full duty of 2s. 6d. per cent.

I am of opinion that the deed of 1897 is not a "transfer" of the deed of 1892, nor is it a security by way of further charge, & it does not therefore come within the meaning of sect. 87 (3) of the Stamp Act (A. L. SMITH, L.J.).—CITY OF LONDON BREWERY CO. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1899] 1 Q. B. 121; 68 L. J. Q. B. 62; 79 L. T. 648; 47 W. R. 216; 15 T. L. R. 49; 43 Sol. Jo. 61, C. A. Annotations:—*Reid. By further clauses of the deed certain freeholds & leaseholds were assured to the trustees to secure payment of all principal moneys, bonuses, & interest which might become payable in respect of the debenture stock, & a floating charge on all the co.'s property was created for the same purpose. There was a clause giving the co. power to withdraw any of the freeholds or leaseholds assured to the trustees & substitute other property of equal value. By a subsequent indenture a small part of the leaseholds so assured was withdrawn & other leaseholds belonging to the co. assured to the trustees to be held on the trusts of the earlier indenture. debenture principal money or interest, & no express declaration of the trusts on which the property assured was to be held:—Held: the second indenture was a "mortgage" within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 86 (1), & a "substituted security" within sched. I. & heading "Mortgage, Bond, Debenture, Covenant" of that Act, & therefore the Comrs. of Inland Revenue were right in holding that the stamp duty was to be calculated at the rate of 6d. per £100, on the whole principal money of the debenture stock.—*GARTSIDES (BROOKSIDE BREWERY), LTD. v. A receiver was appointed by the deed to receive the rents & profits so long as any money remained due to the society; but there was a provision that he was not to enter into possession of such rents & profits until default should be made in payment of the principal & interest:—Held: this instrument was chargeable with ad valorem stamp duty under the head "Mortgage, Bond, Debenture, Covenant," in sched. There was a proviso for redemption on payment of the amount of the second mtge. & interest thereon. The first mtge. had been duly stamped with the appropriate duty on the amount thereby secured:—Held: the second mtge. was liable to stamp duty in the aggregate of the two sums secured by the two mtges., the covenant contained in the second mtge. to pay the amount secured by the first mtge. being an additional covenant made with a different covenantor.—*MUTUAL PROPERTY INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. them as mtgees., by virtue of a certain other surrender, they, S., R., & P., surrendered into the hands of the lord certain lands, to the intent that the lord might regrant the same to pltf., in trust to sell the same, & retain the sum of £500. The indenture then stated, that deft. covenanted with pltf. to pay him the sum of £500, with interest, on a certain day, & that, in default of payment, pltf. might enter upon & enjoy the land. The indenture was stamped with two stamps, of £1 15s. & £1 5s.:—Held: this was not "a declaration or deed for defeating or making redeemable or qualifying any covenant, etc., intended as a security for money," within the meaning of that clause in Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184), sched., Part. I., "Mortgage," but a mere declaration of trust of the second surrender; & it did not require an ad valorem stamp.—HAYWOOD v. BIBBY (1843), 1 Dow. & L. 290; 11 M. & W. 812; 12 L. J. Ex. 404; 1 L. It appears from the paper that the acknowledgments were made at successive times upon the payment of the money; & therefore, under the general words used in the Act of Parliament they require to have been stamped. This being rejected, deft. gave in evidence a memorandum on the back of the same paper, written and signed by pltf. as follows:—"Balanced up to this day, as per cash-book. 748. — Entries in account book initialled as paid—Marked as "received."—A solr. was employed by a bank under an agreement whereby he was appointed an officer of the bank upon the terms that he was to be paid a salary, & to be provided with an office, stationery, & staff of clerks, & was to devote his whole time to the conduct of the legal business of the bank. The solr. from time to time sued for & recovered sums of money due to the bank. As each sum was recovered he entered the amount in an account book, & then in accordance with his duty handed over the money to the secretary or cashier of the bank, who wrote against the entry in the account book his initials & the date on which the money was handed over to him, in some instances adding the word "received." The account book was the property of the solr. & remained in his possession:—Held: as the initialling of the entries in the account book, whether with the addition of the word "received" or not, was intended as an acquittance of the solr. in respect of the money handed over by him, the entries so initialled constituted "receipts" within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 101, & required to be stamped, none the less because the solr. was a servant of the bank on whose behalf he had received the money, & the acknowledgment of the receipt of the money from him was given by a fellow servant.—A.-G. v. See Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11.

769. Incidence of duty—“All real & personal property”—Not restricted to property escaping legacy or succession duty.]—The language in the recital to Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11, must be read in contradistinction to the language in the enacting part of the sect., which did not refer, as the recital did, to “certain property which escapes liability to probate, legacy, or succession duties,” but included “all real & personal property belonging to or vested in the corpn. during any of the yearly periods.”—A.-G. v. CITY OF LONDON CORPN., [1913] 1 K. B. 201; 82 L. J. K. B. 144; 108 L. T. 250; 29 T. L. R. 126; on appeal, [1913] 2 K. B. 497.

770. —“Property vested in body corporate or unincorporate”—Debenture stock issued by corporation—Income from sinking fund invested in name of trustees—Permanent trust.]—A corpn. issued debenture stock redeemable at their option at the end of thirty years or in any event at the end of sixty years. The corpn. covenanted with trustees for the debenture stockholders to set aside every half year a sum of £7,500, so long as the stock remained unredeemed, & to invest these half-yearly sums in such investments as the corpn. should think fit, the income thereof to be accumulated by similarly investing the same & the income thereof from time to time. The fund so created was to be applied by the corpn. in or towards the redemption of the debenture stock as & when it became redeemable. Accordingly the corpn. set aside these half-yearly sums, which were regularly invested in the purchase of stock in the names of the trustees; & the interest on these funds was similarly invested from time to time in the names of the trustees:—Held: the equity of redemption in the sinking fund subject to the charge in favour of the debenture stockholders belonged to the corpn., & the income thereof ought to be brought into account for the purpose of assessing corpn. duty under Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11, the amount expended by the corpn. in paying the interest on the debenture stock being brought in by way of deduction on the other side of the account.—*A.-G. v. 771. Assessment of duty—On “annual value income & profits”—Gate money & receipts of cricket club.]—The Surrey County Cricket Club, an unincorporated body of persons, were possessed of real & personal property, the real property consisting of a building & land in the metropolis held under a lease for years & used by them for the purposes of a cricket club. Their receipts included large sums in respect of gate money & other payments received from persons admitted to view the cricket matches played on the ground. The club was carried on at a profit:—Held: the gate money & other payments received from the public were not “annual value, income, or profits of the property” within Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11; the annual value of the real property should be arrived at in the same way as upon an assessment of annual value made for the purposes of the property tax under Income Tax Act, 1853 (c. 34), Sched. A., & the club were entitled to include the estimated cost of repairs as a permissible deduction from that annual value.—Re SURREY COUNTY CRICKET CLUB, [1901] 2 K. B. 400; 70 L. J. K. B. 823; 85 L. 772. Deduction from duty—“Necessary outgoings incurred for management”—Deduction for capital expenditure—Rebuilding & improvement of site.]—The corpn. of the City of London were rightly assessed to corpn. duty in respect of income derived from the shops round the Royal Exchange.

There remains the question whether the corpn. are entitled under the operative part of Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11, to deduct from the surplus rents their expenditure in rebuilding & improving the site. The tax is imposed upon the annual value, income, or profits of the property accrued to the body corporate within the year, “after deducting therefrom all necessary outgoings, including the receiver’s remuneration, & costs, charges, & expenses properly incurred in the management of such property.” The outgoings here mentioned are plainly yearly outgoings. Past capital expenditure could not be deducted. The deductions claimed here were deductions on past capital account (CHITTY, J.).—Re DUTY ON

773. Property appropriated for charitable purposes—Trade institution for distressed members—Mutual benefit society.]—The Linen & Woollen Drapers, etc. Institution was founded in 1832, by leading members of the several trades concerned, with the object & purpose of making provision for sick, infirm, & decayed members of the trades & their widows & children. A body of rules for the government of the institution was then framed, under which it has ever since been carried on, by which rules any person of three years' standing in any of the trades, residing within 12 miles of the General Post Office, may, on payment of the life or annual subscription therein-mentioned, be elected a member. The rules also prescribe the terms & conditions under which relief & other pecuniary benefits are afforded to members or their families, either by payment of a lump sum, a weekly allowance during sickness or other necessity, or the grant of a life annuity. Medical advice & medicine are also provided free of charge to members or their families requiring same; all relief being confined to members, & no member being entitled as of right to assistance, the board of directors having absolute discretion in every case to grant or refuse same, & in no case can a member receive assistance unless in necessitous circumstances. The property of the institution consists of the accumulated subscriptions of members, & of considerable sums from time to time contributed as donations by benevolent persons other than members, but chiefly belonging to the trades concerned, & the cash value of the institution's invested funds amounted on Dec. 31, 1885, to £50,511 1s. 9d., the annual income whereof, amounting to £1,670 after necessary outgoings, costs, & expenses in the management of the property, is "legally appropriated & applied for charitable purposes" connected with the institution; but no precise or accurate calculations had been made, showing how much of such invested funds was derived from members' subscriptions, & how much from voluntary contributions & bequests within the thirty years immediately preceding. The Comrs. of Inland Revenue assessed the institution in £1,482 12s. 4d. & charged same with £74 3s. 7d. duty, under Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11:—Held: (1) the institution was not a charitable institution, but was in the nature of a mutual benefit society, the benefits afforded by which to the members could not be looked upon as charity, but were what the members were entitled to as of right, in return for their subscriptions, & the portion of the funds derived from such subscriptions was not exempt from duty under Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11 (3); & (2) the other portions of the funds, derived from voluntary contributions within the specified period of thirty years, & from property acquired within the same period on which legacy duty had been paid were, if the amounts thereof could be ascertained, exempt from duty under Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11 (6), (7).—Re LINEN & WOOLLEN

774. — Trust for freemen inhabitants of city.]—By a private inclosure Act in 1763, certain spaces of C. Common were allotted to the corpns. of York, in trust for the freemen inhabitants of B. ward in that city, as compensation for previous rights of common. In 1832, by agreement with the lord of the manor, the fourth part of the adjoining common of H., afterwards called the "Intack," was conveyed in fee to the mayor of York, in satisfaction of the common rights of the freemen inhabitants of B. ward. The allotments of C. Common & the "Intack" had ever since been enjoyed by the freemen inhabitants of B. ward, & were under the control of pasture masters, who, after paying the expenses of management, applied the profits of the whole to the benefit of poor freemen, & also for some years past for the benefit of their widows:—Held: (1) the profits of the allotments which were applied under the Act of 1763 were exempt from corporation duty under Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11 (2); but the profits of the "Intack," not being appropriated & applied under any Act of Parliament, were not exempt under Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11 (2), (2) the profits of the "Intack" were not within the exemption in Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1885 (c. 51), s. 11 (2), as profits appropriated & applied "for any charitable purpose."—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. By the rules of the club every member on admission paid an entrance fee & the annual subscriptions for the current year, & until payment was not admitted to any of the benefits or privileges of the club, & payment was considered as a declaration of submission to the rules; an annual subscription was payable on Jan. 1 in each year, & if it was not paid on or before Mar. 1, the member's name was erased from the list of members, & a member intending to withdraw from the club had to give notice on or before Jan. 1, or otherwise was liable to pay his subscription for the current year:—Held: as the entrance fees & subscriptions were paid by members in consideration of the right to enjoy the benefits & privileges of the club, they were not "funds

784. Admission by means of subscription.—Dinner & concert at anniversary festival.—A charity consisted of a school where sons of Freemasons could be educated at the charge of funds contributed or collected by stewards who were Freemasons, & to assist in the raising of the funds there was held annually a festival consisting of a dinner followed by a concert. At the festival the amount of donations & subscriptions which had been procured was announced by the stewards. The sum so collected was devoted exclusively to the funds of the charity & for that reason the expenses of the festival were borne by the stewards & persons participating in it. Stewards not attending the festival contributed the sum of one guinea & no question arose with regard to that contribution. But stewards & other persons attending the festival, 962 in number, contributed a further guinea each, & in respect of the guineas so paid the Crown claimed entertainments duty under Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), s. 1 (1). It was conceded by the Crown that the dinner apart from the concert was not an entertainment within Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11). The cost of the dinner including establishment charges attributable in some degree to the concert as well as the dinner, was upwards of £1,000. Certain considerable items for printing & expenses generally also had to be apportioned between various parts of the festival, including the dinner & concert. The cost of the music at the concert was approximately £30. After a point in the after dinner proceedings the concert was held in a room or hall different from the dining hall where the speeches were continued concurrently with the progress of the concert. All attending the dinner had the right of admission to the concert, but might please themselves whether they preferred the music or speeches or a selection of each. The dinner was the main part of the proceedings the concert being a subsidiary & separate, but at the same time important part:—Held: the concert must be regarded as an essential part of the festival & as a part separate & distinct from the dinner, & the expenditure upon the concert could not be looked upon as negligible, as the guinea was a lump sum paid in the expectation that it would secure admission to a concert & it did in fact secure such admission, entertainments duty was payable, it being for the comrs. to determine under Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), s. 1 (4), what portion of the lump sum represented the right of admission to the concert.—*A.-G. v. Members paid an annual subscription which gave them, among other privileges, that of admission as spectators. The matches were admitted to be “entertainment”:—Held: although the members might be joint owners of the club property, it was still a question of fact whether the payments of subscriptions or any part thereof were made for the purpose of securing “admission to any entertainment” within Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), s. 1 (1).

On certain dates in 1917 they inserted advertisements in newspapers of music played in the various rooms of the restaurant during meals. The rooms in which meals were served were open about twelve hours on weekdays & seven hours on Sundays. The time during which music was provided was about six hours on weekdays & four & a half hours on Sundays. Varying charges were made for the meals, but no difference was made between the times, when music was being played & when it was not. There was also a tea room open daily in which music was performed during a part of the time. A fixed price was charged for the tea whether it was served during the performance of the music or not. No person was admitted to the rooms unless he or she intended to partake of a meal or of tea, as the case might be. 788. Music on pier—Chairs in band hall.—An inspector of the Brighton police force who was also appointed to look after entertainments duty visited the Palace Pier Band Hall, a structure on the pier. He went into the building & took a seat, for which he paid 2d. & received a ticket. The bandstand is in the centre & the seats are in series fixed together & screwed to the floor & they are so arranged that all the persons occupying them face the band. The sides are glass folding panels which are all connected & fold up concertina-like. The central eastern side was open when he entered & shortly afterwards the folding glass panels of the side were drawn & curtains were drawn all around the building so that it would be in utter darkness from the outside. When the building is closed in this way it becomes a closed building & is for all practical purposes a closed building with a sitting audience. There was no convenience whatever for persons to stand within the band hall, & if they did so they would cause obstruction to the gangways. If the public stand in the gangways they are required to leave. A programme of music was gone through by the band. The structure has a zinc roof & the chairs under it are fixed tip-up chairs. There are hundreds of unfixed chairs on other parts of the pier, the majority being in the vicinity of the bandstand. The unfixed chairs are marked "This chair must not be moved to any other part of the pier." A person occupying a chair on any part of the pier can move to another part of the pier & sit in a chair where he can hear the band & no further payment is required. There are no free seats under the structure nor outside in the immediate vicinity of the bandstand. At all times the seats under the structure can be used by the public on payment of 2d.

Upon an information before justices against applt., the proprietor of the entertainment, charging that the inspector was admitted to the entertainment contrary to Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), s. 1, applt. did not dispute that if, in the circumstances, there had been payment for admission to a place of entertainment where the payment was subject to entertainments duty, he had committed an offence. The justices convicted applt., finding that on the facts there had been admission to an entertainment within Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11) :—Held : there was evidence upon which the justices could so find.—CORDINER v. STOCKHAM, [1920] 1 K. B. 104 ; 89 L. J. K. B. 21 ; 121 L. T. 664 ; 83 J. P. 246 ; 35 T. L. R. 689 ; 17 L. G. R. 654 ; 26 Cox, C. C. 517, D. C.

789. "Admission"—Admission to one part & subsequent transfer to another—Liability of employer for act of attendant—Acting beyond scope of authority.]—Applts. were the proprietors of an entertainment which was subject to entertainments duty. An officer of customs & excise visited the premises, paid for admission, & received a ticket properly stamped, & was duly admitted. He then asked an attendant for a transfer to a dearer seat & handed her the difference, & she handed to him a portion of a dearer ticket which had been previously used, no entertainments duty being paid on the transfer, but there was no proof that applts. or their manager had any knowledge of these matters or that the attendant had any duty or authority to take money or hand out tickets, or that she was anything more than a mere attendant employed to show people to their seats. Applts. were convicted of an offence against Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), s. 1.

On appeal, quarter sessions found that the attendant was employed generally in that capacity & to show persons to their seats, but that there was no proof that she was acting within the scope of her employment in transferring persons from one part of the entertainment to another or that she handed the extra money to applts. or obtained a transfer ticket from them. Quarter sessions held that applts. were not guilty, but stated a case :—Held : as the attendant was not acting within the scope of her authority the decision of quarter sessions was right.—*STAR CINEMA (SHEPHERD'S BUSH), LTD. v. 790. Procession—Window sub-let to view—"Place of entertainment."—In 1922 there was held at Preston a celebration of the local guild merchant, & during a particular week several processions passed through certain streets of the town. Resp., who was the occupier of premises in one of these streets, sublet to a spectator for the week a window which commanded a view of that street along with the use of a room for a payment of £5 as rent. On that payment no entertainments duty was paid under Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11). The spectator was present in the room on one of the days of the week while a certain procession was passing the premises. It was admitted that the procession was an "entertainment" within Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11). An information was laid against resp. under Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), s. 1 (2), charging that on the day above referred to the spectator was admitted for payment to a place of entertainment otherwise than in compliance with Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), & that resp. was the proprietor of the entertainment :—Held : the window & room were a "place of entertainment" within Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), s. 1 (2) ; resp. was the "proprietor" of the entertainment within Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), s. 1 (2), as extended by Finance Act, 1922 (c. 17), s. 11, & entertainments duty was payable.—*GIBSON v. It appeared at the trial, that a practice had prevailed at the custom house of allowing the owners of imported goods to take them away without payment of duty at the time, an entry of them having been previously made in a book kept by the officers; & that the fraud complained of had been effected by a clerk of deft.'s removing some of the leaves from the custom house book, & substituting others containing false entries of the quantity of goods imported. There was no direct proof that this fact was known to deft., but he derived benefit from the fraudulent transaction:—Held: under these circumstances, the jury might infer that deft. was privy to the fraud.—R. v. 829. To what subject-matter lien attaches—General rule.]—The lien of the Crown for duties in arrears attaches on the subject-matter in respect of which they are made to arise by the statutes imposing them, although process do not issue till after assignment of it, as part of the estate of the Crown debtor, to the provisional assignee, under the statutes of bkpcy., upon the construction of 3 Geo. 4, c. 95, s. 10. Semble: the lien is divisible, & confined to the several specific matters in respect of which the various several sums of the duties have accrued; & the whole is not liable generally to the satisfaction of the duties arising on each several part.—R. v. DALE (1824), 13 Price, 739; 147 E. R. 1139.

830. —.]—If a soap maker, having incurred a forfeiture for concealing soap contrary to 1 Geo. 1, c. 36, s. 2, become bkpt., & a provisional assignment of his estate be made, after which the soap is condemned & the bkpt. convicted, & thereupon a warrant issues to levy the penalty on his goods generally, such a warrant is bad, & cannot justify a seizure of the soap in the hands of the assignees.

If no bkpcy. had intervened in this case, this warrant could not have been supported, because it directs a seizure of the goods of D. generally, whereas the excise laws only give a lien on those goods that are liable to the duties, & the materials & utensils for making the same (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—*AUSTIN v. Priority of Crown lien—Goods in hands of factor.—A writ of extent having issued against A., a malster, for a debt due to the Crown from him for duties on malt, a cargo of malt was seized under it, in the hands of deft. Deft. being allowed to plead to the extent, in order to state his interest in the goods, alleged by his plea that the malt in question, after being manufactured, had had the duty charged upon it, & that such duty was paid; that it was then deposited by A., the maker, with deft., upon a contract with him, that he was to accept certain bills of exchange drawn by A., & that the malt was to be held by him as a pledge for the payment of them, & in case the bills were not paid, he was then to be at liberty to sell the malt; that the bills first accepted were renewed, but before the renewed bills became due the malt was seized:—Held: the malt was seizable in the hands of deft., under 28 Geo. 3, c. 37, s. 21, as goods in the custody or possession of a person in trust for the maker, chargeable with duties of excise in arrear & owing from such maker, such goods having been, whilst in the hands of A., liable not only for the specific duties chargeable upon them, which had been paid, but for other duties for which A. was responsible at that time, & remaining so at the time of the seizure.

Qu.: whether goods chargeable with excise duties under Excise Management Act, 1826 (c. 53), s. 28, deposited with a person as a pledge for acceptances given by him to the maker, before the passing of Excise Management Act, 1841 (c. 20), by which the sect. of the former Act imposing the duties was repealed, & similar duties imposed, were liable, since the passing of that Act, to be seized in the hands of the pledgee.—A.-G. v. TRUEMAN (1843), 11 M. & W. 694; 13 L. J. Ex. 70; 8 J. P. 443; 152 E. R. 983.

835. — Sale by factor—Recovery of proceeds by Crown.—A., a maltster, had consigned large quantities of malt to W., a factor, for sale, on which W. made advances to him. While the malt was in W.'s hands, A. failed, being largely indebted to the Crown for malt duties, & an inquisition & extent issued against him, under which the malt in W.'s hands was seized by the sheriff. W. having petitioned the Board of Excise that his lien might be allowed, the solr. of Excise wrote to the collector for the district, stating, that the Board had ordered that W.'s claim as found on the inquisition, should be allowed; that he should communicate this to W. & the sheriff; that he was to satisfy himself as to the correctness of the amount of the lien by examination of the documents; & that, if all the parties interested consented to an immediate sale of the malt, the undersheriff might at once cause it to be sold, in the mode most likely to realise the best price, either by auction, or by allowing W. to dispose of it in the market. In pursuance of this letter, W., by consent of all parties, sold the malt & received the proceeds. While they were in his hands, the Board of Excise communicated to him, that, until the result of a case submitted to the law officers of the Crown, no steps must be taken respecting the sale of the malt, or the appropriation of the proceeds. W., however, on the following day, paid over to the sheriff, for the use of the Crown, the balance only of the proceeds, after retaining the amount of his own lien:—Held: W. had no authority from the Board of Excise to appropriate any part of the proceeds to the satisfaction of his own lien, until after the amount of it had been ascertained by the collector; & he was liable for the amount to the Crown in an information for money had & received.—*A.-G. v. 836. Jurisdiction of Treasury Commissioners—To decide right to pension.—Under the provisions of Superannuation Act, 1859 (c. 26), the question whether or not a pension shall be granted to a public servant is to be decided by the Comrs. of the Treasury; & until they have decided to grant a pension no public servant can maintain an action in respect thereof. Pltf., a public servant, who had formerly held the office of clerk of the patents, but to whom no pension had ever been granted, brought an action against A.-G., claiming a pension in respect of such office, & to have an account taken of all moneys due to him in respect thereof. All matters of account between pltf. & the Crown had been finally settled, by the award of the arbitrators, in the year 1869:—Held: the action must be stayed, as being frivolous & vexatious, & an abuse of the process of the ct.—*EDMUNDS v. 840. To apportion allowance.]—At the time of the coming into operation of Prisons Act, 1877 (c. 21), C. was the governor of a prison which had been under the control of the justices of M. as the local authority, but by the Act it was transferred to the Secretary of State for the Home Department. Shortly afterwards C., who was not incapacitated in any way, resigned his appointment in order to facilitate some improvements in the organisation of the prison, & the Comrs. of the Treasury granted him an annuity pursuant to sect. 36, & apportioned it, in accordance with that sect., between the county rates of M. & moneys to be provided by Parliament. No special minute within Superannuation Act, 1859 (c. 26), s. 7, was made or laid before Parliament with reference to C. or his office:—Held: (1) the Comrs. had power to apportion the annuity as they had done; (2) the provisions of the Act of 1859 as to a special minute were directory only, & not a condition precedent to the granting of an annuity such as that in question.—*MIDDLESEX JJ. v. SECT. 2.—NATIONAL DEBT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

842. Effect of conversion of stock—National Debt (Conversion) Act, 1888 (c. 2), s. 25 (2).]—Pltfs., by a deed executed in 1871, created a perpetual rentcharge of £10,000 a year, for the benefit of first debt. The deed provided that pltfs. should be entitled at any time to redeem the rentcharge by transferring to the trustees thereof a specified amount of "3 per cent Annuities." In 1888 above Act was passed:—Held: by sect. 25 (2) of that Act, pltfs. were entitled to redeem the rentcharge by transferring to the trustees the specified amount of 2½ per cent. stock created under the Act.

In the two instruments, the deeds of 1871 & 1880, which operate together, there is a reference to stocks, 3 per cent. Annuities & Bank Annuities, which were liable to be converted or exchanged in pursuance of the Act. That conversion or exchange has since taken place, & that being so, sect. 25 (2) says that the reference in those instruments to 3 per cent. Annuities or Bank Annuities is to be construed as a reference to the new stock created by the Act of 1888. I cannot see any reasonable ground for holding that that is not the effect of the words. It is contended that reference to a "stock liable to be converted or exchanged" means a reference to some particular sum of stock liable to be converted or exchanged. That would be giving a totally different meaning to the Act, & would, as it seems to me, be introducing something which is not to be found in the sect., & which would not be intelligible when it was inserted. I cannot understand why a different rule should be adopted when a particular sum is mentioned from that which is to prevail when a particular sum is not mentioned (NORTH, J.).—*NORTHUMBERLAND (DUKE) v. 847. Right to retransfer—Stock standing in joint names of transferor & transferee—Transfer not by way of advancement.]—A. transferred a sum of stock into the joint names of himself & wife & child, without however declaring any trust thereof, & for nine years regularly received the dividends thereof, & applied them to his own use. He then filed his bill for a retransfer by the Bank to himself. Retransfer ordered upon motion for decree, founded upon pltf.'s own affidavit, stating that the transfer of the stock into the joint names had not been intended by him as an advancement.—*DEVROY v. On bill filed by E., the ct. declared that the three infant children were trustees jointly with pltf., in trust for pltf., & that pltf. was absolutely entitled to the fund.—STONE v. STONE (1857), 3 Jur. N. S. 708.

849. — — — No intention to make transferee trustee.]—Pltf. a widow in the year 1880, caused £6,000 Consols to be transferred into the joint names of herself & deft. who was her godson. She did so with the express intention that deft. in the event of his surviving her, should have the Consols for his own benefit, but that she should have the dividends during her life; & she had previously been warned that if she made the transfer she could not revoke it. The first notice deft. had of the transaction was a letter from pltf.'s solrs. about the end of 1882 claiming to have the fund retransferred to pltf.:—Held: (1) the legal title of deft. as a joint tenant of the stock was complete, although he had not assented to the transfer, until he was requested to join in retransferring the stock, for the legal title of a transferee of stock is complete without acceptance; (2) pltf. could not claim a retransfer on equitable grounds, the evidence clearly showing that she did not when she made the transfer, intend to make deft. a mere trustee for her as to the dividends, therefore pltf. was not entitled to have the stock retransferred to her.

(3) A transfer of property to a person without his knowledge, if made in proper form, vests the property in him at once, subject to his right to repudiate it when informed of the transfer.—STANDING v. BOWRING (1885), 31 Ch. D. 282; 55 L. J. Ch. 218; 54 L. T. 191; 34 W. R. 204; 2 T. L. R. 202, C. A.

850. Injunction to restrain transfer—Undertaking as to damages—Application by married woman.]—An application was made on behalf of a married woman for an injunction restraining the Bank of England, until further order, from permitting the transfer of a sum of New 3 per cent. Annuities, standing in the names of the exors. of testator, & to which the married woman claimed to be beneficially entitled. An injunction was granted for a fortnight on the usual undertaking of the married woman to be answerable in damages. The registrar refused to draw up the order on the sole undertaking of the married woman as to damages:—Held: the sole undertaking of the married woman must be accepted.—Re PRYNNE (1885), 53 L. 851. Transfer by operation of statute—Stock vested in dissolved school board—Right of individual members to transfer.]—Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844 (c. 101), which empowers parishes & poor law unions to combine into school districts, by sect. 45 incorporates the boards of management for such school districts, & not the school district itself. When a school district has been dissolved by the Local Government Board under Dissolved Boards of Management & Guardians Act, 1870 (c. 2), sect. 12 of that Act does not automatically vest in the members constituting the board of management the property of the school district which has been dissolved, but such property remains vested in the district board. Consols vested in the board of management of a dissolved school district are therefore not transferable by the individual members constituting the board until some further act has taken place vesting the right to transfer in them.—MORTON v. BANK OF ENGLAND, [1904] 1 Ch. 664; 73 L. J. Ch. 503; 90 L. T. 375; 68 J. P. 268; 52 W. R. 393; 20 T. L. R. 230; 2 L. G. R. 734.

The Act came into operation in that district on Jan. 1, 1904, which was the "appointed day," & at that time these annuities stood in the books of the Bank of England in the name of the Oldham School Board. Pltfs. claimed that on the appointed day the school board had ceased to exist, that the £780 0s. 2d. had then become vested in them by virtue of the Act, & that no further transfer was necessary. The bank contended that the Annuities could only be transferred by an entry in their books, that the Oldham School Board had not been dissolved, that the Annuities must be transferred by them to pltfs., & that the Annuities had not been vested in pltfs. by virtue of the Act:—Held: by above Act, s. 2, the school board had for all purposes ceased to exist on the appointed day; by above sched. to the Act the Annuities had on that day vested in pltfs. by virtue of the Act; & no further transfer was necessary.—OLDHAM CORPN. v. SUB-SECT. 3.—RETRANSFER OF UNCLAIMED DIVIDENDS AND STOCK.

A. In General.

See National Debt Act, 1870 (c. 71), s. 55.

853. Jurisdiction of court.—The jurisdiction given to the ct. by National Debt Act, 1870 (c. 71), s. 55, to decide upon petition as to the validity of a claim for the retransfer of stock, which has been transferred to the National Debt Comrs. under the provisions of sect. 51, is to be exercised in the mode in which the ordinary jurisdiction of the ct. is exercised. Therefore, if a petition for the retransfer of stock is heard on its merits, & is dismissed on the ground that petitioner has failed to make out his title, he cannot, on the subsequent discovery of fresh evidence in support of his title, present a fresh petition for the same object, without leave of the ct. previously obtained.—Re MAY (1885), 28 Ch. 854. Form of proceedings—Petition—In first instance.—(1) To a suit by three out of four residuary legatees, to recover three-fourths of a sum of stock which the exors. had omitted to get in, & which had been transferred to the Comrs. for the Reduction of the National Debt, under 56 Geo. 3, c. 60, the legatee entitled to the other fourth part of the stock is a necessary party.

(2) The proper form of proceeding to recover stock & dividends, unclaimed for ten years, & carried over to the account of the Comrs. for the Reduction of the National Debt, under 56 Geo. 3, c. 60, is, by petition to be served upon the A.-G. & the Comrs., & not by bill in the first instance;

& if there be conflicting claims to the fund, the ct. will then give directions for the trial of the rights of the parties between themselves, either by suit or otherwise.—HUNT v. PEACOCK (1848), 6 Hare, 361; 17 L. J. Ch. 163; 12 L. T. O. S. 5; 12 Jur. 154; 67 E. R. 1205.

857. — Claim by beneficial owner—Whether legal owner necessary party.—Stock standing in the name of a deceased trustee having been transferred to the Comrs. for the Reduction of the National Debt, a person claiming to be the legal personal representative of the beneficial owner petitioned for a retransfer:—Held: (1) an inquiry, who was entitled, could not be directed in the absence of the personal representative of the trustee; (2) claimant who establishes his claim has no title to any accumulations arising from the investment of the dividends, his right being to have the stock retransferred & the amount of unpaid dividends paid to him in cash, without interest.—Re ASHMEAD'S TRUSTS (1872), 8 Ch. App. 113; 42 L. J. Ch. 314; 28 L. T. 1; 21 W. R. 65, L. J.

858. — Claim by survivor of two executors—Necessity for concurrence of beneficiaries.—A legacy to an infant was invested in stock in the names of two exors., & the dividends not having been claimed for ten years, the stock was transferred to the Comrs. for the Reduction of the National Debt. One of the exors. having died, the survivor presented a petition for retransfer of the stock. The ct., without requiring the concurrence of the beneficiaries, made an order directing the stock to be transferred to petitioner, & that he should thereout pay the costs of the A.-G. & the Comrs.—Re ACKLAND'S TRUSTS (1872), 26 L. T. 418.

859. — Position of Attorney-General.—Upon a petition for the retransfer of stock, under 56 Geo. 3, c. 60, service on the Comrs. & also on the A.-G. is required by the Act. The ct. will presume at the hearing of the petition, that the A.-G. represents not only the Comrs. & the Crown as parens patriæ, but also the Crown in its beneficial capacity.—LAWRENCE v. MAULE (1859), 4 Drew. 472; 28 L. J. Ch. 681; 34 L. T. O. S. 3; 7 W. R. 314; 62 E. R. 182.

862. To whom transfer ordered—Person making out legal title.—When stock has been transferred to the Comrs. for the Reduction of the National Debt, in consequence of the dividends upon it not having been claimed for ten years, it is not a matter of course to order it to be retransferred to a person who subsequently makes out a legal title, upon which a transfer of the stock would have been made to him if the ten years had not elapsed.

Thus, where stock had stood in the joint names of two persons, of whom one had survived the other upwards of ten years, but had not, during that time, claimed any dividends, the ct. would not, upon the petition of the widow & personal representative of the survivor, order the stock to be transferred into her name, or into the names of the two deceased persons; but directed the master to inquire who was entitled to the stock, with liberty to state special circumstances.—Ex p. RAM (1837), 3 My. & Cr. 25; 1 Jur. 668; 40 E. R. 833, L. C.

869. Title in dispute.—Certain stock standing in the name of bkpt., the dividends of which had not been claimed, was, under 56 Geo. 3, c. 60, transferred to the Comrs. for the reduction of the National Debt. The assignee of the bankrupt, by petition under the Act, claimed the stock as part of bkpt.'s effects. Another person, by petition, claimed the stock, insisting that bkpt. was a trustee for him. A reference was directed to the master to ascertain whose stock it was, & in the meantime, the stock was directed to be transferred into the name of the Accountant-General.—Ex p. GILLET, *Ex p. In consequence of no dividends having been received since 1838, the stock had been transferred into the names of the Comrs. for reducing the National Debt. Part I.—The Royal Navy.

SECT. 1.—THE KING'S SHIPS.

See Merchant Shipping Act, 1906 (c. 48), s. 80 ; Statutory Rules & Orders, 1911, p. 238 ; 1917, No. 1074.

1. What are King's ships—Whether Crown can declare by Order in Council.—A German steamship, seized as prize in a British port on the outbreak of war, was ordered, under a decree of the Prize Ct., to be detained until the conclusion of peace or further order. She was subsequently requisitioned by the Admty. & delivered to the Lords Comrs. of the Admty. in accordance with the Prize Ct. Rules. While in the service of the Admty. she rendered salvage services:—Held: she was a ship belonging to His Majesty within Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 557, & the Admty. were therefore precluded from claiming salvage.

Orders in Council of Mar. 22, 1911, Sept. 29, 1917, & June 4, 1918, promulgated under Merchant Shipping Act, 1906 (c. 48), s. 80, provided respectively that Govt. ships in the service of the Admty. should be included, & that Govt. ships in the service of the Shipping Controller & of the War Office should be excluded, from the category of "ships belonging to His Majesty" within Merchant Shipping Act, 1906 (c. 48), s. 557:—Held: Merchant Shipping Act, 1906 (c. 48), s. 80, does not give any authority to the Crown by Order in Council to declare what class of ship is or is not within the category of the ships dealt with in Merchant Shipping Act, 1906 (c. 48), s. 557.—THE MATRI, [1918] P. 314 ; 87 L. J. P. 179 ; 34 T. L. R. 582 ; 62 Sol. Jo. 730.

2. — Revenue cutters.—Revenue cutters entitled to salvage on recapture, as private ships of war.—THE HELEN (1801), 3 Ch. Rob. 224 ; 1 Eng. Pr. Cas. 299 ; 165 E. R. 444.

3. — Store ships.—A store ship recapturing British property from the enemy, is entitled to an eighth only for salvage.

These store ships . . . are armed at the public expense, are commanded by commissioned officers, are rated as ships of war, & bearing that character, are entitled to make captures on their own account, their primary business is the conveyance of stores, but they are not prohibited from taking prizes. I must consider them as forming part of the military establishment of the country (SIR WILLIAM SCOTT).—THE SEDULOUS (1813), 1 Dodds. 253 ; 165 E. R. 1302.

4. — Transport under charter to the Admiralty.—The captain of a Queen's ship lying at anchor in a foreign port received intelligence that an English steamer was outside the port disabled, & in a position of great danger, & communicated with the master of a screw steamer which was under charter to the Lords of the Admty. as a transport, & was then coaling in the port. In consequence of this communication the transport, after taking on board one officer & a party of petty officers & seamen from the Queen's ship, proceeded to the disabled vessel & succeeded in placing her in safety. As salvage remuneration for the services so rendered a sum of £1,000 was tendered & accepted in a cause of salvage instituted on behalf of the owners, master, & crew of the transport, & the captain, officers, & crew of the Queen's ship. On an application to apportion this sum:—Held: The ct. awarded £400 to the owners, master, & crew of the transport, £400 to the captain of the Queen's ship & the party of petty officers & seamen who went on board the transport, & £200 to the officer who accompanied them.—THE NILE (1875), L. R. 4 A. & E. 449 ; 44 L. J. Adm. 38 ; 33 L. T. 66 ; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 11.

Annotations:—Fold. The Bertie (1886), 55 L. T. 520. Consd. The Sarpen, [1916] P. 306.

5. — — — Ship belonging to Govt. as a transport.—The owners, master & crew of a steamship chartered to Govt. as a transport under the ordinary form of Govt. charter incorporating the transport regulations, by which it is provided that "when necessary steam transports will be required to tow other vessels," are entitled to recover for salvage services rendered to a ship & her freight even though the services be rendered with the assistance of a naval officer & naval seamen & the salvaged vessel be laden (inter alia) with Govt. stores.—THE BERTIE (1886), 55 L. T. 520 ; 2 T. L. R. 690 ; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 20.

Annotation:—Refd. The Sarpen, [1916] P. 306.

6. — Ship belonging to Bombay Government—Hired commander & crew.—(1) The commander & crew of a Queen's ship have the same rights to remuneration for salvage as the master & crew of a merchant ship.

(2) Qu.: whether they can make with the captain of the wrecked ship an agreement as to the amount.

(3) The commander of a Queen's ship, sent to render help to a wrecked ship, cannot impose terms & refuse to give salvage services unless those terms are accepted.

(4) A ship belonging to the Bombay Govt. with a hired commander & crew is, with respect to 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 484, in the same position as a Queen's ship with commissioned officers.—THE WOOSUNG (CARGO EX) (1876), 1 P. D. 260 ; 35 L. T. 8 ; 25 W. R. 1 ; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 239, C. A.

7. — Vessel owned by Government—Harbour tug.—Under Harbours & Passing Tolls Act, 1861 (c. 47), the Harbour of Ramsgate & the property & powers of its trustees were transferred to the Board of Trade. In a suit for salvage remuneration for services rendered by a vessel belonging to the harbour & vested in the Board of Trade under Harbours & Passing Tolls Act, 1861 (c. 47):—Held: the vessel was not a ship belonging to her Majesty within 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, ss. 484, 485 ; & the Board of Trade were not precluded from recovering salvage in respect of its services, & the claims of the commander & crew might be adjudicated upon without the consent of the Admty.—THE CYBELE (1878), 3 P. D. 8 ; 47 L. J. P. 86 ; 37 L. T. 773 ; 26 W. R. 345 ; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 532, C. A.

Annotation:—Consd. Young v. S.S. Scotia, [1903] A. C. 501.

8. — — — Entered on Navy list—Employed in carrying coal for the Navy.—A vessel owned by the Government and entered in the Navy List as employed on harbour service was exclusively employed under the Admty. by the Devonport Dockyard authorities in carrying coal to ships of the Royal Navy. Her master held a Board of Trade certificate, & neither he nor the crew, who were engaged under arts. of agreement, were in the Navy. The master employed pilots, & proceedings were taken against him in a ct. of summary jurisdiction under Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 591, for the recovery of pilotage dues according to a scale imposed by bye-laws made in pursuance of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), & a local Act, in which the Crown was not mentioned, under which the pilots were licenced:—Held: the vessel was a King's ship, & the master was therefore not liable either under Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), or the local Act to pay pilotage dues on the scale imposed by the bye-laws.—SYMONS v. BAKER, [1905] 2 K. B. 723; 74 L. J. K. B. 965; 93 L. T. 548; 54 W. R. 159; 21 T. L. R. 734; 49 Sol. Jo. 714; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 129, D. C.

9. — Vessel requisitioned by Admiralty—No terms arranged at time of services.—The Admty., acting under the powers conferred by a Proclamation of Aug. 3, 1914, requisitioned pltf.'s tug Simla, & sent her to Kirkwall Bay in the Orkneys. While stationed there the Simla, with the consent of the commander of the Northern Patrol, rendered valuable salvage services to the Sarpen, which had run upon the rocks in the vicinity. At this time no terms & conditions of employment of the Simla had been agreed to by pltf's. & the Admty., but terms were afterwards arranged:—Held: the effect of the requisitioning by the Admty. under the Proclamation was not to make the Simla a ship "belonging to His Majesty" within Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 557, nor did the terms & conditions of the hiring have that effect, & therefore the owners, master, & crew were entitled to prosecute a claim for salvage.—THE SARPEN, [1916] P. 306; 85 L. J. P. 209; 114 L. T. 1011; 32 T. L. R. 575; 60 Sol. Jo. 538; 13 Asp. M. L. C. 370, C. A.

10. — Subsequent terms not amounting to demise.—THE SARPEN, No. 9, ante.

11. — On terms amounting to demise.—A tug belonging to defts. was requisitioned by the Admty. upon terms which amounted to a demise of the tug to the Admty. The tug rendered salvage services to another vessel in respect of which a salvage award was made:—Held: the tug having been demised to the Admty. was a "ship belonging to His Majesty" within Merchant Shipping (Salvage) Act, 1916 (c. 41), s. 1, & the Admty., & not the owners of the tug, were entitled to the salvage award.—*ADMIRALTY COMRS. v. 13. Whether within jurisdiction of High Court—Service of writs.—Upon an application for leave to serve a writ out of the jurisdiction it appeared that deft. was a British naval officer on board a man of war at the Mediterranean station, which at the time of application was on the high seas, but would touch at one or other of the coaling ports in the Mediterranean, & would ultimately put into Malta, the chief port on the station:—Held: it was not sufficiently shown in what place or country deft. "was or might probably be found" within the meaning of R. S. C., Ord. 11, r. 4, & leave to serve the writ out of the jurisdiction must be refused.—SEAGROVE v. PARKS, [1891] 1 Q. B. 551; 60 L. J. Q. B. 355, D. C.

SECT. 2.—ENLISTMENT AND SERVICE.

See Naval Enlistment Acts, 1835 (c. 24); 1853 (c. 69); 1884 (c. 46); Naval Discipline Acts, 1853 (c. 69); 1866 (c. 109), s. 86; 1922 (c. 37), s. 5 (1); Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), ss. 195–197.

16. What is "naval service"—Service in Royal Naval Reserve.—The words "naval service," Naval Enlistment Act, 1853 (c. 69), s. 16, do not include service in the Royal Naval Reserve. A person, therefore, is not liable to be proceeded against under that sect. for making a false statement on joining the Royal Naval Reserve.—WESTHORPE v. POWLEY, [1905] 1 K. B. 286; 74 L. J. K. 17. Duration of seaman's service—While on ship's books.—STUDWELL v. BUNTON (1745), Barnes, 95; 94 E. R. 823.

18. Right of officer to resign—After acceptance of commission.—H., a lieutenant in the Royal Navy, being offered a situation, applied to the Admty. for leave to retire from the service, but this was refused. H. then obtained leave to go ashore from the ship in which he served, & did not return after such leave had expired. Jurisdiction of civil courts.]—Pltf., a retired naval officer, brought an action against the former First Lord of the Admty. for alleged false imprisonment & for the alleged malicious & wrongful retirement of pltf. from the Navy. The claim against deft. for false imprisonment was in respect of acts done by his subordinates, & was not based on any allegation that deft. knew of it at the time. The other claim was framed as follows in the statement of claim: "Further, deft. by an order made on Nov. 6, 1915, wrongfully & maliciously caused pltf. to be placed on retired pay, & also caused the retirement to be published in the London Gazette & other newspapers, whereby pltf. has suffered damage":—Held: as regards the alleged false imprisonment, no action lay against the head of a Govt. department for any wrong committed by a subordinate officer, & as regards the other claim, the wording of it was meagre & ambiguous & tended to embarrass & prejudice the fair trial of the action, & therefore the statement of claim should be struck out, but pltf. should have leave to amend it, as the question whether a case involving matters of military or naval discipline was cognisable in a civil ct. was still an open question, at all events in the House of Lords.—FRASER v. 27. Duty to render service—Protection of merchant vessels.]—By the law of England, King's ships are entitled to a salvage remuneration for services rendered to merchant vessels in distress.

The parties may fairly claim a remuneration, although the ship belongs to the state, & although there is an obligation upon King's ships to assist the merchant vessels of this country; yet, when services have been rendered, those who confer them are entitled to an adequate reward (LORD STOWELL).

In regard to the proportion of remuneration, there are many cases in which there is much labour & little to pay for it; so that the ct. acts upon the principle of giving a larger proportion in cases of small value, than in cases where the property is considerable, as a due encouragement to the interests of the commerce & navigation of the country (LORD STOWELL).—THE MARY ANN (1823), 1 Hag. 29. ——— No salvage service in absence of sea peril.]—A British steamship was at anchor off Lowestoft when a portion of the German fleet attacked that town. Shells fell in the vicinity of the steamship, one of them struck her & caused a fire to break out on board her. The master & crew of the steamship put off from their vessel in boats with the intention of seeking refuge on board a lightship stationed near at hand. Before the lightship was reached a British torpedo gunboat came up and the crew of the steamship left their boats & went on board the gunboat. Some of the crew of the gunboat then boarded the steamship, put out the fire, lifted the anchors, raised steam, & took her into Yarmouth Roads; the gunboat meanwhile acted as escort to protect her from attacks by submarine. In an action for salvage by the commander, officers, & crew of the gunboat it was alleged that the steamship was badly on fire & in imminent danger of destruction by enemy submarines:—Held: though the services rendered by the commander, officers, & crew of the gunboat were salvage & they were entitled to an award, it was part of the duty of patrol vessels to protect the mercantile marine from submarine attack, & in the absence of sea peril, such protection was not to be regarded as a salvage service.—*THE F. 30. ——— Neutral vessels.]—A Swedish steamship, while on a voyage from Glasgow to Nantes with a cargo of munitions consigned to the French Govt., was attacked by a German submarine, & the crew were ordered to abandon the vessel. When His Majesty's armed trawlers Fusilier & Kinaldie arrived later the ship was still afloat, the enemy submarine having disappeared without sinking her; & as the Swedish crew refused to return to the ship, it was towed into port by the armed trawlers. The commanders, officers, & crews of the Fusilier & Kinaldie claimed salvage against the owners of the Carrie :—Held : (1) even assuming pl'tfs. owed a duty to save the cargo of an Allied Government, they were under no duty to save the neutral steamship, & were entitled to a salvage award based on the war risks, as well as the maritime risks from which the steamship was saved; (2) salvage by a King's ship cannot be treated on the same footing as a salvage by a private ship, & the ct., in determining its award, must take into consideration the facts that the officers & crews lose no time & run no risk to property; (3) the work done in connection with the salvage services may be no harder & no more risky than the work in which pl'tfs. would ordinarily be engaged; & (4) the officers & crews of a King's ship can claim only with the sanction of the Admty., a sanction which is intended to enforce the rule that to entitle His Majesty's ships to claim salvage the services must be of an important character.—THE CARRIE, [1917] P. 224; 86 L. 31. ———.]—Salvage by a govt. steamer, & 200 men, to a vessel in extreme danger on a shoal off Jamaica; she had been there from July 21 to July 24, when a signal of distress brought to her assistance a steamer, carrying dispatches, & in about eight hours she was moored in safety; & on the next morning towed into Carlisle Bay. The magistrates there, upon a value of about £6,000, gave to the salvors one-third of the ship, cargo & freight; but the owners, refusing to abide by that decree, the ct. here, in an action by the salvors, gave £1,200, & costs.

King's ships are fitted out for war; to protect the commerce of the country; they are bound to recapture; it is part of their duty; & yet though armed & manned at the public expense, they are rewarded for the benefit rendered to the individual owners, something less certainly, than if the recapture be by a privateer; for a privateer has one-sixth, while a King's ship one-eighth, in the proportion of a third & a fourth. On parity of reason & fair analogy, a similar principle may apply to civil salvage effected by vessels in the public service (SIR JOHN NICHOLL).

In effecting this service there was no great personal risk, but there was some; boats passing & repassing in a heavy swell on a lee shore, men carrying out & taking up anchors, hawsers breaking, are circumstances of some risk, & denote much personal labour. But there was considerable risk of another sort, the risk of responsibility. The steam vessel was on a service requiring despatch; she was under positive orders to return by a certain time, & it was not till after much consideration & doubt that captain E. takes upon himself the responsibility, & sends an excuse to the commodore. But if any untoward accident had happened, this conduct might have deeply involved the captain, & perhaps also his officers; & I think, therefore, that the incurring such a responsibility was equal to a personal risk of life (SIR JOHN NICHOLL).—THE EWELL GROVE (1835), 3 Hag. It is the duty of Her Majesty's officers to render assistance, & they do not risk any property belonging to themselves when they perform a service of this kind, though they incur a responsibility; & they do not suffer a loss of their own time, because if the service be properly undertaken, they receive their ordinary pay. But that they are entitled to salvage, & subject to these considerations, is a point fully admitted in this ct. (DR. LUSHINGTON).—THE CHARLOTTE WYLIE (1846), 2 Wm. 34. General rule—Services must be substantial.]—A King's ship is not entitled to salvage for rescuing a convict vessel from the possession of the convicts & of the mutinous crew & soldiers on board her.

I do not mean to say that the King's officers would universally & in all cases be excluded from salvage for services rendered by them in rescuing vessels from other than maritime dangers, but still it is their duty to render such assistance without having any such object in view; & unless they incur great personal danger & use very great exertions in the performance of the service, I must hold that they are not entitled to a pecuniary reward (*SIR W. She was got off by other assistance, & was then unladen by the crew of the steam tug. The service continued about twenty days. Defence set up that, by the heedlessness of the salvors, the vessel grounded & suffered more harm than their services did good, not sustained. On the value of £8,800 the ct. awarded £750.

It is advantageous to the mercantile marine that her Majesty's officers should be allowed to obtain reward for salvage services.

The ingredients of a salvage service are, first, enterprise on the salvors in going out in tempestuous weather to assist a vessel in distress, risking their own lives to save their fellow creatures, & to rescue the property of their fellow subjects; secondly, the degree of danger & distress from which the property is rescued, whether it were in imminent peril & almost certainly lost if not at the time rescued & preserved; thirdly, the degree of labour & skill which the salvors incur & display & the time occupied; lastly, the value. Where all these circumstances concur a large & liberal reward ought to be given; but where none or scarcely any take place the compensation can hardly be denominated a salvage compensation; it is little more than a remuneration pro opere et labore (SIR J. To entitle His Majesty's ships to a salvage remuneration for services to a private ship, the services must be important, & even then the remuneration would be less than to a merchant ship; & the same principle applies in war salvage; & for many reasons: they lose no time; & they run no risk of property, both are at the expense of the public. In an action for salvage brought by the commanders, officers, & crews of the salving vessels to recover salvage, it was admitted by defts. that the services were salvage services:—Held: in awarding salvage to the commanders, officers, & crews of vessels in His Majesty's navy, the responsibility taken by the officers in employing the property of His Majesty on such a service, the personal risks run by the salvors, & the work & skill necessary to perform the service, were the matters to be considered; though the services in the case were admitted to be salvage, yet, as the work done was no harder & no more dangerous than the work the salvors would be ordinarily engaged on, the award should not be a large one.—THE GORLIZ (1917), 119 L. 98. ———.]—It is illegal for the commander of one of His Majesty's ships of war to carry on board her, on freight, the bullion of private merchants, without an order from an authority competent to command him to perform that service. The captain of a King's ship brought home in her public treasure upon the public service, & treasure of individuals for his own emolument; he received freight for both, & paid over one-third of it, according to an usage heretofore established in the Navy, to the admiral under whose command he sailed. Discovering that the law does not compel captains to pay to admirals one-third of the freight; the captain brought an action for money had & received, to recover it back from the admiral's extrim. :—Held: he could not recover back the private freight, because the whole of that transaction was illegal, nor the public freight, because he had paid it with full knowledge of the facts, although in ignorance of the law, & because it was not against conscience for the extrim. to retain it.—BRISBANE v. DACRES (1813), 5 Taunt. 143; 128 E. R. 641.

SHIRREFF (1816), 5 M. & S. 32; 105 E. R. 963.

102. ——— Carriage of bullion.]—By Freight for Treasure Act, 1819 (c. 25), a custom which up to the passing of the Act had existed in the Navy of carrying gold, silver, jewels & other articles for private merchants & others on board the King's ships was declared to be illegal & prohibited, except so far as Orders in Council & Proclamations issued under the Act should order & regulate the practice & the freight to be paid. On Aug. 10, 1888, an Order in Council had been issued which revoked the Orders then in existence, & that Order was annulled by an Order in Council of Oct. 26, 1914, & no new Order was subsequently made under the Act:—Held: as there was no Order in Council in existence regulating the payment of the freight, as before stated, a claim for freight could not be enforced.—KING-HALL v. 111. — Liability to dismissal at will.]—In 1846 T., an army surgeon, was appointed by the Secretary for War to the "permanent medical charge of the military prison at Dublin," & continued to discharge the duties of that office until 1874, when he was compulsorily retired on half pay, whereby he became ineligible to hold the office. T. presented a petition of right alleging that he was by the terms of his appointment entitled to hold it during his life, or until incapacitated by infirmity or misconduct:—Held: the appointment was made subject to the rules of the service in accordance with which every military officer is liable to dismissal at any moment, at the will & pleasure of the Crown.—Re TUNNELL (1876), 3 Ch. 113. Enlistment of soldier—What constitutes enlistment—Receipt of enlistment money.]—In an action of trespass against a military officer having command of a military prison for imprisoning pltf., deft. pleaded not guilty by statute, & at the trial set up under the 20th Article of War, that it was his duty to receive & keep any prisoner committed to his charge by any officer or non-commissioned officer, who should at the same time deliver an account in writing, signed by himself, of the crime with which the prisoner is charged, & that pltf. has been so committed to his authority on a charge of desertion:—Held: (1) the 20th Article of War applies only to a person who, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 5, either is, or is to be deemed to be a soldier; (2) the authority to make a valid enlistment may be presumed in case of a person employed in the recruiting service, without evidence that such person is an attested soldier; (3) if a person receives the enlistment money, knowing it to be such, from a person employed in the recruiting service he is a soldier for the purpose of punishment for desertion, even though he have not been attested; (4) the legality of enlistment does not depend upon the putting to the recruit the questions prescribed by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 5, s. 55, but on the reception by him of enlistment money, knowing it to be such; (5) a soldier employed in the recruiting service who enlists a recruit on a Sunday, is not a person following his ordinary calling within Sunday Observance Act, 1877 (c. 7); (6) deft. was not deprived of the benefit of the 20th Article of War by reason of pltf. not having been carried before a justice of the peace, & committed by him, before being taken to deft. as commanding officer of the guard.—*WOLTON v. 114. — — — — —.]—A person knowingly accepted the enlistment shilling from a soldier who was not attested, but was acting under the orders of the recruiting serjeant. He then absented himself but was found & taken before a magistrate. The magistrate heard the case, but refused to commit or discharge him, & he was then sent to the civil prison, & from thence removed to the military guard-room, & there detained. Qu.: whether an action would lie for false imprisonment against the officer in command.

He served for one day with the Colours & received a day's pay. On Dec. 11 he was transferred to the Army Reserve. He was not medically examined before his attestation or transfer to the Reserve. On Mar. 1, 1916, he was medically examined. As a result, his medical history sheet was stamped with the words, "Not accepted, medically unfit," & above the signature of the medical officer was written, "unfit, deafness." After the medical examination the recruiting officer gave him a document, in which there were spaces for his name, the class of service for which he had been found fit, the unit to which he had been posted, & the officer to whom he had been ordered to report. With the exception of applt.'s name, none of these spaces were filled up, but the words "Not accepted, medically unfit" were stamped across them. This document was signed by the recruiting officer. The words "medically unfit" were also written across B.'s attestation paper. B. was therefore sent home without having been posted to any unit. He was not given any certificate of discharge, nor did his name appear in the discharge book of his recruiting area. On Dec. 23, 1916, a notice was served on him requiring him to present himself for medical re-examination on Jan. 9, 1917. He ignored this notice, & also a further notice calling upon him to rejoin the Colours on Jan. 22:—Held: when B. signed the declaration in his attestation paper & took the oath of allegiance he was to be deemed to be enlisted in His Majesty's Regular Forces, & the proceedings on Mar. 1, 1916, did not constitute a discharge therefrom.—*Boots v. 121. Persons subject to military law—Canteen steward appointed by commanding officer.—A canteen steward appointed by the commanding officer of the district, acting under a committee consisting of three officers, & having no interest in the profits of the canteen, but receiving such pay or allowance as the committee may think fit to award him, & being liable to dismissal at the pleasure of the committee, though performing no military duty, wearing no uniform, bearing no arms, & having free ingress & egress at his pleasure to & from the barracks, is still a person subject to military law within Army Act, 1881 (c. 58), s. 176 (4).—Re Flint (1885), 15 Q. 122. Volunteer being trained with regular forces.—Pltf. was a member of a volunteer corps, which was trained & exercised with a portion of the regular forces at Shorncliffe Camp under an order of the War Office, forming a volunteer brigade for the purpose of such training & exercise during the period Aug. 1 to Aug. 8, 1896. Upon the latter day, while preparations were going on for the departure of the volunteers from the camp, he was charged with larceny from a comrade. The adjutant of the corps gave orders that he should be taken under arrest with the baggage guard to Shorncliffe Station, & thence to Boxmoor Station in the special military train which was on that day to convey the corps home, & that on arrival at the latter station he should be taken to Hemel Hempstead, where he lived, & handed over to the police authority there. Pltf. was accordingly taken under arrest to Shorncliffe Station, & three of his comrades were there told off to form his escort in the train & to take him from Boxmoor Station to Hemel Hempstead, & there hand him over to the police, which they did. In an action against them for assault & false imprisonment:—Held: by Army Act, 1881 (c. 58), s. 176, the members of the corps were subject to military law from the time when they fell in on Aug. 1 for the purpose of proceeding to the camp to be trained & exercised with the regulars until on their return home on Aug. 8 they were dismissed; & pltf. & defts. were therefore subject to military law at the time when defts. did the acts complained of, which were consequently justified under Army Act, 1881 (c. 58), ss. 41 & 45.—*Marks v. 132. Whether assignable—Wound pension—Injunction.]—A retired officer of the army, entitled to a pension granted by the Crown, in consideration of wounds received by him while in the service, assigned it for valuable consideration, & pursuant to his covenant in the deed of assignment, executed to the assignee a power of attorney, in the form required by the War Office, to enable him to receive the same. The pension was expressed in the warrant granting it, to be payable "until further order," & at the foot of the form of declaration issued by the Paymaster-General, to be filled up & signed by the grantee on applying for payment of the quarterly instalments of the pension, were these words: "This allowance cannot be assigned as security for a loan of money." The assignor, after allowing the assignee of the pension, by means of the power of attorney executed to him, to receive two quarterly instalments of the annuity, revoked the power, & thenceforth received it himself. The ct. on motion by the assignee, granted an injunction to restrain the assignor from receiving the pension, & from executing any power of attorney authorising any person other than pltf. to receive it.—*KNIGHT v. South Wales for service with the New South Wales Contingent in South Africa, at 10s. a day, the rate of pay fixed by a general order. He served made for long period.]—The paymaster of a military corps had given credit in account to an officer in that corps from Jan. 1, 1817 to Nov. 5, 1820, for certain increased pay, erroneously supposed to be granted by a general order of Aug. 27, 1806, to an officer of his situation, & a statement of that account was delivered to the officer in 1821. In Dec. 1816, the paymasters were informed by the board of ordnance that the increased pay granted by the order of 1806 would not be allowed to persons in the situation of the officer in question. The paymasters did not communicate this information to the officer until 1821, & subsequently to that time they continued to receive his pay. In an action brought by his personal representative to recover such pay:—Held: it was not competent to the paymaster to retain any of such sums of money on account of the sums which they had credited him for by way of increased pay, & which they had allowed him to consider his own for so long a period of time.—*SKYRING v. Whether mandamus lies—To discharge arrears.—An officer commanding forces of Her Majesty & of the East India Co., in India, has no such legal right, by statute or otherwise, to his pay, as entitles him, in the absence of any specific undertaking or acknowledgment, to a mandamus calling upon the co. to discharge arrears; though he has always received his pay from the co., & their practice has been to discharge it monthly.—*Ex p. Demurrer by the Crown that the petition disclosed no right, legal or equitable, cognisable by the ct.:—Held: the demurrer was good, & the petition must be dismissed on that with the Contingent in South Africa, & was paid 4s. 6d. per day by the Imperial Govt. He claimed in addition the full rate of 10s. a day from the New South Wales Govt.—Held: plf. was in the service of the King, & it was immaterial by whom he was paid the 10s. a day, & therefore he was not entitled to more than the balance after giving credit for the 4s. 6d. received from the Imperial Govt.—*WILLIAMS v. 141. — Victualling house keeper—Billet list not conclusive as to numbers.—There is a statutory obligation under Army Act, 1881 (c. 58), s. 103, on the constable in charge at any place mentioned in the route issued to the commanding officer of any portion of Her Majesty's regular forces to give billets for all the officers, soldiers, & horses mentioned in the route, & for whom quarters are required; & the billet list made out under Army Act, 1881 (c. 58), s. 107, by the police authority of any such place is not conclusive as to the number of officers, soldiers, or horses for whom the keeper of a victualling house shown in the list may be required to find accommodation on an emergency. Such list merely determines the proportion in which the billets are to be distributed among the keepers of victualling houses, & does not relieve them from their liability to take in, or otherwise find accommodation for, according to the proportions shown in the list, any number for whom quarters are required.—*SHARRATT v. These notices were, on receipt thereof, handed by applt. to his solr., who communicated with the recruiting officer & was informed by him in a letter as to the place at which applt. should report himself on July 24. Applt. failed to attend & was charged with being an absentee without leave. At the hearing of the charge he did not deny that he had notice of the time & place at which to report, & the justices convicted him. 148. Legacy to officer commanding militia battalion—Effect of transfer to Territorial force.]—Testator, who died in 1902, directed his trustees at the end of seven years to divide an accumulated fund among (inter alia) the institutions to which he had given legacies, or such of them as should then be existing, in proportion to their legacies, & in the event of any institution ceasing to exist prior to the expiration of seven years, then over. He gave legacies to the officers commanding certain bodies of Volunteers & Yeomanry & Militia:—Held: the effect of Territorial & Reserve Forces Act, 1907 (c. 9), was to reorganise & not to destroy the military forces existing at the passing of Territorial & Reserve Forces Act, 1907 (c. 9), & accordingly, the respective shares of the fund attributable to the legacies were payable, in the case of the Volunteers & Yeomanry to the county assocns. representing the units of the Territorial Force, & in the case of the Militia to the officer commanding the unit of the Army Reserve, which respectively corresponded to the several bodies for the benefit of which the legacies were originally given.—*Re DONALD, MOORE v. 150.—*In an action by an officer against his commander, for false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, & conspiracy to cause his removal from the Army, it appeared that more than four years before action, his commander, deft., had decided against him on some dispute with brother officers, & that pltf. after this had been put under arrest by him for some supposed slight, for which he was kept in custody more than eight days, & not brought to a court martial, & that ultimately, in consequence of pltf.'s complaints against his commanding officers, including deft., a ct. of inquiry sat, before which deft., with others, gave evidence against him of want of temper, & proper respect, etc., for which the ct. reported him unfit for command, & upon this he was compelled by the Commander-in-Chief to retire:—Held: there was no cause of action on any of the counts, as the matters were purely military, & there was no evidence of malice.—*DAWKINS v. 151. —.]—Pltf. brought three actions, charging in each that deft. conspired with other persons to make a false & malicious representation to the Commander-in-Chief that he, pltf., was unfit to command his regiment. Defts. did not plead, but took out a summons to stay proceedings on affidavits, stating that some years ago they were, respectively, members of a military ct. of inquiry, & that the actions were brought solely in respect of official & judicial acts done by them as members of the ct., & that until they were appointed members of the ct. they knew nothing of pltf. 153. —.]—In an action against a late Secretary of State for War, a lord lieutenant, commandant of the militia of the district, & the colonel of a regiment of militia, for causing, by means of false charges, the removal of pltf. from the office of lieutenant-colonel of the regiment: the first count being for a conspiracy to cause his removal, & making such charges in pursuance of the conspiracy; & the second for making such charges, maliciously & without reasonable or probable cause; it appeared that charges, chiefly of neglect, based on a report of a regimental board, had been sent by the colonel to pltf. in writing, for the purpose of being answered by him, & that the charges, & his written answers, in effect admitting a certain amount of neglect of military duty, were, with all the papers he appended thereto, sent by the colonel-in-chief to the commandant, who first saw the colonel, & then pltf., upon the subject, & heard their statements & counter-statements; & afterwards, & at the instance of the colonel, & after both of them had applied to, & had an interview with, the Secretary at War, with a view to pltf.'s removal, sent to the Secretary of War a formal list of charges drawn up by the colonel, & including some which were new & of a graver character, & as to which there had been no inquiry; but which, with the others, had been sent to pltf. for his answers, & were sent, with his answers in writing; & the Secretary of State thereupon, after perusing the charges & written answers, without further inquiry declared that pltf. must be desired to resign; & afterwards, on remonstrance, appointed a military board of inquiry, before whom pltf. was fully heard, but against whose conduct of the inquiry certain complaints were made by pltf.; & ultimately, after their report, directed the dismissal of pltf. upon the charges of neglect, as admitted upon his own statements:—Held: (1) to sustain a verdict for pltf. upon the first count, both the other two defts. must be convicted, as it charged, in substance, a conspiracy; but, on the other count, either might be convicted; (2) assuming the charges, or those of them on which pltf. was really dismissed, were founded upon facts, as they appeared, or were represented, to the colonel, there was reasonable ground for preferring them; (3) if the commandant acted honestly on the representation made to him by the colonel, he was not liable, therefore, on either count, the question for the jury, in substance, was whether defts. acted honestly & bona fide; or without any belief in the truth of the charges, & from a bad & improper motive.—DICKSON v. I take it, they are bound to inflict that measure of punishment which has been known ordinarily to be inflicted & borne; & it may be a question, whether, if the quantity be inordinate in proportion to the instrument, that may not be evidence of such malice as may constitute that which would otherwise be justifiable, a murder according to the definition of the law of England (MACDONALD, C.B.).—WALL'S CASE (1802), 28 State Tr. 51, 144.

Frauds], but that it was confined to such as were on an expedition—in actual military service, that is, in expeditione. . . I do not consider that the words "in actual military service" apply to a person in D.'s situation, not living within the walls of a garrison, as far as appears, but suis aedibus; & even if he were, I am of opinion he was not "in actual military service" (SIR JENNER FUST).—*DRUMMOND v. 196. ———.]—The words “in actual military service” in Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 11 are now settled to be equivalent to “on an expedition.” The service may continue after the fighting is over, but the man on such service must be either on a field of operations, or proceeding to or from the field, or in some place for the purpose of proceeding there. Duration of actual service is a matter of fact to which the date at which the war is declared to be terminated by proclamation under Termination of the Present War (Definition) Act, 1918 (c. 59), is irrelevant.—In the Estate of GREY, [1922] P. 140; 91 L. J. P. 111; 126 L. T. 799; 38 T. L. R. 401.

197. ——— Mobilisation.]—Mobilisation may be fairly taken as a commencement of that which, in Roman law, was understood by the words “in expeditione.” If the order to mobilise has been received, although any particular member of the force may himself have taken no step under it, yet the order itself so affects his position, as a unit of the whole force, as to place him “in expeditione.”

On Sept. 7, 1899, a battalion stationed in India was “warned” for service, & two days later was “ordered to mobilise” for active service in South Africa, & embarked on Sept. 19, 1899. Deceased, a private soldier in that battalion, wrote, between Sept. 8, & Sept. 19, an undated letter, which was received by pltf. in England on Oct. 2, 1899. The writer died of fever during the siege of Ladysmith on Feb. 9, 1900. The letter contained (inter alia) the expressions: “If you have a letter to say that I am killed, then the lot is for you.” . . . “You will receive the lot if I am killed in action, for I shall make out my will in your favour.” No other document in the nature of a will was ever received or discovered, & the father of deceased, the latter being unmarried, took out letters of administration. Pltf. having propounded the letter as the will of deceased soldier claimed revocation of the grant of administration:—Held: the document was testamentary, & it was a soldier’s will within Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 11.—*GATTWARD v. 212. — Officer acting as assistant commissioner—Controlling troops in civil capacity.—Deceased was an officer in the army, & made an informal will when he was acting as assistant comr. in a district in the East Indies which was in open rebellion & subject to martial law. In his capacity of assistant comr. he had the direction & control of troops, but was not in military command.—Held: he was not in actual military service, & the testamentary paper was not within Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 11.—In the Goods of FITZGERALD (1859), 23 J. 213. — Continuance of service after fighting over.—On the conclusion of the Waziristan operations on the frontier of India in 1895 a portion of the force remained in the Tochi Valley as an escort to the party engaged in the delimitation of the frontier. Testator was a lieutenant in an Indian regiment forming part of this escort. While so serving testator was mortally wounded by a fanatic & was carried into camp, where he dictated a will to his brother-in-law, whom he made his residuary legatee, & died on the next day. The will was signed by testator & attested by his brother-in-law & another officer as witnesses. His estate consisted of personal property only:—

215 i. — Being in some place for purpose of proceeding to or from field of operations.—Deceased signed a blank will form in the presence of two witnesses & declared his wishes with regard to the disposition of his property. These declarations were not written in the will. Deceased was an enlisted soldier in camp prior to dispatch overseas, for military service in the war then existing with Germany & her allies. Clear evidence was given as to the declarations made.—Held: deceased was on actual military service, & although the signed will form was invalid as a will the evidence as to the testamentary wishes expressed verbally was satisfactory & probate limited to personal estate should be granted.—Re HAVEY, [1918] S. etc." The father of deceased having applied, with O.'s consent, for letters of administration with the document annexed.—Held: the document was the will of a soldier in actual military service within Wills Act, s. 11, & the application should be granted.—Re COGAN (1915), 34 N. 215 iii. ————Deceased was a member of the New Zealand Expeditionary Forces. Two days before embarkation, being then on active service, he visited his family, & a discussion took place in the presence of his mother, two brothers, & a sister as to the amount of money he possessed. After inspecting his savings bank pass-book, which was in the custody of his mother, & inquiring of his brother what payments had been made on his behalf to the National Provident Fund, he then said, "Well, if anything happens to me there will be over £300 for 'mum," & handed the pass-book back to his mother. Deceased died at the New Zealand General Hospital, Held: (1) testator was in "actual military service" within Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 11, at the time when he made his will; (2) notwithstanding the attestation by two witnesses the will was a soldier's will made in exercise of the privilege reserved by Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 11, & requiring no attestation; Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 15, did not apply to a will so made; & the gift to the attesting witness was therefore valid.—*Re LIMOND, LIMOND v. Necessity for circumstances showing testamentary intention.—Deceased, an Army officer, when on actual military service spoke to a brother officer about making a will, & was informed, incorrectly, that if he died without making a will all his property would go to his mother. Deceased then said, "That is just what I want. I want my mother to have everything." On a motion by deceased's mother for a grant of letters of administration with a nuncupative will annexed:—Held: deceased's statement had not been made in circumstances showing that it was intended to be testamentary, & the motion must be refused.—Re The Estate of DONNER (1917), 34 T. PART IX. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—B.

225 i. Necessity for circumstances showing testamentary intention.—Testator, who was a member of the New Zealand Expeditionary Force on active service, destroyed, with the intention of revoking it, a will, which he had made, & wrote to his father explaining the reasons for the revocation. In the same letter testator stated that he had made a new will, & described its contents. Testator died on active service, & as the will could not be found, the letter was propounded as his will & application made for administration with the will annexed:—Held: the letter could not be admitted as testator's will since there was no extrinsic evidence to show that it was written animo testandi, & its tenor was not consistent with that conclusion.—Re MILLING (No. 1), [1916] N. Z. L. R. 1174.—N.Z.

225 ii.—J.—In conversations with two witnesses deceased, who was a soldier on active service, said that he had made G. his next-of-kin; & in answer to a question by one witness as to what he meant by this he said, "If I got knocked out then G. would get the lot." 227. — Declaration made at instance of military authorities—Noted at the time.—A declaration, made by a soldier on active service at the instance of the military authorities, who made a note of it at the time, to the effect that in the event of his death he desired his "effects" to be "credited" to one of his sisters, named:—Held: to be a valid testamentary document.—In the Goods of SCOTT, [1903] P. 243; 73 L. J. P. 17; 80 L. T. 588; 47 Sol. Jo. 728.

228. — Necessity for knowledge that will being made.—It is not necessary for the validity of a soldier's nuncupative will to prove that he knew he was making a will, or that he had the power to make a will while a minor or by word of mouth. It is enough if he intended deliberately to give expression to his wishes as to the disposition of his property in the event of his death.—Re STABLE, DALRYMPLE v. CAMPBELL, [1919] P. 7; 88 L. J. 231. Whether will conditional—Death on active service.—(1) The words, "I request that in the event of my death while serving in this horrid climate, or any accident happening to me," held not to make a testamentary paper conditional on the event of death while in that climate.

(2) A mere averment that deceased held such a rank in his regiment, was in such a place, & was in actual military service, at the date of writing the paper in question, is not necessarily enough to entitle such paper to be treated as a soldier's testament; but the affidavit should contain a statement of the circumstances full enough to enable the ct. to judge whether the case falls within the meaning attributed by previous cases to Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 11.—In the Goods of THORNE (1865), 4 Sw. & Tr. 36; 34 L. Should anything unfortunately happen to me whilst abroad, I wish everything that I may be in possession of at that time, or anything appertaining to me hereafter, to be divided," etc. Deceased returned to England from China:—Held: the dispositions of the will were dependent upon the death of the deceased in China, & therefore the will itself was conditional.—In the Goods of PORTER (1869), L. R. 2 P. & D. 22; 39 L. J. P. & M. 12; 21 L. T. 680; 34 J. P. 247; 18 W. R. 231. Annotations:—Consd. In the Goods of Spratt, [1897] P. 28. Refd. *Jobson v. In the first place there is money at. . . Keep this until I ask you for it":—Held: the disposition of deceased's property was not dependent on his death while on active service; the document was not therefore a conditional will; & being good as a military will it was entitled to probate.—In the Goods of SPRATT, [1897] P. 28; 66 L. The letter was admitted to be a good soldier's will:—Held: the letter was not merely a disposition conditional on testator's death during the Dardanelles operations but was a disposition of his property in any event, & therefore both documents must be admitted to probate.—In the Estate of PAWLE, WINTER v. PAWLE (1918), 34 T. L. R. 437.

235. Direction to trustee under existing will—As to payment of income.—A guardian of a child can be appointed by a will only if the will satisfies the provisions of 12 Car. 2, c. 24, s. 8, & therefore cannot be appointed by a soldier's will within Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 11. Neither Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), nor Stat. Frauds, s. 23, gives power to appoint a guardian by a soldier's will. A direction to a trustee under an existing will to deal with personal estate, by paying the income to a person for the benefit of an infant, is a valid disposition of personal estate within Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 11.—In the Estate of TOLLEMACHE, [1917] P. 246; 86 L. Shortly afterwards he joined the Army & went abroad, where he was wounded & taken prisoner by the Germans. In July, 1917, while in captivity, he wrote a letter to his wife dealing with family matters of business & saying: "Tell M., his solr., this affects my will, which I want added to it at once." Then followed directions as to the disposition of his real & personal estate. He died, while still a prisoner, in Oct. 1917, before any alterations had been made in his will. Probate was granted by the Registrar in common form of the will & codicil of 1915, with the letter as a second codicil. In an action by the exors. of the will & first codicil, to revoke the probate of the second codicil & establish the will & first codicil only:—Held: testator having died before Wills (Soldiers & Sailors) Act, 1918 (c. 58), came into operation, the letter could only operate on the personal estate, & inasmuch as it dealt with real as well as personal estate, the gifts of the personal estate not being independent of those of the realty, the letter was improperly admitted to probate.—*GODMAN v. D. Effect of Will.

241. Effect on prior formal will—Revocation—Exercise of power of appointment.—Testator came of age in 1914, & on Dec. 12 of that year, being then possessed of certain freehold & leasehold property, settled it by deed on trusts for sale & conversion & then for himself & his children & then for such persons as he should by deed or will appoint. Afterwards on the same day he made a formal will by which he exercised the power of appointment in favour of pltf.'s daughter, & left half of all his other real & personal estate to pltf. & the other half to pltf.'s wife, & appointed pltf. exor. On May 1, 1917, testator made a soldier's will, in which he said "I leave all I have" to deff. Testator died on May 17, 1917, & so far as was known he at that time possessed no real property:—Held: as no contrary intention appeared, the soldier's will operated as an execution of the general power of appointment & as a revocation of the appointment in the first will, but as testator died before the passing of Wills (Soldiers & Sailors) Act, 1918 (c. 58), & therefore had no power by a soldier's will to dispose of real estate, the earlier will, which did dispose of real estate, was not revoked in toto, & both wills must be admitted to probate.—NIXON v. PRINCE (1918), 34 T. L. R. 444.

F. Revocation.

244. By subsequent marriage.—The will of a soldier on actual military service, whether same be executed according to sect. 9 or sect. 11 of Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), or not, falls within the general provisions contained in sect. 18 of that Act & is revoked by testator's subsequent marriage.—In the Estate of WARDROP, [1917] P. 54; 86 L. J. P. 37; 115 L. T. 720; 33 T. L. R. 133; 61 Sol. Jo. 171.

245. No formalities required.—Under Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), no formalities are required for the execution of a soldier's will & therefore none are required for its revocation.

Testator, a soldier, on Oct. 24, 1915, when under orders to proceed with his unit to South Africa, made his will in accordance with the requirements of the Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), whereby, after certain legacies, he gave the whole of the residue of his personal estate to pltf., to whom he was then engaged to be married, & appointed her his sole extrix. Before starting he handed to her a sealed envelope, which he stated contained his will, & directed her not to open it unless anything happened to him. Subsequently, in consequence of certain statements made to him by pltf. as to her conduct during his absence, he wrote to her from South Africa directing her to hand over the will to his sister K., which she accordingly did. On Jan. 9, 1918, he wrote to K. from Cape Town a letter in which he requested her to burn his will, as he had, as he said, already cancelled it. K. accordingly burnt the will as requested. In Nov. 1918, testator died in hospital, in South Africa, & amongst his belongings there was found a copy of his original will. In an action brought by pltf. to establish the will:—Held: Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 20, which prescribed the formalities necessary for the revocation of wills, did not apply to soldiers' wills, & the will had been effectively revoked by the letter of Jan. 9, 1918.—In the Estate of GOSSAGE, WOOD v. GOSSAGE, [1921] P. 194; 90 L. J. P. 201; 124 L. T. 770; 37 T. L. R. 302; 65 Sol. Jo. 274, C. A. cousin could "claim all belongs to me, because it is my will." Deceased died after demobilisation:—Held: the postcard & letter taken together constituted a good soldier's will & a return to civil life prior to death did not operate as a revocation in the absence of any expression of intention to the contrary in the document itself.—In the Goods of COLEMAN, [1920] 2 I. 268. Distinguished from court martial.—Cts. administering martial law in time of war bear no analogy to courts martial administering military law under the Mutiny Act. The right to administer martial law depends upon whether a state of war in fact exists, & not upon the fact of a proclamation of martial law having been made, but where a Colonial Legislature had passed an Act of Parliament which enacted that all sentences passed by such cts. were to be deemed sentences passed in the regular & ordinary course of criminal jurisdiction:—Held: the Judicial Committee had no power to inquire into the propriety or impropriety of passing such an Act, & could not give leave to appeal from the sentence passed by such ct.—TILONKO v. 269. — — The so-called "military ct." whose proceedings were in question . . . was not & did not claim to be a ct. or judicial tribunal in any legal sense of those terms. It was not a court martial, that is to say, a tribunal regularly constituted under military law, but a body of military officers entrusted by the commanding officer with the duty of inquiring into certain alleged breaches of his commands contained in the proclamation, & of advising him as to the manner in which he should deal with the offence; & its "sentences" if confirmed, will derive their force not from the decision of the military ct., but from the authority of the officer commanding His Majesty's forces in the field (VISCOUNT CAVE).—Re CLIFFORD & O'SULLIVAN, [1921] 2 A. On May 5, 1916, he was tried before a field general court martial convened in Dublin & was convicted. On Apr. 26, 1916, His Majesty, by Proclamation issued under Defence of the Realm (Amendment) Act, 1915 (c. 34), s. 1 (7), suspended the operation of that sect. in Ireland:—Held: by virtue of the Proclamation the prisoner became triable by court martial notwithstanding that the offence with which he was charged had been committed before the date of publication of the Proclamation.

Sect. 2.—Courts martial: Sub-sect. 2. Sects. 3 & 4: Sub-sects. 1 & 2.]

(2) A field general court martial is only a particular form of a general court martial.

(3) The prisoner after his conviction was committed to prison, the commitment being in Form A. in the Third Appendix to the Rules of Procedure, 1907, made under Army Act, 1881 (c. 58):—Held: under Army Act, 1881 (c. 58), s. 172 (2) & (4), coupled with Rule 133a of Rules of Procedure, 1907, no defect in the form would render the detention in custody of the person under the commitment illegal; there was nothing on the face of the commitment which showed want of jurisdiction to act under it.

(4) The words "open court," in clause (c) of Rule 119 of Rules of Procedure, 1907, mean a ct. to which the public have a right to be admitted, but they do not include a ct. where the public are excluded although the accused & his representatives are allowed to be present.

289. ——— No valid detention order.]—

By the 131st of the Articles of War drawn up in pursuance of The Mutiny Act for 1857, 20 Vict. c. 13, s. 1, jurisdiction was conferred on general Courts-martial in India to try and sentence certain military offenders accused there of civil offences. By sect. 38 of that Act, the place of imprisonment under the sentences of general Courts-martial is to be appointed by the officer commanding the district. By sect. 40, every governor or keeper of any public prison in any part of Her Majesty's dominions is required to receive into and keep in his custody any military offender under sentence of imprisonment by a Court-martial, upon delivery to him of an order in writing in that behalf from the officer commanding the regiment to which the offender belongs, containing certain specified particulars. By sect. 41, in the case of a prisoner undergoing imprisonment under the sentence of a Court-martial in any public prison other than the military prisons set apart by the authority of the Act, the officer commanding the district is empowered to give an order in writing, directing that the prisoner be delivered over to military custody, for the purpose of being removed to some other prison or place, there to undergo the remainder of his sentence. A., a military offender amenable to the jurisdiction, was tried in India, under 20 Vict. c. 13, by a general Court martial, for a civil offence, of which the ct. found him guilty, & for which they sentenced him to four years' imprisonment. The officer commanding the district in which he was tried appointed the Fort of Agra as the place of his imprisonment. It did not appear whether this fort was or was not a public prison, or was or was not a military prison set apart by the authority of 20 Vict. c. 13. It was, however, under military command. A. was imprisoned there for about nine months; at the end of which the same officer who had appointed it as the place of imprisonment gave an order in writing, directing that he should be removed therefrom to England, to undergo there the remainder of his sentence; but not mentioning any prison in England to which he was to be removed. A., having been brought to England under this order, was there confined in several prisons in succession, & ultimately, in the Queen's Prison; an order from the Commander-in-Chief of the army in England, directing the keeper of that prison to receive him into custody for the remainder of his sentence, being sent there with him. Making absolute a rule for a habeas corpus obtained by A.:—Held: A. was entitled to his discharge: for his detention in custody, which could not be justified at common law, was not warranted by 20 Vict. c. 13; inasmuch as, assuming, a point which the ct. did not determine, that the case fell within 20 Vict. c. 13, as to the removal of prisoners, no

291. 302. —[1] The Ct. of Admty. had no jurisdiction with respect to booty until the passing of Admiralty Court Act, 1840 (c. 65), s. 22, enacting that the ct. “shall proceed as in cases of prize of war,” must be understood to mean, not that in all respects the distribution of booty should be assimilated to that of prize, but that the ordinary course of proceeding in prize should be adopted.

(2) No person will be entitled to share in booty on the sole ground of meritorious service, unless his claim is supported on the principle of joint capture; nor will the ct. relax the principles of joint capture on the ground that part of the property captured was not strictly booty, or that the sum was of unusual magnitude.

(3) All prize belongs absolutely to the Crown, which for the last 150 years has been in the habit of granting it to “the takers” who are of two classes, actual captors & joint or constructive captors.

(4) Joint captors are those who have assisted, or are taken to have assisted, the actual captors, by conveying encouragement to them, or intimidation to the enemy.

The union of the joint captor with the actual captor under the command of the same officer alone constitutes the bond of association which the law recognises as a title to joint sharing. Community of enterprise does not constitute association, & is equally insufficient as a ground for joint sharing, if the bond of union, though originally well constituted, has ceased to be in force at the time of the capture.

Such co-operation as will confer a title to a joint share of prize is also strictly limited to encouragement to the friend & intimidation to the enemy.

(5) The distinctions between captures on land & captures at sea tend to show, that in considering joint capture of booty, a wider application than is recognised in prize cases must be allowed to the term “co-operation,” concerted action on a vaster scale than is feasible at sea being indispensable to a campaign. The rule of sight, too, which prevails at sea, is inapplicable on land.

(6) The general rule for the distribution of booty, to be adhered to as far as possible, is the rule of actual capture. In the case of an army consisting of several divisions, the line of distribution will be drawn between division & division; that division to be regarded as the actual captor, any portion of which has captured the prize.

(7) The association entitling to joint sharing must be military, & not political, & must be under the immediate command of the same commander.

(8) The co-operation which is necessary as a title to joint sharing is a co-operation directly tending to produce the capture in question. What tends to produce the capture cannot be once for all defined, but strict limits must be observed of time, place, & relation. Services rendered at a great distance from the place of capture, acts done long before the capture was contemplated, even though they affect the whole scheme of operations, cannot be deemed such co-operation as will give a title to share in booty. Indirect services will be insufficient.

(9) To entitle the Commander-in-Chief to share in booty, he must himself be in the field; but “to be in the field” it is not necessary that he should be actually present with the division that makes the capture; being in the field with one division, he is in the field with all.

But, if troops have been placed under the independent command of another, the Commander-in-Chief, though actually in the field, does not share in booty taken by those troops.

(10) No distinction should be made in the right of the general & personal staff to share in the booty; in principle, the right of both stands or falls with the Commander-in-Chief; therefore all his staff who are in the field with him are entitled to share.

(11) Under the circumstances of the case, the costs of rejected claimants ordered to be paid out of the fund.—BANDA & KIRWEE BOOTY (1866), L. R. 1 A. & E. 109; 35 L. J. Adm. 17; 12 Jur. N. S. 819.

304. —[1] The Queen by Royal warrant “granted” booty of war to the Secretary of State for India in Council “in trust” for the officers & men of certain forces, to be distributed by the Secretary of State or by any other person he might appoint, according to certain scales & proportions; any doubts arising to be determined finally by the Secretary of State or by such persons to whom he might refer them unless the Queen should otherwise order. Part I.—The Contract of Sale Generally.

SECT. 1.—NATURE OF CONTRACT.

See, now, Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), ss. 1 (1) (3) (4), 4 (1), 62 (1).

1. Distinguished from guarantee—Transfer of goods from purchaser unable to pay—To purchaser promising payment.]—A. sells goods to B., who being unable to pay transfers them to C., who promises A., to pay for them. This is a new sale to C. & not a mere promise by C., to pay the debt of B.—BROWNING v. STALLARD (1814), 5 Taunt. 450; 128 E. R. 764.

Distinguished from contract for sale of lands—Sale of growing crops—Statute of Frauds, ss. 4, 17.]—See AGRICULTURE, Vol. II., pp. 52–55, Nos. 280–298.

PART I. SECT. 1.

a. General rule.]—The essence of sale is transfer of property from one person to another for money or money's worth.—It. v. LANGLEY (1899), 20 C. L. T. 2; 31 O. R. 295.—CAN.

b. Distinguished from contract for work & labour—Making of tombstone—Sale of chattel.]—W. during her lifetime orally ordered from plffs. a tombstone, to be put up by them at the grave of her late husband. It was begun before & completed by them after her death, & they sued her administrator, on the common counts, for the price :—Held : plffs.' claim was for the sale of a chattel, not one for work & labour, & there being no contract within Stat. Frauds, plffs. could not recover.—WOLFENDEN v. WILSON (1873), 33 U. C. R. 442.—CAN.

c. — Agreement to erect building.]—Ross v. DOYLE (1887), 4 Man. L. R. 434.—CAN.

2. — Sale of slag on land of third party—Licence to vendor to remove—Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), ss. 51, 62.]—In a counterclaim by purchasers against a vendor it appeared that the vendor was the lessee of certain land part of which was composed of slag & cinders. On adjoining lands occupied by other persons were two disused cinder tips. The vendor had obtained from these persons licences to remove from the tips slag & cinders adhering to & forming part of their lands. He then agreed with the purchasers to sell to them all the slag on the demised premises & from the tips on the lands adjoining, or so much thereof as the purchasers should desire to remove, & for that purpose to give the purchasers access to the

d. — Labourer's own materials employed.]—Where labourer converts materials of his own into a chattel, it can after delivery be sued on only as for goods sold & delivered.—FERGUSON v. REED (1896), 33 N. B. R. 580.—CAN.

e. — Contract to print special form of debentures.]—A contract to print debentures in a special form on paper supplied by the printers is a contract for the sale of goods & chattels, & not a contract for work, demised premises & the cinder tips on the adjoining lands. After certain slag had been removed by the purchasers & sold at a profit the lessor & licensors of the vendor intervened & prevented the further removal of slag by the purchasers. The purchasers sued for damages for the vendor's default in delivering or giving access to the slag sold:—Held: the agreement was not a contract for the sale of goods within above Act, s. 62, so as to entitle the purchasers to recover as damages the difference between the contract & the market price of the slag under above Act, s. 51; but the agreement was a contract to grant an interest in land, & as the vendor's failure to perform his contract was due solely to a defect in his title, the purchasers could not recover any damages for the loss of their bargain.—MORGAN v. RUSSELL & SONS, [1909] 1 K. B. 357; 78 L. J. K. B. 187; 100 L. T. 118; 25 T. L. R. 120; 53 Sol. Jo. 136, D. C.

3. Distinguished from contract for work & labour—Agreement to erect machinery.—An executory agreement for the making & putting up of certain machines in the party's house is required to be stamped like any other agreement, not being within the exception in Stamp Acts in favour of agreements, etc., for or relating to the sale of goods.—BUXTON v. BEDALL (1803), 3 East, 303; 102 E. R. 613.

4. ———.—A. contracted with B. "to build an engine of 100 horse power for the sum of £2,500, to be completed & fixed" by a certain time. The engine was intended for the purpose of pumping a mine, & was composed of various parts, which were made at A.'s factory, & conveyed thence & set up at different times at B.'s colliery, until the engine was completed. A. sued B. for the price, & in an indebitatus count claimed £3,000 for the price & value of a main engine, & other goods sold & delivered by him to B.:—Held: the price agreed on could not be recovered under this count, but the proper form of the count would have been, either for work, labour & materials, or for erecting & constructing an engine.—CLARK v. BULMER (1843), 11 M. & W. 243; 1 Dow. & L. 367; 12 L. J. Ex. 463; 152 E. R. 793.

Annotation:—Refd. Beaumont v. Brengeri (1817), 5 C. B. 301.

5. ———.—Defts. contracted with pltf. to make & supply new boilers & certain new machinery for a steam ship of pltf., & to alter the engines of such steam ship into compound surface condensing engines, according to a specification. The engines, boilers, & connections were, by the contract, to be completed in every way ready for sea so far as specified, & tried under steam by the engineers, defts., previous to being handed over to the co.; the result of such trial to be to the satisfaction of the co.'s inspector. The price of the work was to be £5,800, & was to be paid as the work progressed, in the following manner, viz. £2,000 when the boilers were plated, and £2,000 when the whole of the work was ready for fixing on board, & the balance, £1,800, when the work was fully completed & tried under steam. These payments were only to be made on the certificate of pltf.'s inspector. The old materials removed from the ship were to become the property of defts. The specification contained elaborate provisions as to the fitting & fixing the new boilers & machinery on board the ship, & the adaptation of the old machinery to the new. The boilers & other new machinery contracted for were completed, & ready to be fixed on board, & one instalment of £2,000 had been paid under the contract, when the ship was lost by perils of the sea. The value of the work actually done by defts. under the contract amounted to £4,118. The second instalment of £2,000 was subsequently paid, at the time of which payment pltf. knew of the loss of the ship, but defts. did not. Pltf. claimed delivery of the boilers & other machinery completed under the contract, & this being refused, brought an action for the detention of same, or to recover back the £4,000 paid by them to defts.:—Held: the contract was an entire & indivisible contract for work to be done upon pltf.'s ship for a certain price, from further performance of which both parties were released by the loss of the ship: the property in the articles manufactured was not intended to pass until they were fixed on board the ship; & consequently pltf. were not entitled to the boilers & machinery nor could they recover the £4,000 already paid as upon a failure of consideration.—ANGLO-EGYPTIAN NAVIGATION CO. v. RENNIE (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 271; 44 L. J. C. P. 130; 32 L. T. 467; 23 W. R. 626; on appeal, L. R. 10 C. P. 571, Ex. Ch.

7. ——— Agreement to finish goods.—HUGHES v. BREEDS, No. 19, post.

8. ——— Contract to build hotel—Agreement to take possession of work done—On bankruptcy of builder.—B., a builder, undertook for a certain sum to build an hotel for a co. of which defts. were the trustees, & to do all the work, except the plumbing & ironmongery, which were to be done by deft.'s workmen. It was agreed that if B. became bkpt., it should be lawful for defts. to take possession of the work already done, & put an end to the agreement, & that they should pay B. so much money only as should be adjudged to be the value of the work already done & fixed by him. Defts. employed a clerk of the works, whose duty it was to inspect the materials supplied by bkpt., & none were used upon the building but such as had been approved by him. Before the hotel was completed, B. became bkpt. Shortly before the bkpcy., some deal sash frames, the subject among other things of the present action, were lying at bkpt.'s premises; to these the ironmongers of defts. had supplied pulleys, & in this state they had been seen & approved by the clerk of the works. After the bkpcy., the sash frames were brought to deft.'s premises: the assignees then made a demand of the sash frames & upon deft.'s refusal to deliver them, brought an action of trover:—Held: this was a contract for the performance of certain work, & not for the sale of goods, & the sash frames did not become the labour & materials, & is within Stat. Frauds.—CANADA BANK NOTE ENGRAVING & PRINTING CO. v. TORONTO RV. CO. (1895), 22 A. R. 462.—CAN.

f. Contract for sale or delivery of goods—Work done & materials supplied.—Pltf. agreed to supply a patent electric goods lift, to erect same in a certain building in Sydney & connect it with the supply cables of the City Council to be brought within the building for £355:—Held: this was an agreement to do certain work & to supply certain materials, & not an agreement for the sale or delivery of goods.—*SYDNEY HYDRAULIC & GENERAL ENGINEERING CO. v. 9. — Contract for set of artificial teeth—Statute of Frauds, s. 17.]—A contract to make a set of artificial teeth is a contract for the sale of goods, wares or merchandises, within above sect. A. ordered of B. a set of artificial teeth, which were by the terms of the contract to be fitted to her mouth; before they were so fitted A. died:—Held: B. could not sue A.'s exor. in an action for work & labour done, & materials provided for his testatrix.

As soon as the teeth were ready, B. wrote to A., requesting her to appoint a day when he could see her for the purpose of fitting them, to which she replied as follows: "My dear Sir,—I regret, after your kind effort to oblige me, my health will prevent my taking advantage of the early day. I fear I may not be able for some days.—Yours etc." :—Held: there was no sufficient memorandum of a contract within above sect. In order to decide whether a contract be for work & labour, or for the sale of a chattel, the value of the skill & labour, as compared with that of the material supplied, is not a criterion.—LEE v. GRIFFIN (1861), 1 B. & S. 272; 30 L. J. Q. B. 252; 4 L. T. 546; 7 Jur. N. S. 1302; 9 W. R. 702; 121 E. R. 716.

12. — Conditional sale.]—In a conditional sale there is usually a period at which the purchaser, having paid the price & received the goods, has no further rights against the vendor, although the vendor, on the other hand, has a right, if he thinks fit to exercise it, to repurchase the goods subject to the terms of the condition. . . . In a mtge., on the other hand, there is no sale of the goods & there is a debt always due from the mtgor. to the mtgee. until it has been satisfied by payment or foreclosure (CAVE, J.).—BECKETT v. TOWER ASSETS CO., LTD., [1891] 1 Q. B. 1; 60 L. J. Q. B. 56; 7 T. L. R. 21; on appeal, [1891] 1 Q. B. 638, C. A.

14. — Necessity for.]—Pltfs. instructed an auctioneer to sell by auction a number of bales of hemp & of tow. The goods were described in the auctioneer's catalogue as so many bales in different lots with the same shipping marks, & without disclosing the difference in the commodities. Before the sale samples of the hemp & tow were on view in a showroom on the floor of which the catalogue numbers of the lots of hemp & tow were marked in chalk opposite the respective samples, & defts.' manager examined the hemp but not the tow, as he was not intending to bid for tow. When the lots representing the tow were put up for sale in the auction room, defts.' buyer made a bid which was an extravagant price for tow, & the lots were at once knocked down to him.

In an action against defts. for the price of the tow the jury found that the auctioneer intended to sell tow; that defts.' buyer intended to bid for hemp; that the auctioneer believed that the bid was made under a mistake, but that he had reasonable grounds for believing that the mistake was merely as to value; that the form of the catalogue & the negligence of defts.' manager in not more closely examining the samples at the showroom & identifying them with the lots in the catalogue contributed to cause the mistake:—Held: on these findings, the parties were never ad idem as to the subject-matter of the proposed sale, & there was, therefore, no contract of sale.—SCRIVEN BROTHERS & CO. v. HINDLEY & CO., [1913] 3 K. B. 564; 83 L. J. K. B. 40; 109 L. T. 526.

16. — Deliverer to be paid commission on sale.]—The mere delivery of goods by A. to B., will not support an action at the suit of A. for goods sold & delivered, where it appears that A. was to pay B. a commission upon the sale of the notes for goods to be delivered may be treated as an actual sale, though the one party has not at the time a specific lot of the article in his possession, & actually set apart for the particular vendee.—BRUNSKILL v. CHUMASCO & KEATING (1849), 5 U. C. R. 474.—CAN.

17. Property transferred pursuant to award—Tender of price—Refusal to accept.]—Under a submission to an arbitrator of all matters in difference between landlord & tenant, the arbitrator awarded (inter alia) that a stack of hay, left upon the premises by the tenant, should be delivered up by him to the landlord by a certain day, upon the tenant being paid or allowed a certain sum in satisfaction for it:—Held: the property in the hay did not pass to the landlord on his tender of the money, by the mere force of the award, against the consent of the tenant who refused to accept the money, or deliver up the hay; & therefore, the landlord could not maintain trover for it; but his remedy was upon the award.—HUNTER v. RICE (1812), 15 East, 100; 104 E. R. 782.

18. Agreement by master of vessel to carry & deliver corn—Bringing back cargo of coal at fixed price.]—Where the master of a vessel entered into a parol agreement to carry pltf.'s corn from A. to B., & that after having delivered it there, he would proceed to C. & fetch a cargo of coals, which he would bring back & deliver to pltf. at A., at a certain price per chaldron:—Held: this was not a contract or agreement for the sale of goods, within Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—COBBOLD v. CASTON (1824), 1 Bing. 399; 8 Moore, C. P. 456; 2 L. J. O. S. C. P. 38; 130 E. R. 161.

19. Agreement to finish goods in tradesmanlike manner.]—If a written paper contain a specification of goods, & the vendor by it agree "to finish the goods in a tradesmanlike manner," this agreement does not require any stamp, as it is an agreement for the sale of goods, & not for the doing of work, & it need not be specially declared on.—HUGHES v. BREEDS (1826), 2 C. & P. 159; 172 E. R. 72, N. P.

20. Real nature of transaction regarded—Supply of goods—Discount of bills of exchange.]—In an action on a guarantee for the price of gold to be supplied to a working goldsmith in the course of his business, where the goldsmith had been in the habit of indorsing bills of exchange to pltf. & obtaining from him their amount partly in gold at the usual credit price, & partly in money deducting the usual discount:—Held: it was a question for the jury, whether these transactions were in substance a sale of the gold, or whether that was only colourable & the real transaction a mere discount of the bills.—EVANS v. WHYLE (1829), Mood. & M. 468, N. P.

21. Transfer of invoice by broker—Second purchaser's name substituted—Second purchaser took the following receipt signed by them: "Received from W. I. in store 296 Bush., 5 lbs., No. 2 Treadwell wheat, fire accepted; price to be set on or before 1st Aug. next." It was proved that the word "accepted" was intended for "excepted"; that the wheat was placed in a separate bin, & kept apart from defts.' wheat; & that nothing further occurred between the parties until Aug. 28, when it, with the mill, was destroyed by fire:—Held: the agreement did not by itself import a sale; & as there was nothing in the evidence to show that a sale was intended; pltf. could not recover.—ISAAC v. ANDREWS (1877), 28 C. P. 40.—CAN.

n. Sale of goods distinguished from bailment.]—When wheat or other merchandise is received in a warehouse or elevator nominally on storage for the person delivering it, but on such terms that the identical goods are so mixed up with others that they can not be returned, & the well understood course of the business is that, unless a price is agreed on, the party delivering the goods can only require an equivalent amount of the same kind & quality to be accounted for to him, the contract between the parties is really one of sale & not of bailment, whether the vendor is to receive the price in money or an equal quantity of goods or has an option to do either, as the property in the goods has passed to the warehouseman.—LAWLOR v. NICOL (1898), 12 Man. L. R. 224.—CAN.

o. Offer to purchase fish—Cleaned informed.]—If brokers alter an invoice of the owner of goods from the name of one purchaser to another, & send it to the latter with a letter saying, that, to simplify the transaction, they had transferred the seller's invoice to him, such invoice will amount to a contract of sale.—PAULI v. SIMES (1834), 6 C. & P. 506; 172 E. R. 1340, N. P.

22. Article lent—To be paid for if damaged—Price fixed.]—Pltf. agreed to "lend or let" deft. a musical snuff-box, on the understanding, that if it were damaged deft. was to pay for it, & £3 10s. 0d. was fixed upon as its value. The box having been damaged while in deft.'s possession, pltf. refused to take it back, & brought an action for goods sold & delivered, to recover the £3 10s. 0d.:—Held: the action might be maintained.—*BIANCHI v. 23. Sale by person having general property—Pawnor.]—The pawnor of a chattel still retains his property in it, though qualified by the right existing in the pawnee, which he has a right to sell, & by the sale to transfer that property to the buyer; & if the pawnee, on the buyer's tendering him the amount due, refuses to deliver it up, the buyer may maintain trover to recover it.—*FRANKLIN v. 24. Appropriation of goods delivered by mistake.]—A. bought goods of B., which were delivered to C. a carrier, to be by him conveyed to A.'s shop. C. by mistake delivered to A. goods of the like description, but of greater value, which had been entrusted to him to deliver to a third person. A. having in ignorance of the mistake, appropriated the goods so delivered to him, afterwards agreed to pay C., who had paid their value to the owner, for the goods at the same rate that he was to have paid for those he had ordered:—Held: this was some evidence for the jury in support of a count for goods sold & delivered.—COLES v. BULMAN (1848), 6 C. B. 184; 17 L. J. C. P. 302; 11 L. T. O. S. 202; 12 Jur. 586; 136 E. R. 1220.

25. Deposit of corn with miller by farmer—Right to claim return of equal quantity—Or market price.]—Wherever there is a delivery of property on a contract for an equivalent in money, or some other valuable commodity, & not for the return of the identical subject-matter in its original or an altered form, this is a transfer of property for value, it is a sale & not a bailment, where, therefore, corn was deposited by farmers with a miller, to be stored & used as part of the current consumable stock or capital of the miller's trade, &

27. Delivery of goods to agent to be sold for benefit of deliveror.]—Pltfs. let a piano by a hiring agreement, the piano on payment of all the instalments to become the property of the hirer. The hirer delivered the piano to deft., an auctioneer, to be sold by auction, some instalments being then unpaid. Deft. received the piano in good faith, without notice of pltfs.’ rights, sold it, & paid the proceeds to the hirer. In an action for conversion of the piano:—Held: the hirer had agreed to buy, & had obtained, with the consent of pltfs., possession of, the piano, the delivery by the hirer to deft. had the same effect as if the hirer were a mercantile agent, that the words “delivery under any agreement for sale” were not confined to delivery to the person receiving the goods pursuant to a sale by the person delivering them, the words “agreement for sale, pledge, or other disposition” included a delivery of goods to be sold, by the person receiving, for the benefit of the person delivering, & therefore deft. was protected from liability by Factor’s Act, 1889 (c. 45), s. 9.—*SHENSTONE & CO. v. 31. — Ships.]—(1) A ship comes within the definition of “goods” in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 62, & therefore a contract for the sale of a ship must, in order to be valid, comply with the requirements of s. 4 of the Act.

(2) Under Sale of Goods Act, 1813 (c. 71), s. 52, the ct. may, if it thinks fit, order specific performance of a contract for the sale of a ship.

(3) The Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 62, defines “goods” as “all chattels personal other than things in action & money” (WRIGHT, J.).

(4) To constitute part payment not only must the money be sent by the buyer, but it must also be either accepted or in some way acknowledged by the sellers so as to constitute a recognition by the sellers that there is a contract. The contract here provided that the deposit was to be held by the brokers pending completion of the contract; hence the brokers received it, not as agents for defts., but as stakeholders, & defts. expressly declined to give any instructions with reference to it. I hold there was no part payment within the sect. [Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4] (WRIGHT, J.).

(5) The mere delivery of the pro forma contract, created or recognised by defts. in the way I have indicated, would constitute delivery of a note or memorandum in writing signed by defts. (WRIGHT, J.).

44. ———.]—Copies of treatise ordered to be printed.—Pltf., a printer, verbally agreed to print for deft. five hundred copies of a treatise, to which a dedication was to be prefixed, at a certain price per sheet, including paper. The treatise was 1910, deft. sold to pltf. the crop of hay to be grown during the ensuing season on a certain quarter section of land, & gave him a permit to enter & cut:—Held: as there was, at the time of the sale, no grass or hay growing on the land & to be severed, the subject-matter of the sale did not come under the definition of the word "goods" in Sale of Goods Act.—SHARPE v. DUNDAS (1911), 18 W. L. R. 86; 21 Man. L. R. 194.—CAN.

d. Sale of trees growing upon land—"Cullings."—In an action claiming damages for entering pltf.'s land & cutting & removing timber therefrom, it appeared that, prior to the date of pltf.'s deed pltf.'s grantor had sold to deft. the whole of the "cullings" on the land, i.e. such timber as was left on the land fit for cutting & sawing into lumber, & that a portion of the cullings had been cut & removed prior to the date of pltf.'s deed:—Held: the sale was one of "goods" within the Sale of Goods Act.—HINGLEY v. printed, & after the proof sheet of the dedication was revised by deft. & returned to pltf., he, for the first time, discovered that it contained libellous matter, & refused to complete the printing of it:—Held: this was not a contract for the sale of goods, within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, as extended by Statute of Frauds Amendment Act, 1828 (c. 14), s. 7.—CLAY v. YATES (1856), 1 H. & N. 73; 25 L. J. Ex. 237; 27 L. T. O. S. 126; 2 Jur. N. S. 908; 4 W. R. 557; 158 E. 47. — Goods sold by auction—Condition for resale if purchase-money not paid.—Where goods are sold by auction, subject to a condition that, if the purchase-money be not paid on the following day, they may be resold, & the loss recovered from the bidder making default, & the right of resale is accordingly exercised, the deficiency cannot be recovered in an action for goods bargained & sold, as the effect of the reservation of the power of resale is to make the original sale conditional, & not absolute.—*LAMOND v. 48. — Sale subject to approval of purchaser.—A. having applied to B., a coach-maker, to build for him a carriage of a particular description, the latter at his request, sent him a drawing, which A. returned with objections. B. thereupon wrote to A., expressing his regret that the drawing sent did not meet his approbation, adding, “if you order, every attention shall be paid to any particulars you may think proper.”

k. — Effect of agreement for resale.—Deft. sold pltf's. some tea, & orally agreed that he would take back, at an advance of ten cents a pound, such part thereof as pltf's. should have in stock unsold at a certain date:—Held: there was but one entire conditional contract—not one contract to sell the tea to pltf's., & another to buy it back—& therefore the delivery of the tea by deft. satisfied Stat. Frauds, & pltf's. were entitled to recover for deft.'s refusal to take back the unsold tea.—LUMSDEN v. DAVIES (1886), 11 A. R. 585.—CAN.

A. in answer wrote, “I have duly received your reply to my last, & can only continue to wonder at your disinclination to furnish me with so simple a drawing as I then requested, with the view of obviating as far as possible the chance of any misconception which might otherwise arise in respect to my order, which I can now of course give in general terms only, & on the assumption that you undertake to execute it in a manner which shall meet my approval, not only on the score of workmanship, but also that of convenience & taste.” The carriage was thereupon built & forwarded to A., who found many faults in it, & rejected it:—Held: the order having been given & accepted on the express condition that the carriage should meet the approval of A. “on the score of convenience & taste,” the latter was entitled, acting bonâ fide, & not from mere caprice, to reject it.—ANDREWS v. BELFIELD (1857), 2 C. B. N. S. 779; 140 E. R. 622.

If steamer not approved of deposit to be returned immediately.” On approval of engines, boilers, etc., the vendors were to dry-dock the vessel for inspection of ship’s bottom, etc. The purchaser’s inspectors inspected that portion of the vessel which did not require opening up, paid the deposit, & subsequently inspected the opened up portions & disapproved of her:—Held: a bonâ fide exercise of judgment on inspection entitled the purchaser to disapprove, & the deposit was recoverable back by him, whether the disapproval of his inspectors was based upon reasonable grounds or not.—*HAEGERSSTRAND v. q. — Executory contract.—In the case of an agreement to sell goods, under which the property therein is to remain in the seller until the goods are fully paid for, the contract is an executory one, & the default of either party give the other good cause for rescinding it. When on default of the buyer the seller seizes the goods & wards plffs. gave possession of the motor car to T. "on loan" none of the purchase-money for it having been paid, & T. sold it to deft. who bought in good faith & without notice of any right of pltf. in respect thereof. Subsequently the pltf.'s solrs. refused to approve of the restrictions in connection with the land. In an action to recover possession of the car:—Held: assuming that the two parts of the document were dependent on each other, the agreement as to the land did not confer a mere option on pltf. to buy, but was an agreement by him to buy conditional upon his solrs. approving of the restrictions; consequently the agreement as to the sale of the motor car to T. was conditional; a conditional agreement came within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 25 (2), & therefore T. had "agreed to buy" the car within the sect. & deft. had acquired a good title thereto.—MARTEN v. WHALE, [1917] 2 K. B. 480; 86 L. J. K. B. 1305; 117 L. T. 137; 33 T. L. R. 330, C. A.

SECT. 8.—QUASI-CONTRACT.

52. Wrongful possession or dealing with goods—Right of owner to waive tort & sue in contract—Goods obtained from bankrupt after act of bankruptcy.—A., after committing an act of bkpey. in order to procure his discharge from an arrest at the suit of B., draws & indorses to B. a bill of exchange, which C. accepts in expectation of receiving goods of A.'s into his hands. C. receives the goods, sells them, & pays the amount of the bill to B., the assignees of A. cannot maintain an action against B. for this money as money had & received to their use.

At this time A. being a bkpt. could exercise no disposing power over the goods in the hands of C. They were the property of the assignees, & the assignees may, if they think proper, bring an action of trover for the conversion of these goods, or they may ratify the act by bringing an action for goods sold & delivered; but they cannot consider the property as changed by the act of a party who held them under no contract or authority (LORD ELLENBOROUGH).—WALLER v. DRAKEFORD (1816), 1 Stark, 481; 171 E. R. 536, N. P.

53. ————]—After bkpey., 85 bundles of yarn, of the value of £114, had been delivered by the bkpt. to defts., as they alleged, to meet an accommodation bill which they were about to give the bkpt. The goods were accompanied by an invoice, which stated them to be bought by defts. of the bkpt.:—Held: the assignees might waive the tort, & bring assumpsit for goods sold & delivered.—RUSSELL v. BELL (1842), 10 M. & W. 340; 152 W. R. 500.

54. ——— Removal of goods—Plaintiff must prove title.—Where pltf. in an action for goods sold & delivered, proved the possession of the goods by himself, & their removal by defts.; & it appeared that the goods consisted of spar lying on the lands of A., & that pltf. claimed under A. by a written agreement not produced:—Held: this was not sufficient proof of title to the goods, from which a contract between the parties could be implied.—LEE v. SHORE (1822), 1 B. & C. 94; 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 198; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 48; 107 E. R. 36.

55. ——— Goods wrongfully sold by servant—Purchaser refusing to deliver up.—The servant of A., a farmer, having been ordered by his master to sell some sheep for ready money, sold them on trust to a person to whom he was indebted, & who refused to deliver them back to the real owner, or to pay for them, without deducting the money due to himself from the servant. The master brought an action for goods sold & delivered:—Held: pltf. had a right to waive the tort & sue in assumpsit.—JONES v. BATCH (1823), 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 106.

56. ——— Wrongful sale by co-owner of shares in ship—Presumption of agreement to pay reasonable price.—Pltf. was the owner of certain shares in a ship. Deft., who was the managing owner of the ship, being desirous of selling the ship, in a letter addressed to pltf. asked her for a bill of sale of her shares. This she refused to give, but subsequently she offered to sell her shares for £100. Deft., without further communication with her, sold the ship with the consent of all the other co-owners at a price which would have yielded to pltf. in respect of her shares a less sum than £100:—Held: there was an implied contract on the part of deft. to pay for the shares as upon a contract of sale, & though there was no presumption of law that deft. agreed to pay any price asked, yet it being found that the price asked was a reasonable one, a presumption arose from the facts of the case that deft. agreed to pay that price.—NICOL v. HENNESSEY (1896), 44 W. R. 584; 12 T. L. R. 485; 40 Sol. Jo. 601; 1 Com. Cas. 410.

57. When contract implied—Retainer of goods—Goods supplied under voidable contract.]—To an action by indorsee against indorser of a bill of exchange, deft. pleaded, that, when he indorsed the bill, he was so intoxicated, & thereby so entirely deprived of sense, understanding, & the use of his reason, as to be unable to comprehend the meaning, nature, or effect of the indorsement, or to contract thereby; of which pltf., at the time of the indorsement, had notice:—Held: to be a good answer to the action, & not to amount to an argumentative traverse of the indorsement.

In many cases the law does not require an actual agreement between the parties, but implies a contract from the circumstances; in fact, the law itself makes the contract for the parties. Thus, in actions for money had & received to pltf.'s use, or money paid by him to deft.'s use, the action may lie against deft., even though he may have protested against such a contract. So, a tradesman who supplies a drunken man with necessaries may recover the price of them if the party keeps them when he becomes sober, although a count for goods bargained & sold would fail (POLLOCK, C.B.).—GORE v. GIBSON (1845), 13 M. & W. 623; 14 L. J. Ex. 151; 4 L. T. O. S. 319; 9 Jur. 140; 153 E. R. 260.

58. ———.]—Deft. ordered of pltf. two dozen of port & two dozen of sherry, with the understanding, that, if it were not approved, he should return it. Pltf. sent him four dozen of port & four dozen of sherry. Deft. was not satisfied with its quality, & returned the whole, except one bottle of the port & one dozen of the sherry, with a letter to pltf., in which he stated that his order was for two dozen of each kind of wine; that he should not have refused to keep the four dozen if the quality had suited him, but that, as it did not, he returned the four dozen of port, minus one bottle, which he had tasted, & three dozen of the sherry:—Held: deft. was liable only for the price of the wine he actually kept.—HART v. MILLS (1846), 15 M. & W. 85; 15 L. J. Ex. 200; 153 E. R. 771.

59. ———.]—Conduct of parties—Acting in accordance with unexecuted draft—Onus of proof.]—B. had for some years supplied the M. Railway Co. with coals. At last it was suggested by B. that a contract should be entered into between them. After their agents had met together the terms of agreement were drawn up by the agent of the M. Co. & sent to B. B. filled up certain parts of it which had been left in blank, & introduced the name of the gentleman who was to act as arbitrator in case of differences between the parties, wrote "approved" at the end of the paper, & signed his own name. B.'s agent sent back the paper to the agent of the M. Co., who put it in his desk, & nothing further was done in the way of a formal execution of it. Both parties for some time acted in accordance with the arrangements mentioned in the paper, coals were supplied & payments made as therein stated, & when some complaints of inexactness in the supply of coals, according to the terms stated in the paper, were made by the M. Co., there were explanations & excuses given by B., & the "contract" was mentioned in the correspondence, & matters went on as before.

t. Foreign contract—Valid where made.]—A contract for the sale of goods to ptfs. at a certain price, payable in Toronto, was made by deft. at Chicago, through his agent there, the goods to be shipped by the G. T. Ry. Co. from Toronto. No sold note was signed by the broker until after action brought for the non-delivery; but it was proved that Stat. Frauds, s. 17, was not in force in Illinois:—Held: the contract, being valid where it was made, could be enforced here, though

Finally disagreements arose, & B. denied that there was any contract which bound him in the matter :—Held : these facts, & the actual conduct of the parties, established the existence of such a contract, & there having been a clear breach of it B. must be held liable upon it.

The onus of showing that both parties had acted on the terms of an agreement which had not been, in due form, executed by either, lies upon the party who rests his case on that circumstance (LORD BLACKBURN).—BROGDEN v. METROPOLITAN RY. CO. (1877), 2 App. Cas. 606, 11. L.

a. Statute of Frauds, s. 17.—Whether in force in Canada.—By 25 Geo. 3, c. 2, the above sect. is in force in Canada in commercial cases, & therefore a sale of goods to any greater value than £10 sterling cannot be proved, where no part of the goods have been delivered, no earnest given, & no memorandum in writing made of the contract.—HUNT v. BRUCE (1901), 8 Q. P. R. 1235.—CAN.

68. Contract for sale of goods & other objects—Entire contract.—L., a cornfactor at N., agreed to sell barley of pltf. to deft., to be delivered at L.’s warehouse at D., to go by the first boat of L. which went from N. to D., at 38s. per quarter, which was a higher price on account of its being to be delivered at L.’s expense ; & the barley being then in the hands of T., deft. desired him to see it delivered & measured & put up properly, & the barley was sent by L.’s first boat, & the invoice delivered to deft., who requested time to pay, but afterwards refused to accept the barley : in assumpsit for the price :—Held : this was a contract for the sale of goods within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, & not a mixed contract for the carriage as well as sale, though the price was enhanced by the carriage ; & deft.’s having appointed the particular boat, & having desired T. to inspect the loading, did not amount to an acceptance on his part.—ASTLEY v. previously sold, by accepting a bill at three months from July 22, when requested; that pltf. sold deft. the wool on the above terms, consented to give time, etc., & drew a bill for the aggregate amount due; that he requested deft. to pay him the amount by accepting such bill, but that deft. would not pay same by accepting the bill, or otherwise. Pleas: Stating facts which rendered the contract as to the wool void under Stat. Frauds, s. 17. That pltf. sold the wool with a warranty, which he broke, & deft. returned the wool. General demurrer:—Held: the special contract failing as to the £531, the whole failed, & consequently the pleas were a complete answer to the action.—HEAD v. BALDREY (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 459; 2 Nev. & P. K. B. 217; Will. Woll. & Dav. 464; 7 L. J. Q. B. 94; 112 E. R. 175.

70. ———.]—A contract for the sale of goods of the value of £10 or upwards is not the less within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, because it also embraces something to which Stat. Frauds does not extend.

Where it was agreed by parol, between A. & B., that A. should sell B. a mare & foal, & should at his own expense keep them until a certain day, & that A. should also for a given time keep & feed a mare & foal belonging to B., & that, in consideration of all this, B. should fetch away A.'s mare & foal on the day named, & pay him £30:—Held: this, so far as it related to the sale of A.'s mare & foal, was a contract within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, & void for want of writing—no point having been made at the trial as to the value.—HARMAN v. REEVE (1856), 18 C. B. 587; 25 L. J. C. P. 257; 27 L. T. O. S. 172; 4 W. R. 599; 139 E. 71. ——— Severable contract.]—The traveller of A. & co. in London, having called upon B. in the country for orders, B. gave an absolute order for a quantity of cream of tartar, & offered to take a quantity of lac dye at a certain price; the traveller said the price was too low, but that he would write to his principals, & if B. did not hear from them in one or two days, he might consider that his offer was accepted. A. & co. never wrote to B., but sent all the goods:—Held: this was not a joint order for them all so as to make the acceptance of the cream of tartar the acceptance of the lac dye also, within Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—PRICE v. LEA (1823), 1 B. & C. 156; 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 295; 107 E. R. 59.

to £70. A separate price for each article was agreed upon; some A. marked with a pencil, others were measured in his presence, & others he assisted to cut from larger bulks. He then desired that an account of the whole might be sent to his house, & went away. A bill of parcels was accordingly sent, together with the goods, when A. refused to accept them:—Held: (1) this was all one contract, & within Stat. Frauds, s. 17; (2) there was no delivery & acceptance of any of the goods so as to take the case out of the operation of Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—BALDEY v. PARKER (1823), 2 B. & C. 37; 3 Dow. & Ry. K. Part of the timber was accepted by B., but he refused to take the rest:—Held: the whole formed one joint contract.—BIGG v. WHISKING (1853), 14 C. B. 195; 2 C. L. R. 617; 139 E. R. 80.

81. —.]—(1) In assumpsit, the first count recited an agreement that pltf. should grant, & deft. take, a lease of lands; & that all straw, etc., which should be on the lands when possession was given up to deft., should be valued to pltf. by persons named respectively by pltf. & deft., & the amount paid to pltf. by deft.; that, on the execution of the lease, deft. should accept it, & execute a counterpart; & that either party, making default in performance, should forfeit £300; mutual promises to perform the agreement; that deft. entered under the agreement, & took possession of the straw, etc.; that afterwards deft. proposed that the straw, etc., should be valued to pltf. by D., on the respective behalves of pltf. & deft.; that pltf. assented; that the straw, etc., was valued to pltf. by D.; that pltf. was ready to grant the lease according to the agreement, but deft. did not pay the amount of the valuation. Second count for goods bargained & sold & taken by deft. under such bargain & sale. Plea to the first count, that the first agreement was in writing, signed by pltf. & deft.; & the proposal & assent that D. should value, only verbal. To the second count, that the goods consisted of straw, etc., which were bargained & sold under a written agreement between pltf. & deft., according to which they were to be valued by persons chosen respectively, by pltf. & deft.; & that no such valuation had been made, but only a valuation by D.; that deft. was ready, & had proposed, that they should be valued as in the agreement; but pltf. refused.

Replication, (a) to the plea to the first count, that, by the proposal & assent, & the valuation accordingly made, pltf. & deft. respectively waived performance of so much of the agreement as related to the valuation, & substituted the valuation by D.; (b) to the plea to the second count, that the straw, etc., was bargained & sold under the agreement in the first count mentioned; that afterwards deft. proposed, etc., as in first count, & pltf. assented, & D. valued accordingly; by means of which pltf. & deft. waived, etc., as in the replication to the plea to the first count. Rejoinder, to replication (a) that the waiver & substitution were by word of mouth only. To replication (b) that the proposal & assent were by word of mouth only. On general demurrer to the rejoinder:—Held: the original was an entire agreement relating to an interest in lands, & necessarily in writing; even if the parties could waive the whole verbally, they appeared by the record not to have done so; & that a part of it could not be verbally waived, even supposing that part to have been, if standing by itself, an agreement not required to be in writing.

(2) The plea commenced by a general allegation that pltf. ought not to have or maintain his aforesaid action thereof against deft.; then followed matter expressly confined to the first count, with a verification & prayer of judgment whether the pltf. ought to have or maintain his aforesaid action thereof. The record then went on thus: & as to the second count, etc., with matter expressly confined to the second count, & verification & prayer of judgment, as before:—Held: the first part was a plea pleaded to the first count only, though informally, & was good on demurrer to the rejoinder.—HARVEY v. GRABHAM (1836), 5 Ad. & El. 61; 2 Har. & W. 146; 6 Nev. & M. K. B. 754; 5 L. J. K. B. 235; 111 E. R. 1089.

83. —.]—In consideration that A., who was tenant of a messuage & premises under a parol agreement for a seven years' lease, would give up the immediate possession thereof to B., in order that B. might enter thereon as tenant, & also as a compensation for certain improvements made by A. on the premises, & for the value of certain articles left thereon by A., B. agreed to pay A. £100. A. accordingly relinquished & gave up possession of the premises to B., who was thereupon accepted as tenant from year to year, at a different rent from that formerly paid by A.; & B. afterwards, in part performance of the agreement on his part, paid A. £51. In an action brought by A., in the county ct., to recover the balance of the £100 the judge ruled that the contract in respect of which pltf. sued was not a contract for the sale of an interest in or concerning lands, within Stat. Frauds, s. 4. The ct. on appeal reversed his decision.—KELLY v. WEBSTER (1852), 12 C. B. 283; 21 L. J. C. P. 163; 19 L. T. O. S. 298; 16 J. P. 458; 16 Jur. 838; 138 E. R. 912.

nothing was paid as earnest to bind the bargain, nor was there any memorandum in writing, signed by deft. or his agent; two things must be proved to entitle pltf. to recover: (a) that deft. in fact ordered the goods; & (b) that he accepted them with an intent to take to them as owner.—SMITH v. ROLT (1840), 9 C. & P. 696, N. P.

85. —.]—In order to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17, there must be both an acceptance of the goods, or part of them, & an actual receipt of them. In order to satisfy the same enactment it is not necessary that the acceptance of the goods should follow or be contemporaneous with the receipt of them; an acceptance prior to the receipt will suffice. In an action for goods sold & delivered, it appeared that deft. went to pltf's. at Liverpool, & said he wanted to buy from 150 to 200 firkins of butter. He then went with one of them to their cellar, where he was shown a lot of 156 firkins, six of which he opened & inspected. Afterwards, on the same day, pltf's. & deft. made a verbal agreement, by which deft. agreed to buy that specific lot at 77s. per hundredweight. When the price had been agreed on, deft. took a card on which his name & address in London were written "Edmund Robinson, 1, Wellington Street, London Bridge, London," & wrote on it "156 firkins butter to be delivered at Fenning's Wharf, Tooley Street." He gave this to pltf's., & at the same time said that his agents, Messrs. C., at Liverpool, would give directions how the goods were to be forwarded to Fenning's Wharf. Pltf's., by C.'s directions, delivered the butter to P.'s car's to be forwarded to deft. at Fenning's Wharf. Pltf. sent an invoice, dated Oct. 25, 1860, to the address on deft.'s card. He received in answer a letter purporting to come from a clerk in deft.'s office, acknowledging the receipt of the invoice, & stating that, on deft.'s return, he would no doubt attend to it. A clerk at Fenning's Wharf proved that Messrs. Fennings stored goods for their customers, & had a butter warehouse; that deft. had used the warehouse for fifteen years, & was in the habit of keeping his butters there till he sold them. On Oct. 26 P. & co. had delivered a part of the 156 firkins in question at the warehouse, & delivered the residue afterwards. The witness could not say whether any one came to inspect them or not, but he proved that they were delivered up by Fenning to P. & co. under a delivery order from deft., dated Oct. 27:—Held: there was evidence of an acceptance & actual receipt sufficient to satisfy the statute.—CUSACK v. ROBINSON (1861), 1 B. & S. 299; 30 L. J. Q. B. 261; 4 L. T. 506; 7 Jur. N. S. 542; 9 W. R. 735; 121 E. R. 726.

86. —.]—In order to satisfy Stat. Frauds there must be an acceptance & actual receipt of the goods, or part of them, with the consent of the vendor, & if before such acceptance the vendor rescinds the contract, the assignees of the buyer in the case of his bkpcy. cannot claim them.

Semble: if the assignees do any act to accept the goods it will take the case out of the statute.

Deft., on Nov. 3, 1863, entered into a verbal contract with W. to sell him 48½ quarters of barley, at 35s. per quarter. The sale was by sample, & the bulk was taken, on Nov. 7, by deft. to the Swaffham railway station & left there, with a delivery note: "Great Eastern Railway: To the station master, Swanham Station. Receive 97 coombs of barley, consigned to the order of Mr. W., of D., from T. M. H., Castle Acre, charges." It is the custom of the trade for the buyer to compare the sample with the bulk as delivered, & if the examination is not satisfactory to strike it, i.e. either refuse to accept it or allow it to remain as the property of the vendor; & it was in the power of W. to strike the corn if it had not proved according to sample. On Nov. 9 W. was adjudicated a bkpt., & on Nov. 11 deft. gave notice to the station master not to deliver the corn to bkpt. or his assignees, or any other person, without his written consent, which the station master promised. At the time of the notice bkpt. had given no order or direction respecting the corn, nor had he examined it to see whether the bulk corresponded with the sample, nor had he given any notice to deft. that he accepted or declined it. On Dec. 1 the assignees of W. claimed the corn; on Dec. 5 the railway co., on an indemnity from deft., delivered it to him. In an action by the assignees to recover the value of the corn:—Held: there was no acceptance sufficient to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—SMITH v. HUDSON (1865), 6 B. & S. 431; 6 New Rep. 103; 34 L. J. 90. Nature & effect of acceptance—Buyer not precluded from questioning quantity or quality.—

The acceptance & actual receipt of goods, which make a written memorandum unnecessary under Stat. Frauds, s. 17, are not such an acceptance & receipt as will preclude the purchaser from questioning the quantity or quality of the goods, or in any way disputing the fact of the performance of the contract by the vendor. The effect of such statutory acceptance & receipt is merely to dispense with the necessity of a written memorandum of the contract. Deft. purchased wheat of pltf. by sample, & directed that the bulk should be delivered on the next morning to a carrier named by himself, who was to convey it to the market town of W.; & deft. himself took the sample away with him. On the following morning the bulk was delivered to the carrier; & deft. resold it at W. on that day by the same sample. The carrier conveyed the wheat, by order of deft., who had never seen it, to the sub-vendee, who rejected it as not corresponding with the sample; & deft., on notice of this, repudiated his contract with pltf. on the same ground:—Held: there was evidence

B. What may amount to.

(a) In General.

See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4 (3).

92. General rule—Any act recognising contract.]—On a contract for goods within Stat. Frauds, the acceptance, to satisfy the statute, must be by some act or conduct on the part of the buyer, indicating an intention to retain the goods, or such as reasonably would lead the seller to think they are accepted, & this may be by retention of them for such a time as reasonably might lead to that conclusion.

There was a later case [Hunt v. Hecht, No. 119, post.], in which it was held that there was no acceptance unless there had been a reasonable opportunity to the buyer of seeing that the article delivered was such as had been ordered (BRAMWELL, B.).—BOWES v. PONTIFEX (1863), 3 F. & F. 739, N. P.

93. ———.]—BARNETT v. FARLEY, No. 122, post.

94. ———.]—It is not necessary in order to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17, that there should be an absolute acceptance of goods; there is sufficient evidence of an acceptance of goods within the sect. where upon delivery of the goods the purchaser has received them & done any act in relation thereto recognising the existence of a contract for the purchase of them by him, though he subsequently refuses the goods. So, where there was a sale of wheat by sample, & the purchaser having received a number of sacks of wheat delivered under the contract into his premises, opened the sacks & examined their contents to see if they were equal to sample, but immediately after so doing gave notice to the seller that he refused the wheat as not being equal to sample:—Held: that there was evidence of an acceptance.—PAGE v. MORGAN (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 228; 54 L. J. Q. B. 434; 53 L. T. 126; 33 W. R. 793, C. A.

h. Receipt & retention of goods.]—Where there is no sufficient memorandum of the bargain for the sale of goods, the mere receipt & retention of the goods for a few days, by the purchaser, is evidence upon which a jury may find that the purchaser accepted them.—SERVICE v. WALKER (1877), 3 V. L. R. (Law) 182.—AUS.

k. Machinery stopped in transitu.]—Where a purchase was made on behalf of a co. of certain machinery of which delivery was to be taken where it lay & part was removed by a carrier on behalf of the co. but was stopped in transitu:—Held: this did not show an acceptance within Stat. Frauds so as to render a note in writing unnecessary.—MOLIVER v. DUKE CO. (1879), 5 V. L. R. 449.—AUS.

96. Question for jury.]—By the conditions of a sale by auction, the purchaser was to pay 30 per cent. upon the price, upon being declared the highest bidder, & the residue before the goods were removed. A lot was knocked down to A., as the highest bidder, & delivered to him immediately. After it had remained in his hands three or four minutes, he stated that he had been mistaken in the price, & refused to keep it. No part of the price had been paid:—Held: it was a question of fact for the jury, whether there had been a delivery by the seller, & an actual acceptance by the buyer intended by both parties to have the effect of transferring the right of possession from one to the other.—PHILLIPS v. BISTOLLI (1824), 2 B. & C. 511; 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 822; 2 L. J. O. S. K. B. 116; 107 E. R. 474.

97. ———.]—In an action for the price of a fire engine sold by pltf. to deft., deft. pleaded Stat. Frauds, & pltf. replied, that deft. had accepted the goods. It appeared that deft., after the sale of the fire engine to him by pltf., had taken a person to look at it, & had mentioned who were likely to want to buy it, & that to another person deft. said, "I know that I am going to do it," & that to a third he said, "I have a concern in the engine":—Held: it was for the jury to consider on this evidence, whether deft. had treated the fire engine as his, & dealt with it as such, for, if so, pltf. was entitled to a verdict.—BAINES v. JEVONS (1836), 7 C. & P. 288, N. P.

98. ———.]—W., living at Hereford ordered goods, at a price above £10, of A., living at Bristol, & directed that they should be sent by the "Hereford" sloop to Hereford. They were sent accordingly; & a letter of advice was also sent to W., with an invoice, stating the credit to be three months. On their arrival at Hereford, they were placed in the warehouse of the owner of the sloop, where W. saw them; & he then said to the warehouseman that he would not take them; but he made no communication to A. till the end of five months, when he repudiated the goods. In an action by A. against W. for the price:—Held: the judge ought not to have told the jury that there was no acceptance & actual receipt under Stat. Frauds, s. 17, but should have left them to find, upon these facts, whether or not there had been such acceptance & actual receipt.—BUSHEL v. WHEELER (1844), 15 Q. B. 442, n.; 3 L. T. O. 101. Acceptance of delivery order.]—A hogshead of wine in the warehouse of the London Dock co. was sold for £13, & a delivery order given to the vendee. There was no contract in writing:—Held: the acceptance of the delivery order by the vendee was not an actual acceptance of the wine within Stat. Frauds.—*BENTALL v. They were sent to a shipping agent of pltf.'s in London, who received them & warehoused them with a wharfinger, informing deft. of their arrival. The wharfinger handed to the shipping agent a delivery warrant, whereby the goods were made deliverable to him to his assignees by indorsement, on payment of rent & charges. The agent indorsed & delivered this warrant to deft., who kept it for several months, & notwithstanding repeated applications, did not pay the price of or charges upon the goods, nor return the warrant, but said he had sent it to his solr., & that he intended to resist payment, for that he had never ordered the goods; & that they would remain for the present in bond:—Held: there was no such delivery to & acceptance by deft. of the goods, as to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—FARINA v. HOME (1846), 16 M. & W. 119; 16 L. J. Ex. 73; 8 L. T. O. S. 277; 153 E. R. 1124.

103. Acceptance by assignees in bankruptcy.]—Goods were sent to a trader on a contract of sale & return, within Stat. Frauds, & he having become bkpt. before the delivery of them, they were received & detained by his assignees; the vendor thereupon brought an action of trover, to which the assignees pleaded that the goods were bargained & sold before the bkpcy.:—Held: there was no acceptance to support a bargain & sale, & the property in the goods did not pass to the assignees.—SADLER v. WHITMORE (1840), 5 Jur. 315.

105. Receipt & retainer of invoice.]—Deft., a builder at Wallingford, gave pltf., a timber merchant in London, a verbal order for timber, directing it to be sent to the Paddington station of the G. W. Ry. co., to be forwarded to him at Wallingford, as had been the practice between the parties on previous dealings between them. The timber was accordingly sent, & arrived at the Wallingford station on Apr. 19, & deft. was informed by the railway clerk of its arrival, upon which he said he would not take it. An invoice was sent a few days after, which deft. received & kept, without making any communication to pltf. himself until May 28, when he informed pltf. that he declined taking the timber:—Held: although there might be a scintilla of evidence for the jury of an acceptance of the timber within Stat. Frauds, yet there was not sufficient to warrant them in finding that there was such an acceptance; & the ct. set aside a verdict found for pltf. as not warranted by the evidence.—*NORMAN v. (b) Acceptance of Sample.

107. Sample part of bulk.]—Sugars, which were in the King's warehouse under the locks of the King & the owner, from whence they could not be removed till the duties were paid, were advertised for sale by auction on Sept. 20, when samples of half a pound weight from each hogshead, drawn after the sugars had been weighed & the duties ascertained at the King's beam, were produced to the bidders assembled; & the auctioneer, having then before him the printed catalogue of sale, containing the lots, marks, & number of hogsheads, & the gross weights of the sugars; & also another written paper containing the conditions of sale, which latter he read to the bidders, as the conditions on which the sugars mentioned in the catalogue were to be sold; but the two papers were neither externally annexed nor contained any internal reference to each other, wrote down on the catalogue the name of the highest bidder, & the sum bid for the particular lots: having first informed the bidders that the duties were not then paid, but would be paid on the morrow by the seller; & after the biddings closed, the samples were delivered to & accepted by the purchaser, according to the usual practice at such sales, as part of his purchase to make up the quantity marked as weighed at the King's beam; & a fire having consumed the sugars on Sept. 22, before the duties could be paid, & without the default of the seller:—Held: (1) at common law there was a sale to change the property at the time & place of auction; though the goods could not be delivered till the duties were paid, which was known at the time; such being the manifest intent of the contracting parties; & consequently, the loss must fall upon the buyer; (2) assuming a sale of goods by auction to be within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, which whether it were or not was not now necessary to be decided, & therefore requiring to be evidenced by a memorandum in writing of the bargain signed by the party to be charged, or his authorised agent, except where the buyer shall receive part of the goods sold; yet here the delivery to & acceptance of the samples by the buyer; which delivery was made as part of the thing purchased, & upon which the duties were paid; at any rate, took the case out of the statute; (3) semble: taking sales of goods by auction to be within Stat. The co. warehoused the wheat, gave notice to P., & entered the wheat in their books as "from" deft. "to P." The usual course of business of the co., in warehousing corn, is to keep it for fourteen days free of charge, after which time it is removed by the consignee or delivered to him by the co. at his expense. It is also the custom for the consignee, before finally accepting the corn, to take a bulk sample & compare it with the purchase sample. The day after the arrival of the wheat, P. sent for a bulk sample: he examined it the next day, & said "do not work it," i.e. do not bring it home, "at present." Afterwards, on the same day, P., being in difficulties, sent to his creditors to call a meeting of them for the next day but one. Deft. & other creditors attended on that day. Deft. asked for an order for the wheat, which P. would have given, but for the other creditors, who interfered. Deft. then went to the railway station stopped the wheat, & directed the co. to hold it to his order. On an issue to try whether the wheat was the property of P.'s assignees or of deft. :—Held: assuming the transitus to have been at an end on the arrival of the wheat at the co.'s warehouse, there was no acceptance of the wheat by P. within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, & the property never vested in P.—NICHOLSON v. BOWER (1858), 1 E. & E. 172; 28 L. J. Q. B. 97; 5 Jur. N. S. 246; 120 E. R. 873.

122. —[Deft., a builder, being employed by K., for whom he had built a house, to fit it up & furnish it, verbally ordered some settees to be made for one of the rooms by pltf. at a price agreed on at the time of the order. Upon their being brought home deft. before they were taken from the cart, remarked that the legs were not so stout as he had ordered, & said, "I wish they had been stouter legs." Pltf., however, said they were according to order. Nothing further then passed on the subject, & deft. assisted pltf. in taking them from the cart & placing them in the room. After they were placed, K. came in, & objected that they were not wide enough in the seat, & thereupon deft. asked pltf. if they could be altered to meet K.'s wishes, to which pltf. replied he would consider, & let deft. know to-morrow what could be done. A day or two afterwards he told deft. they could not be altered on account of the expense, whereupon deft. refused to pay for them :—Held: there was no evidence for the jury, in an action by pltf. for goods sold & delivered, of an acceptance by receipt of the goods by deft. to satisfy Stat. Frauds, & a nonsuit was rightly directed.

It is not necessary, in order to satisfy Stat. Frauds, that there should be such an acceptance as would preclude a purchaser from making a subsequent complaint; but there must be such an acceptance as to show his recognition of a compulsion to take the articles delivered to him under a contract for the sale of them (BRAMWELL, B.).—BARNETT v. FARLEY (1864), 4 New Rep. 113; 11 L. T. 107; 12 W. R. 748.

123. —[Pltf. verbally sold to deft. 6 bales of wool. On July 31, the goods were sent off by pltf., & delivered at a railway station, & were received there & taken to his own premises by deft., who then unpacked the wool, & wrote the same day to pltf. stating that two of the bales were inferior to sample, & adding, "Please say what is to be done in the matter." Pltf. replied by a letter of Aug. 1, denying that the bales were not equal to sample. On Aug. 4, deft., who had been from home since Aug. 1, returned, & having seen pltf.'s letter, sent the goods back to the railway station, & telegraphed to pltf. refusing to accept them. Between July 31 & Aug. 4, deft. offered the goods for sale in the market, stating, however, according to his own evidence, that he had not accepted the goods, & that he would have to make other arrangements before he could sell. Pltf. having brought his action to recover the price of the goods from deft., the jury at the trial found that two of the bales were not equal to sample, & the judge thereupon directed a verdict, & gave judgment for deft. :—Held: judgment was rightly entered for deft., as there was no evidence of a sufficient acceptance & receipt of the goods, within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, to take the case out of Stat. Frauds; & deft.'s conduct had not precluded him from rejecting the goods as not equal to sample.—RICKARD v. MOORE (1878), 38 L. T. 841, C. A.

124. —[Deft. verbally agreed to purchase a specific quantity of barley from pltf., on the terms that the bulk should be well dressed & equal to sample. Pltf., accordingly delivered an instalment of the barley to deft., whose foreman received it & gave a receipt marked "not equal to sample." Next morning deft. himself inspected the bulk, & wrote immediately to pltf. refusing to accept on the ground that the barley was not well dressed nor equal to sample. In an action by pltf. for goods sold & delivered to deft. :—Held: there was evidence for the jury of an acceptance sufficient to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17.

Two days afterwards he sent his man to remove the sheep from the field to his farm, which was some miles distant, & on their arrival he counted them over, & said, "It is all right" :—Held: (1) this was evidence for the jury of his acceptance of the sheep, so as to satisfy Stat. Frauds, notwithstanding he afterwards repudiated the purchase, & sent the sheep back to pltf.; (2) qu.: whether under the statute, there can be an acceptance before delivery.—*SAUNDERS v. 131. — Resale of whole—By party already in possession.]—Where one person being in possession of goods belonging to another agrees by parol to become the purchaser of them, his subsequent acts may amount to proof of an acceptance, so as to satisfy Stat. Frauds.

Pltf. was the owner of some goods lying in bond, & entered in the name of deft., a custom house agent. Pltf. being indebted to deft. gave him a written authority to sell the goods, & pay himself out of the proceeds. Deft. not having sold them, subsequently agreed by parol to purchase them, & he then sold them, & credited pltf. with their value:—Held: this was evidence of an acceptance of the goods by deft.—*EDAN v. 140. Ordering employment of horses & servants for carriage.]—Deft. having agreed to buy a carriage of pltf.s, came after it was finished to pltf.s' manufactory, bringing with her a cover for the hind seat, & a set of traces, which the carriage had been previously made to fit. One of pltf.s. said the carriage was complete; deft. got into it, & said it was a very nice one. Deft. then desired pltf.s. to order post horses to take it home, stating, that she would call at 4.30 p.m.; she added, that she had brought a cover to put over the hind seat, & directed that it should be put over twice doubled. The cover was accordingly put over the seat in her presence & agreeably to her directions. The afternoon having proved wet, at 5 p.m. deft. came to pltf.s., & stated her intention, owing to the badness of the weather, not to take the carriage home that evening. Deft. afterwards refused to pay the price demanded by plffs., & did not take the carriage away:—Held: these facts constituted a sufficient acceptance to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—WRIGHT v. PERCIVAL (1839), 8 L. J. Q. B. 258; 3 Jur. 1145.

141. —[—A. agreed to purchase of B. a carriage, then standing in the shop of B., A. at the same time desiring that certain alterations might be made in it. The alterations having been made, the carriage was, at A.'s request, placed in the back shop. On Saturday, Nov. 14, A. called at the shop, & requested B. to hire a horse & man for him, & to send the carriage to his house on the following day, in order that he might take a drive in it, A. having previously intimated his intention to take the carriage out a few times, in order that, as he was going to take it abroad, it might pass the custom house as a second hand carriage. The carriage was accordingly sent to & used by A. on the Sunday, A. paying for the hire of the horse & man. A. afterwards refused to take or to pay for the carriage:—Held: there was a sufficient acceptance of the carriage by A. before Sunday, Nov. 15, within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, to entitle pltf. to recover upon a count for goods bargained & sold.—BEAUMONT v. BRENGERI (1847), 5 C. B. 301; 10 L. T. O. S. 227; 136 E. R. 893.

The course of dealing was that the wool remained on these premises till paid for. The wool in question was not removed or paid for:—Held: there was a sufficient delivery & acceptance of the goods, within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, to ground an action for goods sold & delivered, though pltf. retained a special interest in them, not properly a lien, in respect of the understood engagement not to remove them till paid for.—*DODSLEY v. 145. Continued use by buyer of goods already in his possession.—Not amounting to sale or alteration.—[A., being himself yearly tenant of a house to B., underlet the house & furniture at a weekly rent to C. A. being desirous of getting rid of his tenancy at the end of the current year, offered to sell the furniture to C. for £50; which C. thought too much, but verbally agreed to have it valued, & to pay so much as it should be found worth, on B.'s agreeing, to accept him as his tenant instead of A. The furniture was valued at £80, which C. refused to give, but then offered the £50. Before the expiration of the year, an agent of A.

took the key out of the door & gave it to C., telling him that he must settle with A. himself about the furniture. B. refused to accept C. as his tenant, & he continued to occupy the house & use the furniture as before, but continually giving notice to A. to take away the furniture, which he refused to do; & after the lapse of three months, C. sent it to a broker's:—Held: upon these facts, there was no evidence to go to the jury of an acceptance by C. of the furniture, under a contract of sale, to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—LILLYWHITE v. DEVEREUX (1846), 15 M. & W. 285; 6 L. T. O. S. 103; 153 E. R. 857.

Plffs. selected the stores, & sent them to the steamer, together with two barrels of flour belonging to deft., which he had sent to their warehouses to be so dealt with. Deft. directed plffs. to make out the bill of lading for the stores as shipped in their name, & deliverable to Messrs. H. & co. at Constantinople, assigning as a reason that plffs. were known to them. The bill of lading was so made out for the whole, including the flour, & the freight paid by plffs. Three days after, on Oct. 16, 1855, deft. repaid them the freight, & the bill of lading was handed to him; he forwarded it to his captain, but it was delayed in reaching him. On receiving it, in Mar. 1856, the captain searched for the stores at Constantinople, but they were not to be found. On Nov. 6, 1856, deft. sent the bill of lading to plffs., with a letter, saying, "I inclose the bill of lading for stores sent out to the Phœnix. Please see after them. I think the master of the steamer must account for them." In an action to recover the price of the stores:—Held: there was ample evidence of an acceptance & actual receipt by deft., within Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—CURRIE v. ANDERSON (1860), 2 E. & E. 592; 29 L. J. Q. B. 87; 6 Jur. N. S. 442; 8 W. R. 274; 121 E. R. 223.

B. kept it, but refused to pay for it, alleging that it was delivered upon an agreement that it should remain as security for the payment of certain outstanding bills which he had discounted for A. In an action for the price of the pianoforte :—Held : there was a sufficient acceptance within Stat. Frauds; & parol evidence was admissible to show the terms of the bargain.

158. May be after action brought.—Under a plea of nunquam indebitatus in debt for goods bargained & sold, it is open to deft. to take the objection that the contract is void by Stat. Frauds, s. 17. But, semble : the objection is answered by showing an acceptance & actual receipt of part of the goods after action brought.—FRICKER v. THOMLINSON (1840), 1 Man. & G. 772; 133 E. At the expiration of the tenancy the buyer tendered the price; but it was refused by the vendor, who denied the validity of the bargain. After this the buyer proceeded to take away the goods; the vendor prevented him, & took possession of them. In an action of trover by the buyer against the vendor :—Held : on these facts there was no evidence to go to the jury of an acceptance & actual receipt to bind the bargain; as at the time when the buyer took to the goods as owner the parol contract had been already disaffirmed by the vendor; semble : if the buyer had been authorised by the contract to take the goods as owner, & had, without any fresh authority from the vendor, taken to them as owner before the contract was disaffirmed, it would have bound the contract, not only in favour of the vendor, but also in favour of the buyer.—TAYLOR v. SUB-SECT. 5.—ACTUAL RECEIPT.

A. In General.

162. Effect of actual receipt—Contract with condition for resale.—Pltf. entered into a parol agreement to sell to deft. a mare for £20 subject to the condition that, if it should prove to be in foal deft. should, on receiving £12 from pltf., return it on request. Pltf. delivered the mare & received £20. On its proving to be in foal, he tendered to deft. £12 & requested him to return the mare which deft. refused to do :—Held : the contract to return it on payment of £12, was not a distinct contract of sale, but one of condition of the original sale to deft.; & the delivery of the mare to deft. took the whole agreement out of Stat. Frauds, s. 17, so delivery of the logs to deft. he cannot object in an action for breach of the agreement in not paying a sum of money to a creditor of pltf. in consideration of getting the logs, that the contract is void under Stat. Frauds, not being in writing.—DOLLARD v. POTTS (1866), 6 All. 443.—CAN.

165. Order to seller's agent to deliver.]—A written order given by the seller of goods to the buyer, directing the person in whose care the goods are to deliver them, is a sufficient delivery within Stat. Frauds.—SEARLE v. KEEVES (1797), 2 Esp. 598; 170 E. R. 468.

166. Delivery of sample part of bulk.]—When goods are sold by sample, & the sample delivered is part of the bulk, & the bulk thereby diminished, this is a part delivery within Stat. Frauds.—KLINITZ v. SURREY (1805), 5 Esp. 267; 170 E. R. 807.

*Annotations:—Refd. Maclean v. Dunn (1828), 4 Bing. 722; Durrell & Evans (1862), 1 H. & C. 174.

167. Shipment abroad.]—(1) Where a party in England refuses to accept goods which he has agreed to buy abroad, the delivery of them abroad, on board a ship chartered by him is not a sufficient delivery to render unnecessary a memorandum of the bargain in writing, as required by Stat. Frauds.

(2) The special count of the declaration stated a contract for goods at the then usual & shipping price at the port of loading. Such count is not supported by the memorandum of an agreement which is silent as to the price altogether. Neither can the count be maintained by the presumption that the law will affix a reasonable price, that is, such a price as the jury, upon the trial of the cause, shall, under all the circumstances, decide to be reasonable, to the commodity where the memorandum is silent as to the price, inasmuch as the then usual & shipping price at the port of loading & the reasonable price affixed by the law, may be totally different.—ACEBAL v. LEVY (1834), 10 Bing. 376; 4 Moo. & S. 217; 3 L. J. C. P. 98; 131 E. R. 949.

168. Delivery of excess—Refusal to accept—Sample taken.]—A. gave B. a written order for 10 firkins of butter, which were to be sent to A. by a particular carrier. B. sent by that carrier 12 firkins instead of 10. A. refused to receive more than 10 firkins; & as the carrier would not deliver less than the whole number sent, he refused to take the butter at all. He, however, drew a sample from one of the firkins.—Held: under these circumstances, there had been neither an actual nor a constructive delivery of the butter to A., & consequently no acceptance thereof by him, so as to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—GORMAN v. BODDY (1845), 2 Car. & Kir. 145.

169. — Goods retained but no appropriation made.]—In an action for goods sold & delivered, to recover the price of ten hogsheads of claret, it appeared that defts., having verbally ordered certain hogsheads of pltf. the latter, in Oct., sent them fifteen, whereupon defts. by letter, informed pltf. that they had requested ten only should be shipped, & that they could take that number only on their proving satisfactory, & that they would hold the other five on pltf.'s account. In answer to this, pltf. replied by letter, which, after stating that he regretted that any misunderstanding as to defts.' order should have taken place; & after stating that other vintages were inferior, & that the wine sent was of superior character concluded thus:—"You will ascertain in the spring whether you have room for it, & you have seen that we are not stringent with old customers as to credit." Defts. placed the wine in a bonded warehouse in their own names, & shortly afterwards tasted the wine, & disapproved of it, & gave pltf. notice in the early part of April, that they would not take any part of it.—Held: (1) supposing there was a written contract by which defts. were bound to take ten hogsheads of claret, that contract was not executed, as fifteen & not ten hogsheads had been delivered, & no particular ten had been selected out of the fifteen; & (2) there was no acceptance within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, inasmuch as defts. under the contract had the option of rejecting the wine in the spring, & they had availed themselves of that option.—CUNLIFFE v. HARRISON (1851), 6 Exch. 903; 20 L. J. Ex. 325; 17 L. T. O. S. 189; 155 E. R. 813.

170. Potatoes dug by buyer—Part disposed of.]—Pltf., by parol agreed to buy of deft. all the potatoes in a certain field of deft.'s, at so much a ton, & to dig & remove them at his own expense. He employed & paid labourers to dig them, & sent his own sacks to the field, in which sacks the potatoes, as they were dug, were placed by his men, & the sacks were then carried to another part of the field, & the potatoes there emptied out of them in heaps, or "clamped," on the ground. During the digging, one sackful of the potatoes was, by pltf.'s authority, taken by one of the men employed, & consumed by him for food. Before the whole were dug deft. refused to complete his contract, or to permit the residue of the potatoes to be dug, or those which had been dug to be removed from his field.—Held: there was, on the above state of facts, evidence of a part delivery & acceptance of the goods, to take the case out of Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—SMITH v. HUDSON (1863), 8 L. T. 253.

172. Timber cut by buyer & resold.]—A sale of growing timber, to be taken away as soon as possible by the purchaser, is not a contract or sale of land, or any interest therein, within Stat. Frauds, s. 4.

Deft. by word of mouth purchased certain growing trees for £26 of pltf. on the terms that he, deft., should remove them as soon as possible. Deft. accordingly cut down some of the trees & agreed to sell the tops & stumps to a third person. Pltf. then countermanded the sale, & prohibited deft. from cutting down the rest of the trees. Deft., however, cut down the remainder, & carried the whole away.—Held: the case was within

173. Goods in possession of sheriff.—The owner of goods which are in the custody of the sheriff under a fi. fa. may make a valid sale & delivery of possession of them to a purchaser.

D., a shipbuilder, being indebted to pltf. in a large sum, as security made an equitable assignment to them, dated May 21, 1875, of all his right & interest in a steamship built for but not delivered to the Turkish Govt., & retained by D. as having a lien on the vessel for its price. D. also agreed to execute any further assurance of the ship to pltf. which they might require. This assignment was not registered under Bills of Sale Act, 1854 (c. 36), nor was the ship registered as a British ship under Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 19. By an agreement, dated June 24, 1876, D. agreed to sell to pltf. certain machinery, fixtures, & loose tools upon his business premises at a valuation, but this agreement was never signed by the parties to it. On July 18, 1876, the sheriff, under an execution issued upon a judgment obtained against D. by a creditor, took possession of the machinery, fixtures, & tools, & also of the steamship. On Aug. 22, pltf., the sheriff's officer being still in possession, under an authority from D. took formal possession of part of the articles comprised in the agreement of June 24, 1876. Deft., having obtained a judgment against D., a writ of fi. fa. was issued, & on Sept. 13 a levy on the machinery, fixtures, tools, etc., was made under the writ. On an interpleader issue to try pltf.'s right to the steamship, & to the machinery, etc., as against deft. :—Held : pltf. had a good title to the ship, & to the machinery, etc., as against deft., because the possession taken by pltf. on Aug. 22, of the machinery, etc., constituted a sufficient actual acceptance & receipt to take the agreement of May 21 out of Stat. Frauds, s. 17, & the sale by D. to pltf. of the machinery, etc., was valid, notwithstanding they were in the custody of the sheriff when pltf. took possession.—UNION BANK OF LONDON v. LENANTON (1878), 3 C. P. D. 243; 47 L. J. Q. B. 409; 38 L. T. 698; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 600, C. A.

(b) Goods Remaining in Seller's Possession.

174. General rule.—It is not disputed that if a vendor who has sold goods should, after the sale has been completed, agree with the vendee to retain the physical possession of the goods, but on such terms that the nature & character of his former possession is changed from that of owner to that of bailee for the purchaser, that transaction will amount to an acceptance & actual receipt of the goods within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, & necessarily to a good constructive delivery sufficient to create a pledge (LORD ATKINSON).—DUBLIN CITY DISTILLERY, LTD. v. DOHERTY, [1914] A. C. 823; 83 L. J. P. 175. Goods remaining at buyer's request.—If a man bargains for the purchase of goods, & desires the vendor to keep them in his possession for an especial purpose for the vendee, & the vendor accepts the order, this is a sufficient delivery of the goods within Stat. Frauds. It is no objection to a constructive delivery of goods, that it is made by words, parcel of the parol contract of sale.—ELMORE v. STONE (1809), 1 Taunt. 458; 127 E. R. 912.

180. —.]—The case for deft. had been put upon the point that there had been no acceptance of the horses, but there was abundant evidence of it. No doubt under the conditions there could not have been a change of property before payment without pltf.'s assent; but there was evidence of such assent. Deft. with the consent of pltf., left the horses in the stable & it might be inferred that he did so as owner of the horses. That was put to the jury as evidence that deft. had taken possession of the horses & they found, in effect, that he had. There was evidence to support that conclusion, & therefore the verdict must stand (LORD COLERIDGE, C.J.).—FARRER v. KIRKBY (1888), 4 T. L. R. 543, D. C.

181. Goods remaining at seller's request.—Pltf. sold a horse to deft., by verbal agreement, for a sum above £10. The bargain was for immediate delivery; but pltf. requested deft. to lend the horse to him, pltf., & by deft.'s consent, pltf. kept the horse. Afterwards deft. refused to take the horse. The jury, on the question being put to them, found that the bargain was complete before the arrangement as to the loan took place:—Held: there was an acceptance of the horse by deft. within the exception of Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—MARVIN v. WALLIS (1856), 6 L. & B. 726; 25 L. J. Q. B. 369; 27 L. T. O. S. 182; 2 Jur. N. S. 689; 4 W. R. 611; 119 E. R. 1035.

182. Request by buyer to buy back.—Pltf.s., wine & spirit merchants, kept a bonded warehouse, where they took in other persons' goods as well as their own, charging warehouse rent. On this warehouse pltf.s. had one key & the custom house officer another. Deft. agreed to buy of pltf.s. 2 puncheons of rum which were to remain in bond till wanted, deft. to have six months' further credit. Pltf.s. sent to deft. an invoice describing the puncheons by marks & numbers with the words "free six months," which was explained to mean that they might remain in pltf.s.' warehouse without charge for six months. Pltf.s. entered in the rum book of their warehouse the puncheons of rum as sold to deft., & proved that after this entry they had no power to get the goods out. The rum remained in the warehouse for two years, during which time deft. on several occasions asked pltf.s. to take back the goods or buy them of him:—Held: there was evidence to go to the jury that the character in which pltf.s. held the goods was changed; & if they held as warehousemen for deft., there was evidence of an acceptance & receipt of the goods by deft. so as to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—CASTLE v. SWORDER (1861), 6 H. & N. 828; 30 L. J. Ex. 310; 4 L. T. 865; 8 Jur. N. S. 233; 9 W. R. 697; 158 E. R. 341, Ex. Ch.

183. Request by seller to give up possession.—Pltf. verbally agreed to purchase from deft. a rick of hay standing upon deft.'s land for £100. By the terms of the contract pltf. was to be at liberty to send his men to tie & press the hay, & deft. was to cart it to the nearest railway station. On the following day deft. telegraphed to pltf., "Don't send press; am writing," & followed this by a letter in which he said that he had sold the hay to some one else, & asked pltf. "to be kind enough to give up possession." In an action by pltf. for damages for breach of contract:—Held: the contract was one to which the principle of constructive delivery & receipt under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, applied; deft.'s telegram & letter afforded evidence of such constructive delivery & receipt; & pltf. was therefore entitled to damages.—NICHOLLS v. WHITE (1910), 103 L. T. 800, D. C.

(c) Delivery to Servant or Agent.

184. Whether "acceptance."—If goods are ordered verbally, the delivery of them to a carrier is sufficient to bind the contract according to Stat. 185. —.]—A., a merchant in London, had been in the habit of selling goods to B., resident in the country, & of delivering them to a wharfinger in London, to be forwarded to B. by the first ship. In pursuance of a parol order from B., goods were delivered to, & accepted by the wharfinger to be forwarded in the usual manner:—Held: this not being an acceptance by the buyer, was not sufficient to take the case out of Stat. Frauds, s. 17.

We are of opinion that it will not be right to suffer any constructive acceptance to satisfy the provisions in the absence of proof of any express contract in writing (ABBOTT, C.J.).—HANSON v. ARMITAGE (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 557; 1 C. & P. 273, n.; 1 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 128; 106 E. R. 1295.

Inn, Banbury, on Apr. 27. The seed was delivered on Apr. 27 to one of the servants of the Plough Inn, at which A. was in the habit of putting up, & there remained till May 13, when A. refused to take it:—Held: as the place where the seed was delivered was a place appointed by A., & was moreover the inn at which he generally put up, this was such an acceptance as would satisfy Stat. Frauds, which requires an acceptance by the party himself to make him liable in the absence of a written contract.—HARRIS v. MATTHEWS (1839), 3 Jur. 1192.

187. —.]—Goods of above the value of £10, were verbally ordered to be shipped consigned to the A. co. at Liverpool. The A. co. were carriers by inland navigation to the residence of the vendee. The goods were shipped on board the M., a vessel selected by the vendor; a bill of lading was signed, making the goods deliverable to the A. co. at Liverpool, & was forwarded to them; of all which the vendee had notice, & did & said nothing. Then the goods perished at sea on their voyage to Liverpool; & the vendee refused to have anything to do with them. The above facts being proved in an action for goods sold & delivered, leave was reserved to enter a verdict for pltf., if these facts were evidence on which the jury would have been justified in finding an acceptance & receipt within Stat. Frauds, s. 17:—Held: (1) the shipment on board a vessel selected by the vendor & the signature of a bill of lading making the goods deliverable to the vendee's agent, though a sufficient delivery to support an action for goods sold & delivered, was not sufficient to bind the contract; (2) the receipt of the bill of lading by the A. co., they being carriers only, & the non-feasance of the vendee on hearing that the goods had been shipped, were not, under the circumstances, sufficient evidence to justify the jury in finding a verdict for pltf. Semble: the acceptance & retention of a bill of lading, by the consignee, may be equivalent to an actual receipt of the goods.—MEREDITH v. Pltf. sent the goods to G.'s wharf; whence the wharfinger sent them by a ship, selected by himself, for Liverpool; but the cargo was lost by the ship being wrecked on her voyage from London to Liverpool. An invoice was sent, at the time of the shipment, by pltf. to deft.; which deft. never received:—Held: deft. did not accept & actually receive the goods, within Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—HART v. 200. — Promise to give cheque & accept drafts—Subsequent delivery of documents.]—Sale of Goods Act, 1893, s. 4, sub-s. 1: "A contract for the sale of any goods of the value of ten pounds or upwards shall not be enforceable by action unless the buyer shall . . . give something in earnest to bind the contract, or in part payment, or unless some note or memorandum in writing of the contract be made & signed by the party to be charged or his agent in that behalf."

Defts. on Jan. 9, 1924, agreed to sell a quantity of wood to a partnership firm. This firm had previously bought another parcel of wood from defts. & owed money to them in respect thereof. The firm, being in financial difficulties, formed a limited co. for the purpose of raising further capital & duly notified defts. On July 9, 1924, after a discussion between defts. & the directors of the new co. with regard to the indebtedness of the old firm to defts., it was orally agreed that the new co. should give defts. a cheque & three bills in respect of the indebtedness of the old firm & that defts. should supply to the new co. the goods sold under the contract of Jan. 9, 1924, & accept the new co. as buyers of the goods. The new co., subsequently on July 14, 1924, gave to defts. the cheque & three bills, but defts. did not deliver the goods under the contract of Jan. 9, 1924, to the new co. The two partners in the old firm then brought an action against defts. for breach of the contract of Jan. 9, 1924. To that action defts. put in a defence signed by counsel in which they pleaded, in paragraph 3, that it had been agreed by the contract of July 9, 1924, that the new co. should give defts. on the following Monday a cheque & three drafts & that defts. would supply to the new co. instead of to the old firm the goods sold under the contract of Jan. 9, 1924, & accept that co. as buyers of the goods. The pleadings were then amended & the action was reconstituted, the partners in the old firm being struck out & the new co. substituted as pltf., & the cause of action was stated to be a breach of the agreement of July 9, 1924. Defts. then amended their defence & relied upon Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, as a defence to that amended action:—Held: (1) paragraph 3 of the original unamended defence which was signed by counsel constituted a sufficient note or memorandum in writing of the contract signed by an agent of the party to be charged to satisfy Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, inasmuch as the new departure with regard to the parties & the cause of action when the action was reconstituted must be treated as the commencement of the action within the meaning of the rule in Lucas v. Dixon, No. 214, post; (2) the promise on July 9, 1924, to give the cheque & to accept & deliver the three drafts did not, although followed subsequently by the delivery of the cheque & drafts, constitute an earnest to bind the contract, as the cheque & drafts were not handed over at the time the contract was made but subsequently in part performance of the contract; (3) the payment of the cheque & the three drafts was something given in part payment for the goods within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4.—FARR, SMITH & Co. v. PIDDING (1845), 6 L. T. O. S. 192.

205. — Agreement to set off debt.]—Pltf. owed deft. a debt, & while it remained due sold him goods by sample to a larger amount, & exceeding £10, without note or memorandum in writing of the bargain for sale. Part of that bargain was, that the debt due from pltf. was to go in part payment by deft. to him, but no actual payment of money was made by either, nor was any receipt given by deft. for pltf.'s debt to him. The goods were supplied to deft., who returned them as inferior to sample, & the jury found that he had never accepted them. Verdict for deft.

Pltf. sent a cheque for £10 by post, & later on, in answer to a telephonic message from defts., he sent a second cheque for the balance by post. These two cheques were received by the same post, & defts. at once returned them, alleging that there was no concluded contract. In an action to recover damages for non-delivery of the goods:—Held: as the cheques were not accepted by defts., there was no payment within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4 (1), & the post office was not defts.' agent to accept payment on their behalf so as to take the case out of Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71).—*DAVIS v. 208. — Conditionally retained by sellers.]—For a part payment by a buyer to satisfy Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4 (1), there must be an acceptance of it by the seller of such a nature as affords some evidence of the contract which is in question, but the acceptance need not be unqualified.

On Apr. 22, 1918, pltf. verbally agreed to buy from defts. for £387 10s. a quantity of saccharin, & on the same day he sent his cheque in accordance with the agreed mode of payment. On the following day, the duty on saccharin having in the meantime been increased, defts. wrote to pltf.: "As you are aware the duty on saccharin since yesterday has been increased practically double, & unless you are able to pay the excess duty we regret we shall be unable to send you the goods. We will return your cheque with pleasure upon hearing from you that you will not require the goods." Pltf. refused to pay the increased duty, there being no stipulation in the contract to that effect, & after some correspondence defts. returned over to the primary creditor when the horse was delivered. There was no delivery, no acceptance, no memorandum in writing, & nothing given by way of earnest:—Held: there had been no compliance with Statute of Frauds, s. 17, & the payment to the garnishee was not sufficient to satisfy the statute.—*WEESE v. 2s. 6d. a cord, & deft. was to pay M. the 2s. 6d. & the pltf. 1s. 3d. as owner of the trees:—Held: a payment on account by deft. to M. took the agreement sued upon out of the statute, being a payment on the contract as much as if made to the pltf.—*BRADY v. 210. Effect of part payment.]—A. being the occupier of a farm, quitted same on Mar. 25, 1821, & was succeeded in the possession by B. A. had sown forty acres with wheat, & it appeared that at a meeting between A. & B. in Feb. 1821, A. asked B. if he would take the forty acres of wheat at £200, telling him, that if he did not, he should not have the farm. B. said that he would take it. A person present then valued the dead stock, & having so done, asked to whom he was to value it; B. said that it was to be valued to him, & then promised to pay A. for the wheat & the dead stock on a given day, & he did pay a sum of money on account. B. afterwards had possession of the farm, the growing wheat, & the dead stock:—Held: (1) in indebitatus assumpsit for crops bargained & sold, & goods sold & delivered, the contract for the dead stock was distinct from any contract for the sale of the growing wheat, & the possession of the farm, & A. was entitled to recover to that amount; (2) as B. had had the growing wheat, & had made a part payment on account, A. was entitled in this action to recover the remainder of the price agreed to be paid for it.—*MAYFIELD v. (a) In General.

See, generally, CONTRACT, Vol. XII., pp. 131 et seq.

215. No special form necessary.—Pltf. on June 26, verbally agreed to purchase of deft. a smack load of herrings then on its way from Arklow to Liverpool, at 32s. 6d. per mace, to be delivered on the following day, & paid deft. £20 as earnest to bind the bargain. Deft. afterwards expressing a wish to have an agreement written out, pltf. said, "I'll write a bit of a note to specify I've bought the fish," & thereupon he wrote & gave to deft. the following memorandum:—"Liverpool, June 26, 1861—This is to certify that I, R. B., bought of B. J. all the fish in the smack Eliza Jane, now on her way from Arklow, the fish to be in good condition, at the price of 32s. 6d. per mace." The smack not arriving, & the fish not being delivered on June 27 pltf. subsequently declined to take them, & brought an action for breach of the parol contract to deliver on June 27. Deft. denied any contract to deliver on that day, & relied on the written memorandum. The jury found a verdict for pltf., but leave was reserved to deft. to enter a nonsuit if the ct. should think the written document conclusive:—Held: making the rule absolute for a nonsuit, the memorandum was to be taken as evidence of the contract. It was intended by the parties to be a reduction into writing of the terms of their bargain, &, although somewhat informal, it condescended upon all the important points, viz. the quantity & quality of the fish, & the price, & the omission to mention the payment of the deposit money was immaterial, as it was not necessary that it should appear in the written document.—BRUMBY v. JOHNSTON (1862), 5 L. T. 715.

216. Verbal acceptance of written offer.—Pltf., a seed merchant in Kent, wrote to defts., seedsmen in London, offering to sell the seed of growing turnips, to which defts. replied, asking the quantities & price for white globe turnip seed.

sufficiently authenticated if it has been recognised in writing by the party sued upon it. It is no objection to the maintenance of the action that deft. himself cannot enforce the same contract against pltf. because pltf. has never signed it.—*POPE v. t. Written acceptance of written offer.—A. signed & sent W. B. a letter offering to sell him goods of the value of Pltf. answered that all he could offer at present was the produce of 5 acres, at 18s. 6d. a bushel, delivered at the Bricklayers' Arms Station. Defts. offered to take 2 or 3 acres at 16s. 6d. Pltf. wrote, saying he could not accept less than 18s., his contract price with London houses. Defts. then wrote the following letter: "In reply to your favour of this morning, we beg to say, as our neighbours are giving you 18s. per bushel for white globe turnip, we, as a beginning with you, will take the produce of 3 acres at that price, to be delivered, as soon as harvested, free of carriage to London station. Let us know what other sorts you may have to offer, as also worzel seed of sorts for 1861 harvest. Waiting your reply, we remain, etc." Pltf. verbally told defts. he accepted the offer. Defts. having refused to receive the seed:—Held: there was a binding contract in writing within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, although pltf. never replied in writing to defts.' last letter.—WATTS v. AINSWORTH (1862), 1 H. & C. 83; 31 L. J. Ex. 448; 6 L. T. 252; 158 E. R. 810.

217. Written contract—Subsequent inconsistent terms.—Deft. authorised his brokers by letter to buy for him a cargo of bone ash at a certain price per ton, "on a basis of 70 per cent. mean of two London chemists: usual London terms, viz. cash in twenty-eight days, less 2½ per cent." This offer was communicated by deft.'s brokers to the sellers' brokers by letter as follows: "We can take the cargo at, etc., cash in twenty-eight days from last day of landing, less 2½ per cent.: to be analysed by two London chemists." The sellers accepted the offer, & sent a bought-note to the buyer's brokers, describing the terms of payment thus, "Payment, cash before delivery, allowing a discount of 2½ per cent. equal to cash in Liverpool within twenty-eight days from last day of landing":—Held: there was no substantial difference between the offer & the acceptance, & consequently that there was a binding contract between the parties.—HEYWORTH v. KNIGHT (1864), 17 C. B. N. S. 298; 4 New Rep. 288; 33 L. J. C. P. 298; 10 Jur. N. S. 866; 144 E. R. 120. Annotation:—Reid. Chinnock v. Ely (1864), 11 L. T. 536.

218. Railway company's delivery note.—In an action by pltf. for the price of goods sold & delivered, defts. counterclaimed for damages for breach of contract. The counterclaim was based upon a contract for the sale of potatoes alleged to have been verbally made between defts. & pltf. Defts. alleged that they sent to pltf. certain bags on account of the contract, & they relied upon a railway co.'s delivery note signed by one of pltf. in which the receipt of the bags was acknowledged, as a note or memorandum of the contract within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, & they also relied upon the sending of the bags as an earnest to bind the contract:—Held: (1) the railway co.'s delivery note was not a note or memorandum of the contract within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, & (2) the bags were merely sent to facilitate performance of the contract & could not be regarded as an earnest given to bind it.—SUMNER & LEIVESLEY v. BROWN (JOHN) & CO. (1909), 25 T. L. R. 745.

£10 & upwards on condition therein specified. B. by a subsequent letter accepted A.'s offer:—Held: Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (No. 1422), s. 9 (1), requiring a note or memorandum in writing of the contract did not preclude B. from enforcing the agreement to sell.—*PATTERSON v. 221. Contract not absolutely recognised—Condition added as to time.]—A memorandum in writing of a contract for the purchase of flour by deft. of pltf., a miller, taken by pltf.'s rider, in his common order book, in these terms: "Feb. 19, 1811, of John Smith, £64," which was explained by the witness to mean so much received of deft. in satisfaction of a former order; "Do. 40 of 3, 58s.," which was explained to mean a new order for 40 sacks of flour called thirds, at 58s. a sack, & this without any signature, is not a sufficient memorandum in writing of the bargain within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, to bind deft.; though it was read over to him by his desire at the time it was written. Such defective memorandum cannot be supplied by a letter written afterwards by deft., in which, though he recognised the order, yet he insisted that the flour had not been delivered in time, & therefore he was not bound to take it; & it was not competent for pltf. to prove, by the parol testimony of the person who took the order, that there was no such term in the contract as to deliver the flour within a given time.—COOPER v. SMITH (1812), 15 East, 103; 104 E. R. 783.

222. ———.]—A. sent to B. on Jan. 25, an invoice of five pockets of hops, & delivered the hops to a carrier to be conveyed to B. In the invoice A. was described as the seller & B. as the purchaser of the hops. B. afterwards wrote to A. as follows: "The hops I bought of A. on Jan. 23 are not yet arrived. I received the invoice: the last were longer on the road than they ought to have been; however, if they do not arrive in a few days, I must get some elsewhere":—Held: the invoice & this letter, taken together, did not constitute a note in writing of the contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—RICHARDS v. PORTER (1827), 6 B. & C. 437; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 497; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 175; 108 E. R. 512.

224. ———.]—Deft. verbally agreed to purchase of pltf. certain barrels of flour. Deft. afterwards wrote to pltf., stating, that he had received some barrels, which were not so fine as the sample, & were not the barrels he had bought, & that he would not have them. In answer pltf. wrote as follows: "Annexed you have invoice of the flour sold you last Friday. I am very much astonished at your finding fault with the flour. It was sold to you subject to your examining the bulk; & it was not until after you had examined it, & satisfied yourself both of quality & condition, that you confirmed the purchase. What was forwarded you was the same you saw. Under these circumstances you cannot, therefore, object to fulfil your agreement." Deft. replied as follows: "I beg to say the barrels I have received is not the same I saw. I took a sample with me from the sample I have, & the barrels I saw was quite as fine as I compared them with, nor was they lumpy. Now the barrels I have received is all very lumpy, & none of them so fine as the same. If you will take them back & pay charges, I will with pleasure send them. There must be some mistake about them":—Held: the letters did not constitute a sufficient note or memorandum in writing of the contract within Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—ARCHER v. BAYNES (1850), 5 Exch. 625; 20 L. J. Ex. 54; 155 E. R. 274.

225. — Terms of contract not stated.]—Deft., who carried on business at Manchester, orally agreed to purchase from pltf., timber merchants at Liverpool, a quantity of spruce deals, to be forwarded to Manchester by a carrier nominated by deft. An invoice of the goods was sent by pltf., to deft., & the carrier also sent an advice note to inform him of the arrival of the goods at Manchester. This note specified the number of the deals, & stated them to be consigned by pltf., but did not state their price, nor refer to the invoice or any other document. On Oct. 28, the day of the arrival of the goods, & on the following day, deft. inspected them, & subsequently wrote & signed the following memorandum on the advice note: "Rejected. Not according to representation." On Nov. 8, he wrote to pltf., rejecting the goods as not being according to contract:—Held: (1) there was not a sufficient note of the bargain within Stat. Frauds, s. 17; (2) the proper conclusion from the facts was that there had been no such dealing with the goods by deft. as to constitute an acceptance of them by him within Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—TAYLOR v. SMITH, [1893] 2 Q. B. 65; 61 L. J. Q. B. 331; 67 L. T. 39; 40 W. R. 486; 36 Sol. Jo. 306, C. A.

The goods were sent to A. at different times. The chimney glasses being damaged in the carriage, A. declined to receive them. A. afterwards, in answer to an application by B. for payment for the whole of the goods, wrote to him in substance as follows: "The only parcel of goods selected for ready money was the chimney glasses, amounting to £38 10s. 6d., which goods I have never received, & have long since declined to have, for reasons made known to you at the time: with regard to the rest, I am ready to pay," etc.

Sect. 4.—Contracts for £10 or upwards: Sub-sect. 7, B. (b) & (c).]

An action having been brought to recover the value of the whole of the goods, A. paid into ct. sufficient to cover all but the price of the chimney glasses, & the jury found that the chimney glasses were sold under a separate contract from the rest of the goods:—Held: the letter, inasmuch as it contained an admission of the bargain & of all the substantial terms of it, was a sufficient note or memorandum of the contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17, notwithstanding the subsequent attempted repudiation of liability.—BAILEY v. SWEETING (1861), 9 C. B. N. S. 843; 30 L. J. C. P. 150; 9 W. R. 273; 142 E. R. 332.

229. —]—Pltf. on Jan. 11, 1871, bought of deft. a parcel of wool, worth more than £10, "the whole to be cleared in about twenty-one days." A memorandum of the terms of the bargain was handed by pltf. to deft. None of the wool was delivered, & there was no part payment of the price. On Feb. 8, deft. wrote: "It is now twenty-eight days since you & I had a deal for my wool, which was for you to have taken all away in twenty-one days from the time you bought it. I do not consider it business to put it off like this; therefore I shall consider the deal off, as you have not completed your part of the contract." Pltf. had, in fact, completed his part on the true construction of the contract. On Feb. 9, in answer to the pltf.'s request to see a copy of the contract contained in the memorandum of Jan., deft. wrote in these terms, enclosing a copy: "I beg to enclose copy of your letter of Jan. 11." In an action for non-delivery of the wool:—Held: the letter of Feb. 9, with its enclosure, taken in connection with that of Feb. 8, constituted an unambiguous recognition of the existence of the contract & of its terms; & there was, therefore, a sufficient memorandum in writing signed by deft. to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—BUXTON v. RUST (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 279; 41 L. J. Ex. 173; 27 L. T. 210; 20 W. R. 1014, Ex. Ch.

c. General rule.—Where a contract which is sought to be enforced is contained in a series of letters or documents in order to constitute such contract in sufficient memorandum within Stat. Frauds it is not necessary that the letters or documents should expressly refer to each other: all that is requisite is that they should be connected with each other by necessary inference & natural intentment.—BALLANTINE v. HAROLD (1893), 19 V. L. R. 465.—AUS.

with a direction that they should be sent by a particular route. The goods were afterwards sent by another route, & a letter written to the purchaser by the vendors stating the original order & the alteration in the mode of transit, & enclosing an invoice which contained the particulars of the goods & the price. The goods did not reach the purchaser, who, on being applied to afterwards for payment, wrote a letter in which he acknowledged the original order, but declined to pay on the ground that the goods were not sent by the route directed. In an action for the price of the goods, the jury found that deft., by his conduct, had ratified the alteration in the route:—Held: the letters & invoice constituted a memorandum in writing of the original contract within Stat. Frauds, & the alteration of the route having been ratified by deft., pltf. were entitled to recover although the ratification was not in writing.—LEATHER CLOTH CO. v. HIERONIMUS (1875), L. R. 10 Q. 236. — Entry by auctioneer in sale catalogue against lot sold—Entry of agent's name.—Where goods were sold by auction to an agent, the auctioneer wrote the initials of the agent's name, together with the prices, opposite the lots purchased by him, in the printed catalogue; & the principal afterwards, in a letter to the agent, recognised the purchase:—Held: the entry in the catalogue, & the letter, coupled together, were a sufficient memorandum of the contract within Stat. Frauds.—PHILLIMORE v. BARRY (1808), 1 Camp. 513; 170 E. R. 1040, N. P.

237. — In conditions of sale in catalogue.—KENWORTHY v. SCHOFIELD, No. 257, post.

238. — Order signed by seller in books of buyer.—(1) An order for goods, written & signed by the seller in a book of the buyers, but not naming the buyers, may be connected with a letter of the seller to his agent mentioning the name of the buyer, & with a letter of the buyer to the seller claiming the performance of the order, to constitute a complete contract within Stat. Frauds.

(2) It is no objection to the validity of a contract for the sale of goods signed by the seller, that the seller cannot enforce the same contract against the buyer, because the buyer has never signed it.—ALLEN v. BENNETT (1810), 3 Taunt. 169; 128 E. R. 67.

239. Letter by purchaser alleging breach of contract—Letters by vendor's solicitors denying breach.—The purchaser of 100 sacks of good English seconds flour, at 45s. a sack, wrote to the vendors as follows: "I hereby give you notice, that the corn you delivered to me in part performance of my contract with you for 100 sacks of good English seconds flour, at 45s. per sack, is of so bad a quality that I cannot sell it, or make into saleable bread. The sacks of flour are at my shop, & you will send for them, otherwise I shall commence an action." To which the vendors answered by their attorney, "Messrs. L. & L. consider they have performed their contract with you as far as it has gone, & are ready to complete the remainder; & unless the flour is paid for at the expiration of one month, proceedings will be taken for the amount":—Held: a jury was warranted in concluding that the contract mentioned in the vendors' answer, was the same as that particularised in the purchaser's letter, & therefore, the two writings constituted a sufficient memorandum of the contract under Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—JACKSON v. LOWE (1822), 1 Bing. 9; 7 Moore, C. P. 219; 130 E. R. 4.

240. — Written on back of invoice.—A. having sold some cheeses & candles to B., sent him an invoice of the goods. B. returned the invoice with a note, signed by him, on the back, to the following effect: "The cheese came to-day, but I did not take them in, for they were very badly crushed. So the candles & cheese is returned":—Held: the contents of the invoice were sufficiently referred to by the note on the back of it, & the two together constituted a sufficient memorandum in writing of the bargain to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—WILKINSON v. EVANS (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 407; Har. & Ruth, 552; 35 L. J. C. P. 224; 12 Jur. N. S. 600; 14 W. R. 963.

241. — Inventory—Valuation—Letters by purchaser to vendor & agent.—Deft. having purchased the lease of a house at a public auction, he afterwards wrote to the auctioneer, requesting him to send the key, & stating, that his auctioneer was desirous of taking an inventory of the fixtures. The auctioneers accordingly met, & disagreeing as to the valuation, appointed an umpire, to whom they inclosed an inventory, stating the fixtures to be the property of plffs., & valued to deft. The umpire made a valuation, & appraised the fixtures at a certain sum, & returned the inventory with an appraisement duly stamped. Deft., by letter afterwards requested plffs. auctioneer to remove the fixtures, which was done; & on the following day, deft. wrote plffs. that he would attend at the house & pay them the amount of the fixtures, as settled by the appraisers. The first & last letters were signed by deft., but the first only was stamped:—Held: taking the inventory, appraisement, & correspondence together, they established a sufficient memorandum of the contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—HEMMING v. PERRY (1828), 2 Moo. & P. 375.

242. — Letter referring to goods of same character.—(1) The traveller of plffs., hop merchants in London, agreed with deft., at Leeds, for the sale to him, by sample, of a quantity of hops. Deft. wrote in his own book, which he kept, the following memorandum, "Leeds, Oct. 19, 1836. Sold J. D., deft., 27 pockets Playsted, 1836, Sussex, at 103s.; 4 pockets Selme, Beckley, at 95s. The bulk to answer the sample. Samples & invoice to be sent per Rockingham coach. Payment in bankers' at two months." This was signed by the traveller on behalf of plffs. Deft., on the same day, wrote to plffs., requesting them to deliver "the 27 pockets Playsted & the 4 boards which deft. had for sale. Deft. replied, giving particulars asked respecting quantities & prices. Plff. wrote accepting the offer & placing a definite order for the spruce boards mentioned in deft.'s letter. Receipt of this letter was acknowledged:—Held: the correspondence constituted a sufficient memorandum in writing to comply with the Statute.—KHODDES & Co., LTD. v. McKEEN (GEORGE)

& Co., LTD. (1921), 51 N. S. R. 178.—CAN.

g. ——Deft. verbally ordered goods from plff. & subsequently plff. showed deft. a written order & left a copy thereof with him. Later deft. wrote plff. "Owing to conditions here I will ask you to hold my order until I let you know, I may need same & let you have to cancel it." On his examination for discovery deft. admitted that the order he referred to in the letter was the said written order:—Held: the said letter & order were sufficiently connected by deft.'s evidence to be read together, & constituted a sufficient memorandum in writing to satisfy Sale of Goods Act, R. S. S., 1920 (c. 197), s. 6.—STRENE v. MATHIEU (SASK.), [1923] 3 W. W. R. 493.—CAN.

(2) The bulk samples & invoice were sent to debt. by the coach, pursuant to the contract, but he returned them as not answering to the samples by which he bought. The jury, in an action for the price of the hops, found that the samples did answer the contract:—Held: there was no acceptance of the goods within Stat. Frauds.

(3) Semble, the defence that there has not been a sufficient memorandum in writing of a contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds, may be taken under the general issue, without being specially pleaded.—JOHNSON v. DODGSON (1837), 2 M. & W. 653; Murp. & H. 271; 6 L. J. Ex. 185; 1 Jur. 739; 150 E. R. 918.

243. — Acceptance of offer by telegram—Signature of agent.—Pltf. having entered into a contract with C., the brother of debt., for the sale of some hay, brought an action against debt. for not accepting. The judge at the trial admitted letters & telegrams signed by C. as evidence against debt., & the jury found for pltf.:—Held: there was sufficient evidence of the authority, & the two telegrams, of which one was signed in C.'s name, & in the other the name of debt. was not mentioned as buyer, together constituted a sufficient memorandum of the contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds, on the ground that debt. might be treated as the undisclosed principal of C., who appeared on the telegrams to be liable as principal.—MCBLAIN v. CROSS (1871), 25 L. T. 804.

244. — Entry in auctioneer's sales ledger—No reference to conditions of sale.—Pltf. sent a mare to be sold by auction at debt.'s repository. Debt. advertised the mare for sale by auction on Mar. 28, 1872, & circulated a printed catalogue of the horses to be sold at his sale, with conditions of sale annexed, in which pltf.'s mare was described as lot 49. Debt. had a sales ledger, which was headed, "Sales by auction, Mar. 28, 1872," in which pltf.'s mare was also numbered 49; but neither the catalogue nor the conditions of sale were annexed to the sales ledger, nor were they referred to therein. On Mar. 28, 1872, the lots described in the catalogue were put up by debt. for sale under the conditions. Pltf.'s mare was put up for sale & knocked down to M. for £33, & thereupon debt.'s clerk wrote in the columns of the sales ledger left blank for this purpose, the name of M. as purchaser, & the price. M. afterwards refused to take the mare:—Held: the catalogue & the conditions of sale were not sufficiently connected with the entries in the sales ledger to make a note or memorandum in writing of a contract by M. to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—PEIRCE v. CORF (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 210; 43 L. J. Q. B. 52; sub nom. PIERCE v. CORF, 29 L. T. 919; 38 J. P. 214; 22 W. R. 299.

245. ——At a sale by auction subject to conditions, the auctioneer entered in his sale book the names of the vendor & purchaser, the subject-matter of the sale, & the amount of the purchase-money, but omitted, in the entry, to embody or make any reference to the conditions of sale. There was no other memorandum or contract in writing:—Held: there was no sufficient contract in writing within Stat. Frauds, & specific performance refused as against the purchaser.—RISHTON v. WHATMORE (1878), 8 Ch. D. 467; 47 L. J. Ch. 629; 26 W. R. 827.

248. — Letter—Envelope in which contained.—An envelope & a letter which is shown by evidence to have been inclosed in it are so connected together that the envelope may be used to supply the name of one of the parties to a memorandum in writing of a contract within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, or Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4.—PEARCE v. GARDNER, [1897] 1 Q. B. 688; 66 L. J. Q. B. 457; 76 L. T. 441; 45 W. R. 518; 13 T. L. R. 349, C. A.

249. — Recognising unsigned document.—A letter written by an agent within the scope of his authority, which refers to & recognises an unsigned document as containing the terms of a contract made by his principal, is a sufficient memorandum of the contract within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, & it is not necessary, in order to satisfy Stat. Frauds, that the principal should have authorised the agent to sign the letter as a record of the contract.—JOHN GRIFFITHS CYCLE CORPN., LTD. v. HUMBER & Co., LTD., [1899] 2 Q. B. 414; 68 L. J. Q. 250. — Signature of vendor's order book by vendee—Name of vendor stamped on cover.—A purchaser of goods signed a memorandum in a paper book, in which orders were generally put, slipped into a leather cover. The name of the seller did not appear in the memorandum, but was stamped upon the cover:—Held: this was a sufficient memorandum to satisfy Sale of Goods contained the terms of a contract for the unconditional sale of goods, was made at the time of the negotiation between the parties, but was signed by neither. Subsequently the transaction was referred to in a letter written by the vendor to the purchaser, apparently relating to the memorandum, but insisting that the contract was conditional, & that the condition had not been performed. An action having been brought against vendor for nondelivery:

Frauds; nor will the defect be cured by a letter from the vendee, in which the vendor's name does appear, unless the letter clearly refers to the memorandum.—JACOB v. 254. —[See, also, No. 254, ante.]—Deft. went into pltf.'s shop, & agreed to purchase certain goods in the aggregate exceeding the value of £10. The several articles, with their respective prices, were entered in pltf.'s "order book" on the fly leaf at the beginning of which were written the names of pltf.s; & deft. wrote his name at the foot of the entry, for the purpose of verifying the bargain:—Held: a sufficient signature of the contract by both parties to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—SARL v. BOURDILLON (1856), 1 C. B. N. S. 188; 26 L. J. C. P. 78; 2 Jur. N. S. 1208; 5 W. R. 196; 140 E. R. 79.

255. — Characters of parties.—In order to make a valid note or memorandum of a contract for the sale of goods within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, the names of the parties to the contract must appear upon the document as such parties. A., the purchaser from B. of goods above the value of £10, signed a document in the following terms, "A. agrees to buy the whole of the lots of marble purchased by B., now lying at Lyme Cobb, at 1s. per foot":—Held: B.'s name not being mentioned as seller, the document was not a note or memorandum of the contract within Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—VANDENBERGH v. SPOONER (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 316; 4 H. & C. 519; 35 L. J. Ex. 201; 14 L. T. 701; 30 J. P. 646; 12 Jur. N. S. 527; 14 W. R. 843.

256. — Admissibility of parol evidence.—On a purchase of flour, J. W., a duly authorised agent of deft. made the following entry in a book belonging to N., "Mr. N. 32 sacks cullasses at 39s., 280 lbs. to wait orders.—J. W." In an action by N. for the non-delivery of the flour, this entry was proved, & it was proved by parol evidence that N. was a baker, & deft. a flour merchant; & a correspondence subsequent to the purchase was put in relating to the delivery of flour by deft. to pltf.:—Held: the above entry was a sufficient memorandum in writing of the contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds: for that the parol evidence of the relative trades of the parties was admissible, & independently of the correspondence, showed that deft. was the seller & pltf. the buyer of the flour.—NEWELL v. RADFORD (1867), L. R. 3 C. P. 52; 37 L. J. C. P. 1; 17 L. T. 118; 16 W. R. 70.

257. — Agent's name.—At a sale of goods by auction, certain conditions of sale were read before the biddings commenced, but were not attached to the catalogue. An agent for deft. was the highest bidder for a lot & the auctioneer put down the price £105, & the agent's name opposite that lot. in his catalogue:—Held: sales of goods by auction are within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, & no sufficient memorandum of the bargain was signed to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17, the conditions of sale not being annexed to the catalogue. Had they been annexed, it would have sufficed to put down the agent's name, that of his principal not being necessary.—KENWORTHY v. SCHOFIELD (1824), 2 B. & C. 945; 4 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 556; 2 L. 258. — Agent acting for undisclosed principal.—D. M. & co., brokers in London, being employed by one S. to purchase oil, dealt with T. & M., brokers, who were employed by pltf. to sell oil, without either broker disclosing the names of their principals. D. M. & co. delivered to T. & M. a note as follows: "Sold this day for Messrs. T. & M. to our principal ten tons of oil," specifying the terms & price, which was above £10. The note was signed D. M. & co., brokers. Quarter per cent. brokerage to D. M. & co. D. M. & co. did not disclose the name of their principal S. till after the lapse of an unreasonable time, when S. had become insolvent. Pltf. sued D. M. & co. for not accepting the oil, laying the sale as by himself to D. M. & co. Defts. denied the contract. On the trial, pltf. proved a custom in the trade that, when a broker purchased without disclosing the name of his principal, he was liable to be looked to as principal:—Held: evidence of the custom was admissible, as not contradicting the written instrument, but explaining its terms, or adding a tacitly implied incident; & the note thus explained was a sufficient memorandum of the contract sued upon to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—DALE v. HUMFREY (1858), E. B. & E. 1004; 6 W. R. 854; 120 E. R. 783; sub nom. HUMFREY v. DALE, 27 L. J. Q. B. 390; 31 L. T. O. S. 328; 5 Jur. N. S. 191. Ex. Ch.

The draft was identical with the contract embodied in the conditions of sale & indorsement, except that the draft stated the vendor's name; but deft. never signed it:—Held: as the offer contained the names of both contracting parties, though one was only agent of an undisclosed vendor, on its acceptance there was a valid contract within Stat. 261. ——— — C., a broker, was authorised by deft. to buy cotton for him, but not to disclose his name. C.'s credit not being good enough to enable him to obtain a contract upon his own sole responsibility, he gave pltf. the name of his principal, & bought & sold notes were exchanged between pltf. & C., in which the latter was named as the buyer. C. sent deft. an advice note informing him that he had bought the cotton of pltf. "for him," & deft. did not repudiate the transaction. An invoice was made out to C., & the market falling, C. was called upon by pltf. to accept & pay for the cotton, & threatened with legal proceedings. Failing to obtain payment from C., pltf. sued deft.:—Held: the fact of deft.'s name being disclosed at the time of the contract did not preclude pltf. from having recourse to him; parol evidence of the circumstances under which the contract was made was admissible; & the insertion of C.'s name in the contract, though his principal was known at the time, & the subsequent demands upon C. for payment, did not necessarily amount to an election on the part of pltf. to give credit to C., & to him only.—*CALDER v. 262. Effect of party signing as agent.—H. made a verbal offer to C., which C. verbally accepted, for the sale to C. of 3,000 bales of jute to arrive. In a claim made by C. against H. for non delivery, the only note or memorandum in writing of the contract which C. relied upon was a document signed by H. which purported to be a contract for the sale of the jute to C. by S. Brothers, by H., their agent:—Held: there was no note or memorandum in writing, within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, of a contract of sale between H. & C.—Re COX, McEuen & Co. & HOARE, MARR & Co. (1907), 96 L. See CONTRACT, Vol. XII., pp. 148 et seq.

263. Must contain all essential terms.—Deft. verbally ordered of pltf. certain looking-glasses & other articles. The glass was to be best plate glass, & deft. required them to be sent by a particular boat. Pltf. sent an invoice & letter to deft. by post, with charges for insurance, loan of packing cases, etc. Deft. replied that the articles had not arrived, he objected to the charge for loan of cases in the invoice, saying nothing as to the rest. The goods were sent off, not by the boat deft. had ordered, but by another, & were lost on the voyage:—Held: there was not a sufficient note in writing of the bargain by deft. to satisfy a printed heading of the name of the trading firm representing the purchasers, but contained no other reference to the purchasers:—Held: such memorandum did not comply with Sale of Goods Act, 1893, s. 6.—WOOD BROTHERS v. KENNEDY (1907), 27 N. Z. L. R. 344.—N.Z.

auctioneer deposed that the sale was by sample; & it appeared that samples had been exhibited at the auction, but the entry in the auctioneer's books of the sales to deft. omitted to state that the sale was by sample:—Held: the sale having been in fact by sample, the entry in the auctioneer's book omitted a material term of the contract in not stating that the sale was by sample, & therefore was not sufficient memorandum of the contract under Stat. Frauds.—M'MULLEN v. HELBERG (1879), 6 L. R. Ir. 463.—IR.

In an action for breach of the contract defts. pleaded that there was merely an offer & no contract, that there was no written memorandum to satisfy Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, as the only document contained a clause which had not been agreed to:—Held: the words on the order form, "orders to be acknowledged by return," were not intended to be words of contract, & the words "by return" related only to the time within which, & not to the method by which, acknowledgment was to be made, & therefore there was a concluded contract & a sufficient memorandum & pltf. was entitled to recover.—*WILLIS v. Frauds, s. 17, because it did not amount to an absolute admission of the existence of a contract in the terms alleged by pltf., being equally consistent with the existence of a different contract.—CAREGAN v. RICHARDS (1866), 15 L. T. 252.

269. —. —.]—Inclusion of additional terms.—A traveller for defts. saw pltf., a builder, & showed him a specification of various kinds of timber which defts. had on offer for sale. Pltf. marked some items that he wished to buy, & the traveller said he might have them. Next day the traveller delivered to pltf. a sold note stating the transaction, but bearing in small print along one side the words: "Goods are sold subject to their being on hand & at liberty when the order reaches the head office." Pltf. denied that he ever saw this condition, & there was evidence as to the difficulty of reading it. Some of the items of timber not having been delivered, pltf. sued for damages for breach of the oral agreement in the county ct., & defts. relied in defence on the condition, or, in the alternative, on a custom of the trade corresponding to the condition. The county ct. judge gave judgment in favour of pltf., holding (a) the alleged custom was not proved, & (b) pltf. never saw the condition, & that an ordinary business man acting with ordinary care might be excused for not doing so:—Held: by the Ct. of Appeal, there was evidence to support the county ct. judge's finding; as the sold note contained a condition not part of the original verbal contract & not assented to by pltf., it was not a proper memorandum in writing of the agreement between the parties; & pltf. was entitled to succeed on the oral contract, the defence that there was no sufficient memorandum in writing of the agreement not having been pleaded.—*ROE v. 270. Memorandum containing no reference to quality.—Where a broker employed by the seller alone, effects a contract by means of a note sent to & accepted by the purchaser, a variation between this note & a note sent by the broker to the seller is immaterial. Letters not containing any reference to the quality or the time for payment of goods sold as agreed upon do not constitute a sufficient memorandum of the contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—*MCCAUL v. 267 i. Must show agreement of parties.—A statement in a letter written to a third person by one of defts., that he had an offer from pltf. for the purchase of a schooner, but not stating in the letter that he had accepted it, is not a sufficient memorandum in writing within Stat. Frauds, R. S. N. S. 1900, c. 141, s. 11, to enable the party making the offer to recover damages for breach of contract against the writer for failure to deliver the schooner.—*ALLEN v. Ambiguity—Admissibility of parol evidence.]—Declaration stated that deft. had sold pltf. eighteen pockets of Kent hops at the price of £5 per hundredweight, but failed to deliver according to promise. Issue being joined on non assumpsit, it appeared that the contract was in writing, as follows: sold 18 pockets Kent hops, at 100s.: & that a pocket contained more than a hundredweight:—Held: evidence might be given to show that, by usage of the hop trade, a contract so worded was understood to mean £5 per hundredweight.—SPICER v. COOPER (1841), 1 Q. B. 424; 1 Gal. & Dav. 52; 10 L. J. Q. B. 241; 5 Jur. 1036; 113 E. R. 1195.

The terms as to discount were not mentioned in the order. Deft. afterwards wrote to pltf. requesting him to send the invoice, which he did. Deft. wrote in reply a letter, signed by him, returning the invoice & declining to take the goods:—Held: (1) the order was not a sufficient memorandum of the bargain within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, as it did not contain the price; (2) the letter returning the invoice was not a sufficient admission of the contract as stated in the invoice, so as to satisfy the statute.—GOODMAN v. GRIFFITHS (1857), 1 H. & N. 574; 26 L. J. Ex. 145; 28 L. T. O. S. 321; 5 W. R. 369; 156 E. R. 1331.

For four years preceding, a variety of similar entries had been signed by the traveller, & goods had been supplied pursuant thereto, which had been accepted & paid for:—Held: the entry was not a sufficient note or memorandum of the contract, under Stat. Frauds, s. 17, to bind the vendees.—GRAHAM v. FRETWELL (1841), 3 Man. & G. 368; 4 Scott, N. R. 25; 11 L. J. C. P. 41; 133 E. R. 1186.

290. ——[Where the parties to the contract have not constituted the bought & sold notes the contract:—Held: the contract may be proved by parol, & the bought note signed by the broker may be evidence of the contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds.

Where the parties agree that the bought & sold notes shall be the contract, then such notes are the contract; but where the parties have not so agreed, it is competent to contract by parol, & the bought & sold notes may constitute the memorandum in writing of such contract (ERLE, J.).—*FENNELL v. 291. — Instructed to repudiate.]—By Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4 (1), a contract for the sale of any goods of the value of £10 or upwards shall not be enforceable by action unless, failing other alternatives, "some note or memorandum in writing of the contract be made & signed by the party to be charged or his agent in that behalf":—Held: (1) a letter signed by the party to be charged or his agent in that behalf, & referring to other letters as containing the terms of a contract may, although it repudiates liability on the contract, be a sufficient note or memorandum in writing; but if, while referring to other letters, it refuses to admit that they contain the terms of the contract, it is not a sufficient note or memorandum; (2) the letters in question omitted a material term of the contract; (3) a solr. instructed to deny a contract with which his client is charged is not the client's agent to make or sign a note or memorandum in writing of the contract for the purposes of the statute.—*THIRKELL v. 292. Sale by auction—Signature by auctioneer.]

—Two stacks of straw each above the value of £10 were sold by auction in separate lots to the same purchaser. The auctioneer wrote his name in the sale catalogue against the printed description of the first stack sold, but against that of the second stack, underneath his name, he wrote "do":—Held: this was a sufficient signature within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4 (1).—REYNOLDS v. HOOPER (1902), 19 T. L. R. 33. Annotation:—Foll.* Cohen v. Roche, [1927] 1 K. B. 169.

293. ——[Deft., an auctioneer, circulated a printed catalogue on the front page of which it was stated that he, therein described by name, would sell on a specified date certain lots of furniture; the other pages set forth the lots to be sold. At the sale deft. had before him an auctioneer's book consisting of large sheets of paper, each of which had pasted upon it a leaf from the printed catalogue, & on each side of the leaf a space for notes. Deft.'s name was nowhere written by him in this book. One of the lots, comprising certain chairs of no unusual value, which were the property of deft. himself, was knocked down to pltf. for £80. Deft. then wrote in his book against that lot the price at which it had been sold & the name of pltf. as purchaser. To an action by pltf. against deft. for delivery up of the chairs & alternatively damages for alleged breach of contract, deft. pleaded that Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, had not been complied with:—Held: there was within the sect. a note or memorandum in writing of the contract duly signed by deft. & otherwise sufficient, & an enforceable contract between the parties.—COHEN v. ROCHE, [1927] 1 K. B. 169; 95 L. J. K. B. 945; 136 L. T. 219; 42 T. L. R. 674; 70 Sol. Jo. 942.

294. Signature by party other than party to be charged.]—The nephew of pltf. having a horse to sell, some negotiations took place between them; but as they could not agree as to price the horse was not sold; subsequently, however, pltf. wrote to his nephew, making an offer for the horse, stating in his letter that he should consider it a bargain if he did not hear to the contrary. His nephew did not reply, & having a sale shortly afterwards of some of his effects, the horse was sold by mistake, the auctioneer having had instructions from the nephew not to sell it. Two days after the sale the nephew wrote to pltf. the contents of which letter showed that he intended to accept his uncle's offer:—Held: in an action by pltf. against the auctioneer for the conversion of the horse, as there was no memorandum in writing binding the nephew at the time of the sale, & no evidence that he had at that time accepted the offer, the property in the horse had not then vested in pltf., & he could not rely on the subsequent letter of the nephew, as that would not relate back so as to complete pltf.'s title at the time in question.—*FELTHOUSE v. 295. Signature by party to be charged—Verbal assent.]—A proposal in writing, signed by the party to be charged, & accepted by parol by the party to whom it is made, is a sufficient memorandum or note of an agreement to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 4.—REUSS v. PICKSLEY (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 342; 4 H. & C. 588; 35 L. J. Ex. 218; 15 L. T. 25; 12 Jur. N. S. 628; 14 W. R. 924, Ex. Ch.

296. 297. ——— No evidence of authority.]—In an action to recover the price of clocks sold by pltf. to deft., it appeared that pltf.'s traveller when he took the order for the goods wrote out in the presence of deft. upon printed forms two memoranda of it, putting deft.'s name upon them, & handing one of the papers to deft., who kept it:—Held: there was no evidence that pltf.'s traveller signed the memoranda as agent of deft., so as to bind him within Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—MURPHY v. BOESE (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 126; 44 L. J. Ex. 40; 32 L. T. 122; 23 W. R. 474.

298. ——— Agent exceeding his authority.]—Pltf. instructed defts., cotton brokers, to buy for him fifty bales of cotton, & they sent him a bought note, advising him that they had bought for him of H. & co., fifty bales, to arrive by a certain ship. In pursuance of this contract pltf. paid money to defts. Defts. being employed to buy cotton for other persons as well as pltf., had, in fact, entered into one contract with H. & co. for three hundred bales:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover back the money so paid, on the ground of failure of consideration, no such contract as that authorised & alleged to have been made having ever, in fact, been made.

Pltf. authorised defts. to make one contract, & they made a totally different one (POLLOCK, C.B.).—BOSTOCK v. JARDINE (1865), 3 H. & C. 700; 6 New Rep. 164; 34 L. J. Ex. 142; 12 L. T. 577; 11 Jur. N. S. 586; 13 W. R. 970; 159 E. R. 707.

299. Memorandum by seller's clerk—In presence of surety for purchaser.]—A memorandum written by a clerk of pltf.s in the presence of deft., that deft. had called to say that he would be responsible for goods delivered to H. is not sufficient undertaking within Stat. Frauds.—DIXON v. BROOMFIELD (1814), 2 Chit. 205.

300. Position of signature immaterial.]—Pltf., a hop grower, having sent samples of hops for sale to his factor, with instructions as to price, defts., who were hop merchants, called at N.'s office to see the samples, but could not agree as to price. Subsequently, on the same day, defts. met pltf., & after a conversation about the hops, they went with him to N.'s office, & there, in N.'s presence, made pltf. an offer for the hops, which, in the presence & hearing of defts., pltf. asked N. whether he should accept, & was advised by him so to do. Thereupon N. wrote out in his book a sale note in duplicate, each part of which was dated "Oct. 19." At the request of defts., the date in each part was, with pltf.'s consent, altered by N. to "Oct. 20," in order to give defts. a longer time for payment; & then one part, so altered, was torn from the book by N., & handed to defts., who took it away & kept it. The note so handed to defts. was in the following words: "Messrs. E. & co. bought of J. & W." etc. The note on the counterfoil in the book which was retained by N. was as follows: "Sold to Messrs E. & co." etc. The name "Messrs E. & co." in each part was written by N., & neither part was otherwise signed by defts. The samples & an invoice were subsequently sent to defts., & kept by them. In an action by pltf. against defts. for not accepting the hops the above facts were proved:—Held: (1) there was evidence for the jury of the intention of the parties that N. should be their agent for the purpose of making a written record of a contract binding upon both of them; (2) if that were so, the writing of defts.' name by N. at the head of the sale note was a sufficient signature, binding defts. to the contract within Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—DURRELL v. EVANS (1862), 1 H. & C. 174; 31 L. J. Ex. 337; 7 L. T. 97; 10 W. R. 665; 158 E. R. 848, Ex. Ch.; reversg. S. C. sub nom. DARRELL v. EVANS (1861), 6 H. & N. 660.

PART II. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 8.—C. (d).

• Sufficiency of memorandum—In absence of bought & sold notes.]—In the absence of a bought & sold note:—Held: the following memorandum:

"Sold R. G. (def't.), for J. R. (pl'tf.), one hundred loads of oatmeal, to be delivered here immediately, & to be full weight, & to be fully equal to sample, at 28s. per load, cash," was evidence of the contract, & as it stated all the

was the note of the parties, & this would take it out of Stat. Frauds.—ANON. (1773), Lofft, 330, 332; 98 E. R. 678, 679.

304. Delivery of bought & sold notes—Whether sufficient to satisfy statute.—Where a broker is authorised by one man to sell goods, & to buy such goods for another, an entry in his books of a sale of these goods from the one to the other, signed by him, is a binding contract between the parties. The bought & sold note, which is a copy of this entry, is not sent to the parties for their approbation, but to inform them of the terms of the contract.—HEYMAN v. NEALE (1809), 2 Camp. 337; 170 E. 306. ———.]—The entry of sale made in the broker's book is not of necessity to be treated as the only evidence of a contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds.

The terms of a contract of sale were entered in the broker's book & not signed by him but he delivered to the parties the bought & sold notes embodying the terms of the entry & signed those notes.—Held: the parties were bound.—GOOM v. AFLALO (1826), 6 B. & C. 117; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 148; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 31; 108 E. R. 396.

307. ———.]—A broker having a general authority to purchase spices for one person, having purchased some for that person on a Saturday, went to another person on the Sunday & offered them to him for sale, saying that he would deliver the contract on the Monday. The person to whom they were offered said, that he must have the contract on that day, the Sunday. A bought note was accordingly delivered to him on the Sunday. The broker could not say when he made out a sold note for the vendor; whether it was within a week or more from the Sunday; but stated that he informed him of the sale on the Monday or Tuesday. The entry in the broker's book was not signed.—Held: (1) the contract was not sufficient under Stat. Frauds; & (2) supposing it were so, yet that it would be void on account of its having been made on a Sunday.

To render a contract valid there must be mutuality; both sides should be bound. . . . If a broker is bound to put both names at once, then no fraud can be practised; but if he is to be at liberty to put down my name one day & the other party's another, then it may give rise to many & serious mischiefs (BEST, C.J.).—SMITH v. 309. ———.]—Where on a sale of goods bought & sold notes are given the bought & sold notes constitute the contract between the parties & not the entry of the contract made by the broker in his book, but if there be no bought & sold notes the entry in the broker's book may be resorted to. If there be a material discrepancy between the bought & sold notes there is no contract. Qu.: whether the signing of bought & sold notes by the clerk of the broker is sufficient.—TOWNEND v. DRAKEFORD (1843), 1 Car. & Kir. 20.

310. ———.]—As between buyer & seller, the bought & sold notes, signed & delivered by a broker acting for both parties, when they agree, & there is no signed entry of the contract in the broker's book, are the memorandum in writing which constitutes the contract binding on both parties within Stat. Frauds. But when they materially vary, there is no such binding contract; & neither the bought note delivered to the buyer, nor the sold note delivered to the seller, can then be treated by itself as such memorandum in writing. The entry of the contract made in the broker's book, & signed by him, constitutes the binding contract between the parties; & a variance between it & the bought or sold note afterwards delivered by the broker would not affect its validity.—SIEWWRIGHT v. 311. Bought notes delivered to both parties by mistake.—A broker made a contract with debt. for the purchase of goods & delivered by mistake a bought note to each party & did not mention his principal's, the buyer's, name, but made a proper entry of it in his book.—Held: the buyer might maintain an action for breach of this contract.—GALE v. WELLS (1824), 1 C. & P. 388; 171 E. R. 1243, N. P.

312. Effect of material alteration in one note—Without consent of other party.—A material alteration in a sale note by the broker, after the bargain made, at the instance of the seller, without the consent of the purchaser, annuls the instrument, so as to preclude the seller from recovering upon the contract evidenced by the instrument so altered by him.—POWELL v. DIVETT (1812), 15 East, 29; 104 E. R. 755.

313. ———.]—A material alteration in a sold note, made by the buyer, without the knowledge or consent of the seller, prevents the former from suing on the contract, notwithstanding the duty of the latter may not be varied by the alteration. A sold note in the following form, "Sold for W. & C. 100 tons of crushed sugar, as per sample, in hogsheads" at, etc., was altered by the buyer without the privity of the seller, by adding at the foot of the paper the words "of their own manufacture" with an asterisk as a mark of reference, & a corresponding asterisk in the body of the note, after the word "sample" & within the parenthesis.—Held: the added words imported that the sample was of manufacture of W. & C.; & whether they applied to the sample or to the bulk, they constituted a material alteration, which, as against the buyer, avoided the contract.—MOLLETT v. WACKERBARTH (1847), 5 C. B. 181;

A corresponding sold note was sent to the sellers, at whose instance pltfs. struck out "during the month of Jan.," & wrote "forthwith," but did not communicate the alteration to deft. On Jan. 7, deft. decided to throw up the contract, & sent an order to pltfs. to sell at 3s. Pltfs. could only sell at 2s. 10d., & having paid the sellers at the rate of 2s. 11½d. sued deft. for the difference. Pltfs. having been nonsuited :—Held : the alteration was material; pltfs. could not treat themselves as principals & recover for goods bargained & sold; & the alteration being material pltfs. had paid to the sellers what deft. was not bound to pay, & consequently could not recover for money paid to deft.'s use.—WHITE v. 316. ———.]—C. & co. & H. & co. were merchants at Calcutta. H. & co. sold to C. & co. a large quantity of indigo, through the medium of a broker, who drew up a sold note addressed to H. & co., & submitted it to H. for his approval, when H. having objected to a particular word remaining, the broker took the sold note to C., & informed him of H.'s objection. C. struck his pen through the word objected to by H., placing his initials over that erasure, & returned it to the broker, who thereupon delivered it, so altered, to H. & co. The broker delivered to C. & co., on the following day, a bought note, which differed in certain material terms from the sold note. In an action brought by H. & co. against C. & co. for non-performance of the contract contained in the sold note, the Supreme Ct. at Calcutta was of opinion, that the sold note alone formed the contract, & found for pltfs. :—Held : the transaction was one of bought & sold notes, & the circumstances attending C.'s alteration of the sold note & affixing his initials, were not sufficient to make that note alone, a binding contract; & there being a material variation in the terms of the bought note with the sold note, they together did not constitute a binding contract.—COWIE v. REMFREY (1846), 5 Moo. P. C. C. 232; 3 Moo. Ind. App. 448; 10 Jur. 789; 13 E. R. 479.

319. ———.]—A broker contracted with another broker for the purchase of a quantity of oil to be delivered in four separate parcels & sent to his principal a bought note signed by himself & which contained a provision that each delivery was to stand as a separate contract. Some of the parcels were delivered in accordance with the contract :—Held : there was sufficient evidence of a binding contract & the bought note was a sufficient memorandum of it under Stat. Frauds, s. 17, to charge the buyer.—Re THORP, Ex p. THOMAS (1865), 5 New Rep. 230; 11 L. T. 586; 11 Jur. N. S. 49, L. C.

320. ———.]—A broker, acting for pltf., made a contract for the sale of goods to deft., sending a note to each party, but signing only that which was sent to the seller; he, however, entered the contract in his book in which he signed both the bought & the sold note. Deft. kept the note which was sent to him without objection until called upon to accept the goods, when he repudiated the contract, assigning for reason that the note sent to him was not signed :—Held : (1) the conduct of deft. amounted to an admission that the broker had authority to make the contract for him, & consequently his signature to the sold note bound deft.; (2) the signed entry in the broker's book was a sufficient memorandum of the bargain to satisfy Stat. Frauds.—THOMPSON v. GARDINER (1876), 1 C. P. D. 777.

321. ———.]—Sold note.]—In an action for not accepting goods bought through a broker the sold note bearing the signature of the broker who acted for both buyer & seller is a note or memorandum in writing of the bargain signed by a lawfully authorised agent of the buyer to satisfy Stat. 324. ———.]—A broker employed to effect a sale of goods for his principal made a verbal contract with a vendee & after entering it into his own book without signing it, delivered a bought & sold note to the vendor & vendee respectively, each paper differing in its terms :—Held : there was no memorandum in writing of the contract to bind either party under Stat. Frauds.—GRANT v. FLETCHER (1826), 5 B. & C. 436; 8 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 59; 108 E. R. 163.

325. ———.]—In an action by the vendee against the vendor on a contract made through a broker it is sufficient for the vendee to produce the bought note handed to him by the broker & to show the employment of the latter by the vendor. If the sold note vary from the bought note it lies on the vendor to prove that variance by producing the sold note. When a contract is made through a broker the bought & sold notes delivered to the parties constitute the contract not the entry made by the broker in his book especially when by the usage of trade the bought & sold notes are looked upon as the contract.—HAWES v. FORSTER (1834), 1 Mood. & R. 368.

B., 100 tons dry palm oil, at £31 10s. per ton, to be taken from the quay at landing weights, with customary allowances, etc., in cash at fourteen days from delivery, less 2½ per cent. discount; the above oil to be delivered from the Speedy or Charlotte, expected to arrive about Nov. or Dec. next"; & "We have this day sold for your use, payment in fourteen days by cash, less 2½ per cent. discount from delivery, 100 tons dry palm oil, at £31 10s. per ton, ex Speedy & Charlotte, to arrive":—Held: evidence of mercantile usage was admissible to explain all the variances between these notes; & being so explained, the variances were not material, & did not avoid the contract.—BOLD v. RAYNER (1836), 1 M. & W. 343; 2 Gale, 41; Tyr. & Gr. 820; 5 L. J. Ex. 172; 150 E. R. 465.

Dft. having refused to accept the fruit:—Held: in an action for not accepting the parcel bought of pltf., even if evidence of a custom, in such cases, to send one bought note was admissible, yet, as the bought & sold notes varied, there was no contract with pltf. within Stat. Frauds.—FISENDEN v. LEVY (1863), 11 W. R. 259.

Where A. having goods to sell, employed a broker for the purpose, & B. being desirous of purchasing them, authorised the broker's salesman to offer a certain price, who in consequence brought the parties together, & who having concluded the contract, in the absence of the salesman, dictated to him the terms of it; of which he made an entry in his master's book, but did not sign it, & afterwards communicated the circumstances to the broker, who directed a clerk to enter & sign the contract in his book & sent a sale note signed by himself, to A. but no bought note was sent to B.:—Held: there was no note or memorandum in writing signed by an agent duly authorised, to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17.—HENDERSON v. BARNEWALL (1827), 1 Y. & J. 387; 148 E. R. 721.

336. Machine copy in broker's book—Whether sufficient writing.]—(1) A., having a quantity of wool to dispose of, placed a sample of it at his brokers' for sale, & B., having examined the sample at the brokers' office purchased from A., in the presence of the broker, part of the wool at an agreed price, it being stipulated by B. that the wool was to be delivered in good dry condition. On the same day the broker sent to A. a sold note of the contract, which however, omitted all mention of the stipulation that the wool was to be in good dry condition, & to note whatever was sent to B. The wool was accordingly sent by the broker to B. who refused to receive it, on the ground that it was not in good dry condition, according to the contract. An action for goods sold & delivered having been brought to recover back the price of the wool:—Held: the broker was not authorised to make the contract set forth in the sold note, omitting the condition, & there was consequently no memorandum or note in writing of the contract to satisfy Stat. Frauds.

That liability arises from his receipt & acceptance of the goods: & if pltf. relied on that, deft. would have been at liberty to show upon what terms he accepted them, by going into evidence of the conversation which took place at the time the order was given by which it appears that the contract was to pay at six months' credit, & by a bill at three months' (PARKE, B.).—LOCKETT v. The agreement was not in writing:—Held: having been executed, it was receivable as evidence to prove the plea. Semble: the plea, though pleaded as an equitable defence, was a good plea at common law, by way of accord & satisfaction.—LAVERY v. 347. Effect of non-compliance with statute—Contract not void—Merely unenforceable by action.]—Semble: the absence of a memorandum in writing & of the other conditions mentioned in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4 (1), does not make the contract void or voidable. The only effect is that it is unenforceable. The contract being good, all the legal consequences of a contract follow, so that if the contract is for the sale of specific goods the property in them passes to the buyer. If the buyer after making the purchase refuses to fulfil any of the statutory conditions, the seller may call upon the buyer to pay for the goods, & if he fails to comply may treat the contract as rescinded.—TAYLOR v. 351. — “Agreement to buy” within Factors Acts, 1877 (c. 39).]—Sect. 4 of the above Act provides that where any goods have been sold or contracted to be sold, & the vendee obtains possession of the documents of title thereto from the vendor, any sale, pledge, or disposition of such goods or documents by such vendee so in possession shall be as valid & effectual as if such vendee were an agent or person entrusted by the vendor with the documents within the principal Acts as amended by the Act itself, provided the person to whom the sale, pledge, or other disposition is made has not notice of any lien or other right of the vendor in respect of the goods. It is not necessary, in order that the above-mentioned sect. should be applicable, that there should be a memorandum of the contract for sale of the goods so as to satisfy Stat. Frauds; it is sufficient that there should be a de facto contract for sale, the vendee under which has obtained from the vendor possession of the documents of title to the goods; & a sale by such a vendee will give to a bonâ fide purchaser without notice a good title to the goods, free from any lien or other right of the original vendor in respect thereof.—HUGILL v. 352. Whether property passes—Trove against vendor.]—Stat. Frauds will prevent a parol agreement to buy goods without either earnest or delivery, from giving the buyer any property in them. In such case therefore the buyer cannot maintain trove against the vendor, who sells them to another person. Where a sale is not immediate, it is not within that statute.—ALEXANDER v. COMBER (1788), 1 Hy. Bl. 20; 126 E. R. 13.

354. — Insurable interest of purchaser.]—(1) Messrs. H. & Co., being the owners of two ships, called the Antelope & the Maria, trading to the coast of Africa, & which were then expected to arrive in Liverpool with cargoes of palm oil, agreed verbally to sell to pltf. 200 tons of oil, 100 tons to arrive by the Antelope, & 100 tons to arrive by the Maria. The Antelope did afterwards arrive with 100 tons of oil on board, which were delivered by H. & Co. to pltf. The Maria having 50 tons of palm oil on board was lost by perils of the sea. Pltf. having insured the oil on board the Maria, together with their expected profits thereon:—Held: they had no insurable interest, as the contract they had entered into with H. & Co., being verbal only, was incapable of being enforced.

(2) The contract is to sell the goods when they arrive, but there was no memorandum in writing, & consequently no contract which was capable of being enforced, at the time either of the insurance or the loss; & if it ultimately did become capable of being enforced, that was only by the subsequent past delivery & acceptance, which was after the loss had occurred (PARKE, B.).—STOCKDALE v. DUNLOP (1840), 6 M. & W. 224; 9 L. J. Ex. 83; 7 L. T. 804; 4 Jur. 681; 151 E. R. 391.

355. — Right to sue carrier.]—Goods exceeding £10 in price were verbally ordered of pltf.; no particular mode of carriage was specified, nor was there any evidence of any particular course of dealing between pltf. & vendee. Pltf. afterwards forwarded the goods by deft., who was a common carrier. The goods were lost while in deft.'s custody:—Held: pltf. was the proper party to bring an action for the loss of the goods, the property therein not having passed to the vendee.—COATS v. CHAPLIN (1842), 3 Q. B. 483; 2 Gal. & Dav. 552; 11 L. J. Q. B. 315; 6 Jur. 1123; 114 E. R. 592.

Some whalebone, at an amount exceeding £10, having been delivered at the railway station by B. consigned to A. & having been duly invoiced to him, was lost in the transit. B. then wrote requesting A. to make a claim against the co.:—Held: there having been no acceptance & receipt of the goods within Stat. Frauds, s. 17, A., the consignee, was not entitled to sue the railway co. for the loss.

(2) The liability of the carrier cannot be altered by anything which takes place after the loss; it must be certain at the moment of the loss. . . . I suggested, in the course of argument, that the only way in which pltf. could make out that the action was well brought by him, as consignee, would have been to show that he had adopted something done by the carrier, as his agent, adoption being equivalent to a prior demand (POLLOCK, C.B.).

Before, however, he had completed the filling of the bottles he sold & delivered several of them to deft. Pltf. had for many years past bought of C. his crop of oil of peppermint, & it was usual for C. when the bottles were filled, to deliver them to a carrier to take to a railway station. If it had appeared that part of the contract was to fix it to the floor, or the walls of deft.'s house, so as to make it a fixture, I should have doubted whether it was a contract for the sale of goods within the meaning of the Act [Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184)] (PARKE, B.).—PINNER v. Pltf. wrote back, "I agree to your offer for the wool, of 16s. a stone." Pltf. afterwards tendered 2,700 stones of wool, which deft. refused to accept:—Held: the written offer & acceptance formed a good contract in writing to purchase certain wool of pltf. described as "your wool"; evidence of the previous conversation & letters was admissible to explain the expression "your wool" in the contract, & to point out that the subject-matter to which the contract applied was the wool which pltf. had under his control at the time of the contract, & was not limited to the quantity first mentioned, 2,300 stones, 100 stones more or less; consequently, pltf. was entitled to recover.—*MACDONALD v. Defts. contracted to sell to pltf's. 50 cases of East India tallow, at 48s. 6d. per hundredweight, to be paid for by pltf's. in cash fourteen days after finishing the landing thereof; to be delivered by defts. to pltf's. on safe arrival of a certain vessel called the Countess of Elgin, then on passage from Calcutta to London:—Held: this was an absolute contract to sell & deliver the tallow

On the voyage the ship became disabled, & part of the coals were obliged to be thrown overboard; & the master chartered another vessel, & transhipped the residue, 850 tons, on board of her, at 45s. per ton freight to Rangoon. On arrival at Rangoon the master of the latter vessel offered the coals to B.'s agent on payment of the 45s. per ton freight. This offer being refused, the master put up the coals for auction, & B.'s agent bonâ fide bought them at a price of £1 5s. a ton:—Held: the property in the coals passed to B. on A.'s shipping the coals on board & delivering to B. the bills of lading & policy of insurance; & A. having done this was entitled to retain the half of the invoice price that had been paid to him; A. was bound to have delivered to B. at Rangoon so much of the coals as had escaped the sea risk & arrived there; but the offer of the coals at Rangoon on the terms of paying 45s. per ton freight was not a delivery by A. according to his contract, consequently A. was not entitled to demand from B. any part of the residue of the invoice price; & semble: B. might sue A. for the non-delivery at Rangoon, & recover as damages the difference between £1 5s. per ton which B. actually paid to get the coals, & the £1 2s. 6d., which B. was to have paid under the contract.—*BRITISH & INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO. v. Sect. 5.—Subject-matter of the contract: Sub-sect. 2.A.

—A written contract was made for the of "the cargo" of the "P." "now at Queenstown, as it stands, consisting of about 1,900 quarters Ibraila Indian corn, at the price of 30s. per imperial quarter," cost, freight & insurance to a safe port in the U. K., "the quantity to be taken from the bill of lading, & measure calculated at 220 quarters=100 kilos. Payment cash, on handing shipping documents." The bill of lading expressed that, at Ibraila, were shipped in good condition on board the "P.," bound to Queens-town for orders, 758 kilos. deliverable to Z. or assigns, he or they paying freight according to charterparty. "Quantity & quality unknown to" the master. A few days after the making of the contract, the shipping documents, including this bill of lading, were sent in by the vendor, with an invoice debiting the purchaser with the price of the number of quarters in 758 kilos., at the rate of 100 kilos.=220 quarters, at 30s. per quarter, & crediting him with freight on the same number of quarters at 10s. 3d. The purchaser paid the balance, & ordered the "P." to D., where she delivered her cargo. On the delivery, the actual number of quarters proved to be less than that calculated from the bill of lading. The purchaser paid freight on the actual quantity only, at 10s. 3d. per quarter; & claimed to recover back from the vendor 19s. 9d. per quarter for the short delivery, as an overpayment:—Held: the construction of the contract was, that the parties agreed to buy & sell the cargo at a price to be calculated from the quantity stated in the bill of lading, & not to depend upon the actual quantity; & the purchaser took the chance of the actual quantity turning out more, or the risk of its turning out less, than the stated quantity; & consequently that he could not recover for short delivery.—*COVAS v. 380. Contingency within control of vendor—Voluntary act of vendor preventing supply of goods—Whether term implied in favour of buyer.]—An implication of a term in a contract ought to be made only where it is necessary in order to give the transaction such efficacy as both parties must have intended it to have, & to prevent such failure of consideration as cannot have been within the contemplation of either party.

Defts., who carried on business as brewers, entered into an agreement in writing, by which they agreed to sell to plffs., & plffs. agreed to buy, all the grains made by defts., at the average of the rates charged each year by certain specified firms, from July 10, 1885, until Sept. 30, 1895. In 1890 defts. sold their business, & in consequence ceased to supply grains to plffs.:—Held: a term could not be implied in the contract to the effect that defts. would not by any voluntary act of their own prevent themselves from continuing the sale of grains to plffs. for the period mentioned.—*HAMLIN & Co. v. 381. Sale of goods "on arrival"—By particular ship—Ship arriving empty—Without default of vendor.]—If there be a contract for the sale of goods by a particular ship on arrival, this means on the arrival of the goods which the ship is expected to bring, & if the ship arrives empty, without any default on the part of the vendor, he is not liable to the purchaser for the non-delivery of the goods.—*BOYD v. 384. — — — — —.]—On particular date—Sale of cargo after wreck of ship.]—The ship was wrecked off the coast of Scotland, but the cargo was saved, & might have been forwarded to the port of London by the given day. The vendors resold the tallow in Scotland, the purchasers did not offer them any indemnity if they would bring the tallow to London:—Held: under these circumstances, the vendors were not answerable for the non-delivery of the tallow.—*IDLE v. b. Expression of probability—Does not amount to contract.]—Where in negotiating for the sale of oats by the carload, the seller says, "I am not sure whether I can procure more than two cars; I undertake to let you have two cars & I may be able to let you have three cars," the buyer is not entitled to bind the seller to the delivery of three cars, & if the buyer attempts to do so, & the seller dissents, there is no contract even for two cars.—CUMMINGS GRAIN CO. v. BUTCHER (1922), 86 D. L. R. 462; 17 Alta. L. R. 122; [1922] 1 W. W. R. 243.—OAN.

387. Sale of goods "to arrive".—By particular ship—Arrival on different ship.]—Defts., by their broker, entered into a contract for the sale to pltfs., "of 50 tons of palm oil, to arrive per the Mansfield, etc. In case of non-arrival, or the vessels not having so much in after delivery of former contracts, this contract to be void." At the time this contract was entered into, defts. had several vessels on the coast of Africa for the purpose of obtaining palm oil, & amongst others the Mansfield & the Watt. After the date of the contract, the Mansfield was loaded with 315 tons of palm oil, & sailed homewards. On her arrival at Cameroons defts.' agent ordered the captain of the Mansfield to tranship part of her cargo to the Watt, which was the larger vessel. This transshipment was accordingly made bonâ fide & without fraud, for the purpose of enabling the Watt to proceed home with a full cargo. The Watt proceeded on her voyage, & arrived in Liverpool on April 8, 1838, & the Mansfield on May 20 following. The Mansfield, on her arrival, had on board 235 tons of palm oil, but the contracts made previously to the above contract amounted to 228 tons, leaving only 7 tons applicable to this contract, which were delivered by defts. to pltfs. In an action for the non-delivery of the oil:—Held: the arrival of the oil in the Mansfield was a condition precedent, & pltfs. were not entitled to the oil brought by the Watt; the contract for the 50 tons was entire, & pltfs. were not entitled to the 7 tons brought by the Mansfield over what was required to satisfy former contracts.—*LOVATT v. "Provided the same be shipped for seller's account."—By means of bought & sold notes, pltfs. bought of deft. "the cargo of 400 tons, provided the same be shipped for seller's account, of Necrensie rice, more or less, of the average quality, as shipped per Minna, to proceed from Akyab to a port in the Channel for orders, at 11s. 6d. per cwt. for Necrensie rice, or at 11s. for Larong, the latter quality not to exceed 50 tons, or else, at the option of buyers, to reject any excess, to be paid for in cash on the arrival of the vessel at the port of call, on delivery of the bills of lading, charterparty & policy of insurance; should the vessel be lost before the arrival at the port of call, this contract to be void":—Held: (1) the contract did not disclose an absolute contract of sale or warranty to ship a cargo of rice of the quality mentioned; (2) the buyers were not entitled to the delivery either of the whole cargo or of the Larong rice, because the contract was for an entire cargo which would substantially satisfy the description of Aracan Necrensie rice.—*VERNEDE v. 394. — — — — — Rescission of charterparty.]—Defts.' correspondent at Valparaiso bought on their account of S. & co. 600 tons of nitrate of soda, & on July 16, 1868, they chartered the barque Precursor to bring it to England, & they, on the same day, wrote to defts. of this. On the receipt of the advice, defts. on Sept. 8, made a contract, through brokers, with pltf., "We have this day sold to you about 600 tons, more or less, being the entire parcel of nitrate of soda expected to arrive at port of call per Precursor, at 12s. 9d.

per hundredweight. . . . Should any circumstance or accident prevent the shipment of the nitrate, or should the vessel be lost, this contract to be void." In the meantime, on Aug. 13, an earthquake had destroyed the greater part of the nitrate of soda, while lying at the port of lading; & it having been determined by arbitration, pursuant to the contract, that S. & co. were not bound to supply other soda, on Sept. 2, the Valparaiso house had cancelled the charter of the Precursor. Afterwards, on learning from defts. that they had sold the nitrate of soda to arrive, but not on what terms, they purchased other 600 tons of nitrate of soda, at above defts.' limit, & obtained a transfer of a charter of the same barque Precursor, & shipped the nitrate about Dec. 23, to defts. to enable them to execute their contract if obliged to do so, or to sell at a profit, if free. The Precursor arrived in England on May 8, 1869, & pltf. demanded the cargo under the contract of Sept. 8:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to the cargo.—SMITH v. MYERS (1871), L. R. 7 Q. 395. — "To be delivered from quay."—A. contracted to sell to B. 500 bales of cotton at a given price, to arrive at Liverpool per ship or ships from Calcutta. The contract contained provisions as to quality, & for arbitration in case of dispute; & then followed, "The cotton to be taken from the quay; customary allowances of tare & draft; & the invoice to be dated from date of delivery of last bale"—Held: the clause as to the place of delivery was not a condition precedent, but a mere stipulation in favour of the sellers, & the contract amounted in effect to a contract to deliver the cotton at a reasonable time, & under reasonable circumstances, the article to be at the buyer's risk & charge from the time of its being landed on the quay.—NEILL v. WHITWORTH (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 684; Har. & Ruth. 832; 35 L. J. C. P. 304; 12 Jur. N. S. 761; 14 W. R. 844; sub nom. NIELL v. WHITWORTH, 14 L. T. 670; 2 Mar. L. C. 352, Ex. Ch.

396. Sale "subject to safe arrival."—Defts. entered into a contract with pltf. for the sale to him of about 4 tons of hematine crystals "subject to safe arrival." Defts. had made a contract for the delivery to themselves of the crystals, which were expected by their vendor to arrive from Alexandria. No ship was named in the contract between pltf. & defts. as that by which the crystals were to arrive. Defts.' vendor not being able to obtain delivery of the crystals was unable to supply them to defts., who in their turn were unable to fulfil their contract with pltf.:—Held: under the contract between pltf. & defts. there was an obligation on defts. to ship the goods or to get them so far under their control that they were placed on board some ship; not having done so they were not protected by the words "subject to safe arrival," which meant that provided defts. shipped the goods they were not to be liable for non-delivery consequent upon any accident occurring to the goods in transit & preventing their safe arrival; & defts. were liable to pltf. in an action for damages for non-delivery of the crystals.—*BARNETT v. "bargained with deft. to buy, & then bought from him, & deft. then agreed to sell, & then sold to pltf., certain foreign stock, to wit, 28,000 Spanish Active Stock, etc."—Held: (1) the words "bought" & "sold" must be construed with reference to the subject-matter of the contract, & as meaning an agreement to buy & sell; & (2) a contract for the sale of stock, Exchequer Bills, & securities of that description, in which the property passes by delivery, differs from a contract for the sale of a specific chattel, inasmuch as a contract for the sale of stock, Exchequer Bills, etc., would be satisfied by the delivery of any stock or bills of the description bargained for, & consequently the contract for sale cannot mean an actual sale, but only a contract to deliver.—*HESELTINE v. In fact the corn had, a short time before the date of the contract, been sold at Tunis, in consequence of getting so heated in the early part of the voyage as to render its being brought to England impossible. The contract in England was entered into in ignorance of this fact. When the English purchaser discovered it, he repudiated the contract. 402. Cargo lost at sea.—Pltf. a ship-broker & coal merchant at Newport, was, in Dec. last, in negotiation with deft., a merchant at Liverpool, with reference to pltf.'s shipping a cargo of coals on board a vessel at Newport called the Vectis, chartered by deft. for a voyage to Lisbon, the charter stipulating it was to be loaded in five clear working days, or demurrage would become payable. The coals were sold to deft. at Liverpool on Dec. 14, at 10s. a ton, by pltf.'s agent there, who sent the order to pltf. by post on the same day, & on the following day, Dec. 15, sent him a telegram as follows: "Please load Vectis for Lisbon, now ready at your port for C.," to which pltf. replied that as his stem was at present so heavy he could not load the vessel, & that coals were not then to be got, deft. had better get coals elsewhere. In reply to that deft. wrote urging pltf. to do his best to load the vessel at once in order to save demurrage, & forwarding notice of lay days having commenced. Pltf. answered that it was impossible to load the vessel within the time, & asked for an extension of it, or if coals could be gotten elsewhere, to which on Dec. 19, deft. replied, hoping more time for loading had been procured, or that pltf. had been able to get equally good coal elsewhere at the same price. Pltf. procured the coal at an increased cost of 6d. a ton, & informed deft. thereof, who on Dec. 20 telegraphed to pltf. objecting to pay the extra 6d., & stating that the coals must be loaded at the contract price at once. On the same day pltf. telegraphed to deft., "We have arranged to load the Vectis to-night," & on Dec. 21 deft. instructed pltf. by telegram as follows: "Load up Vectis immediately & save demurrage, & pay advance as per charter. Will arrange price afterwards," & by post of the same day he wrote to pltf. that if 6d. a ton extra were now charged he should deduct it from the next cargo loaded for him by the pltf. On Dec. 21 the loading of the vessel was completed, & £46 advanced by pltf. to the captain for deft. on account of freight. On Dec. 22 the bill of lading was signed by the captain, expressing the delivery "to order or to assigns" at Lisbon, which bill was, with the invoice & a bill of exchange for the full price of 10s. 6d. a ton, sent by pltf. to his agent at Liverpool on that day, with instructions to hold it till deft. had "paid the advance & accepted the bill of exchange at 10s. 6d. a ton." Deft. refused to accept the bill of exchange, without an understanding as to the price, as mentioned in his letter of Dec. 21. After some discussion pltf., by post of Dec. 24, agreed to allow the extra 6d., & on Dec. 27 deft. repaid the advance & accepted the bill of exchange. The Vectis & her cargo were lost at sea, in the Bristol Channel, on the morning of Dec. 24, & in an action by pltf. to recover the amount of the above acceptance:—Held: making absolute a rule to enter the verdict for deft., as the coals had not been shipped in pursuance of any contract between the parties. pltf. could not recover. The contract was to load on board at 10s. a ton, & if, when pltf. charged 6d. a ton extra, & deft. objected to it & said, "load the vessel & we will arrange price afterwards," pltf. had agreed to that proposal, he might have recovered on a quantum meruit; but he did not do so. He went on disputing as to the price, & instructed his agent to hold the documents till his terms were accepted by deft., & when at last he agreed to allow the extra 6d., it was too late, the coals had then gone to the bottom. The coals, therefore, were not shipped on board in conformity to any contract, enabling pltf. to maintain the action, & there was an absence of all consideration entitling him to recover on the bill of exchange.—WILLIAMS v. COHEN (1871), 25 L. T. 300.

Defts. pleaded a denial of the agreement, fraud, never indebted, payment, & also as an equitable plea, that pltf. was employed to sell, & did sell, the bark as agent of C., & on his behalf, at the then last year's prices, plus the expenses of carting & ricking the bark in the then present year; & he then represented to defts. that such expenses could not then be correctly ascertained, but that same added to the price averaged between £5 & £6 per ton; & upon such representations of pltf., & at his request, & on his agreeing that defts. should be liable to pay only such prices & expenses when ascertained, defts. were induced to & did make the agreement, & were then requested by pltf. to pay the prices & expenses to C. That after making the agreement defts. discovered that the expenses added to the prices averaged only £5 2s. per ton; & that, before action, they paid to C., who then had notice of the premises, the whole amount due for the bark at the prices, together with the expenses so ascertained as aforesaid, & C. accepted same in full discharge & satisfaction of same, & of all liability of defts. in respect of the bark & expenses; of all which pltf. had notice before action:—Held: the real contract between pltf. & defts. was not in writing, & the written memorandum was not signed for the purpose of evidencing any contract, & so defts. were entitled to judgment on non assumpsit; if there were a contract in writing intended to bind the parties, it was avoided by fraud, which defts. had not estopped themselves from pleading; under the plea of payment, payment to C. was a defence; & the facts stated in the equitable plea disclosed a good answer to pltf.'s claim; & parol evidence was admissible in support of such plea.—*ROGERS v. 424. — Destruction of goods.]—Pltfs., refiners of sugar, sold to deft., a broker, a certain number of "titlers" or sugar loaves then lying in their warehouse. A sold note delivered to the buyer, contained a description of the numbers & marks on the titlers, & also the following terms, viz., "Prompt one month . . . goods at seller's risk for two months." It was the practice to weigh titlers so sold when & not until the brokers or their sub-purchasers came to remove them from the refiner's premises; but an estimated price calculated on their approximate weight was paid on the "prompt" day, & the difference between the sum then paid & the actual price adjusted after the weighing was accomplished. The approximate price of the titlers in question was accordingly paid at prompt. They remained on the premises after the expiration of two months from the sale, & were subsequently destroyed by fire, together with a quantity of unsold sugar. Pltfs. having insured all the contents of their warehouses by floating policies covering goods on the premises, "sold & paid for, but not removed," received the sum insured from the insurance office, but the amount was not enough to compensate them for the loss of their own goods. They had no agreement with their customers to insure sugar sold, but not taken away. Action for the non-payment of the price of salt under a contract, by which P. was to receive & W. to deliver, 1,500 tons of salt, at 9s. a ton, with a discount of 6d. per ton for cash, within ten days of delivery; but if the market price was lower P. was to have the benefit thereof, & in no case was the price to be above 9s. a ton. The amount, at 6s. per ton less the discount, had been tendered & paid into ct. Upon the day upon which the delivery, pursuant to notice, took place, sales had been made in the morning at 6s.; but none later in the day, & some of the witnesses stated that the price was higher, & that they would not have sold at that price. The judge directed the jury to take these facts into consideration in determining the market price, & they found that 7s. was the price, & a verdict was returned accordingly:—Held: the market price was not subsequent prices & speculations as to the prices at which parties would or would not have sold, but the actual transactions on that day, & there was no proof that the sale had been kept back on that day by any act of the parties;

It appeared that the great bulk of the London brewers' trade was done with tied houses; that the London brewers supplied beer at standard prices; that in the case of tied houses discount was allowed at certain recognised rates; but that in the case of free tenants the amount of discount was the subject of special bargain, & that free tenants often obtained a higher rate of discount:—Held: the term "market" was to be construed with reference to the surrounding circumstances, & upon the true construction of the proviso the lessee was to be charged the fair market price as applying to tenants of tied houses & was not entitled to discount beyond the recognised rates.—*CHAR-RINGTON & CO., LTD. v. statement the vendor was to repay to the purchasers the amount of shortage:—Held: the word "timber" must be held to mean all timber trees growing on the land which were reasonably fit for use in such a business as that carried on by the co.; & should not be restricted to such trees as were at the date of the agreement capable of being felled & sold at a profit at the then current prices.—SWIFT v. DAVID (1912), 107 L. T. 71, P. C.

433. Price depending on cost of labour.—Pltfs. entered into a contract with buyers in Calcutta to manufacture & ship machinery by instalments over several months at agreed prices but subject to a stipulation that should the cost of labour or wages increase, there should be a corresponding increase in the purchase price. The buyers were also to open "a confirmed irrevocable credit" in favour of pltfs. with a bank in this country & to pay for each shipment as it took place. In pursuance of this arrangement defts., who were the buyers' bankers in London, wrote to pltfs. stating that they would pay bills drawn on the buyers to the extent of £70,000, the bills to be accompanied by documents & to be received before Apr. 14, 1921, "this to be considered a confirmed irrevocable credit." Pltfs. shipped two instalments under the contract & received payment under the letter of credit. The buyers then found that the invoices included an increase in the purchase price on account of wages & material, & instructed defts. only to pay so much of the next invoices as represented the original prices. Defts. accordingly refused to pay the bill presented on the next shipment & pltfs. then cancelled the contract, claiming damages from defts. as on a repudiation by the buyers:—Held: the credit being irrevocable, the refusal of defts. to take & pay for the particular bills on representation of the proper documents constituted a repudiation of the contract as a whole, & pltfs. were entitled to damages so reckoned. The basis of this form of banking facility is that the buyer is taken, as between himself & the banker, to accept the seller's invoices as correct. Any adjustment must be made by way of refund by the seller & not by way of retention by the buyer.—URQUHART LINDSAY & CO., LTD. v. EASTERN BANK, LTD., [1922] 1 K. B. 318; 91 L. J. K. B. 274; 126 L. 434. General rule—Contract void.—An action was brought for a breach of the following agreement. Pltf. agreed to buy & deft. agreed to sell his horse, Partington, for £200 provided he trotted 18 miles within one hour, within one month; & if the task was not performed, the horse was thereby sold to pltf. for 1s. which pltf. that day paid to deft. At the trial it appeared that the task was not performed, & that deft. had refused to deliver the horse to pltf.; a verdict was found for pltf.:—Held: upon a motion to arrest the judgment, this agreement was illegal.—*BROGDEN v. racers, or, in case she should be sold before then, deft. should pay pltf. one-third of what she should be sold for:—Held: the agreement, being one simply to give an increased price for the mare, upon the occurrence of a state of facts which might add to her value was a legal contract, & not in the nature of a

—Pltf. & deft., while conversing as to some rags which pltf. proposed to sell & deft. to purchase, disputed as to the price of a former lot of rags, pltf. asserting the price to have been lower than deft. asserted it to have been. They agreed that the question should be referred to M., a spirit merchant, & that whichever party was wrong should pay M. for a gallon of brandy, & that, if pltf. was right, the price of the lot now on sale should be 6s. per hundredweight, but, if deft. was right, 3s. M. decided that pltf. was right. Pltf. sent the rags to deft., but deft. refused to accept them at 6s., offering 5s. To an action for goods bargained & sold, deft. pleaded the facts specially, except as to the reference to M., averring that 6s. was higher & 3s. lower than the value of the rags bargained for, & justified the refusal to accept on the ground that the agreement was made by way of wager, & therefore within Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 18:—Held: the plea was good, & was supported by the facts, & this, whether or not the fact of the agreement relating to the brandy was taken into consideration.—*ROURKE v. An agreement under which the purchaser is bound to buy his beer from a certain brewer, provided the latter is willing to sell it to him duty paid, at a certain price is not a contract for the sale or delivery of the beer within Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 20. The contract for sale in such case is made only when the order for the delivery of beer is given to the brewer in pursuance of the conditional agreement, & if such order was given after the passing of Finance Act, 1900 (c. 7), the brewer is not entitled under sect. 8 to add the new duty to the price payable

A. In General.

See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71). s. 9; VALUERS & APPRAISERS.

454. Condition as to soundness—Allowance on damaged goods.—A declaration in assumpsit stated in the first count that pltfs. were possessed of lands for the residue of three terms, which respectively commenced on Feb. 15, 1785; that they put them up to auction, subject to a condition that the purchaser should take the stock-in-trade at a valuation; that deft. purchased the same, & that the stock was valued at a sum specified; breach, non-payment of that sum. The second count was for lands bargained & sold, & counts for goods sold & delivered; & the money counts were added. The leases under which pltfs. derived title, were dated on the day laid, habendum from the day of their date; & the valuation proved, after stating the prices of each article of stock, was indorsed with a memorandum, that certain pans were valued as sound, but should any of them prove broken the first time of boiling, an allowance was to be made thereon, & with that condition the stock was appraised at a certain sum, the same as that laid in the declaration :—Held : the statement of the day of commencement of the terms was immaterial; & the valuation might be considered as absolute, as there was no proof of the pans being broken at the time mentioned.—WELCH v. FISHER (1818), 8 Taunt. 338; 2 Moore, C. P. 378; 129 E. R. 412.

455. Whether parties bound by acceptance of valuation.—Deft. agreed verbally with pltf. to take a house & purchase the fixtures at a valuation to be made by two brokers. An inventory of the furniture & fixtures was accordingly made, described generally as "an inventory of the fixtures, etc.," with the gross amount placed at the foot thereof. In an action for goods sold & delivered, with a count on an account stated :—Held : deft. having taken possession of & enjoyed the furniture & fixtures, & paid part of the sum determined by the brokers, to be due for the same, he was liable on the account stated for the remainder, & could not afterwards object to pltf.'s defective title to the house.—SALMON v. WATSON (1819), 4 Moore, C. P. 73.

456. Subsequent agreement as to price of part of goods.—A declaration stated, that by a certain indenture deft. covenanted to pay pltf. £400 in equal moieties on Nov. 11, & May 11, & that it was agreed that the drugs, stock-in-trade, utensils, & shop fixtures in certain premises should be valued by a person to be named by pltf. & deft., & one moiety of the amount paid immediately upon such valuation, & the residue at the expiration of a year. Averment, that the said drugs, etc., were valued by one L., named by pltf. & deft., at £190. Breach, that deft. refused to pay the second moiety of the £400 on May 11, & also the residue of the £190 at the expiration of the year. Pleas, set off for money had & received, money paid, & on an account stated, & that the said drugs, etc., were not valued by a person named by pltf. & deft.; on which issues were joined. It appeared in evidence that L. was agreed upon by pltf. & deft. to value the drugs, stock-in-trade, utensils, & shop fixtures, & that, after the valuation was complete, except as to the drugs, £70 was agreed on by the parties as the value of the drugs, & £50 as the value of a horse & gig belonging to pltf., which sum, together with the rest of the valuation, amounted to £190 :—Held : the jury were rightly directed that if the horse & gig were part of the stock-in-trade, or were treated as such by the parties, pltf. was entitled to a verdict on the last plea.—RAWLINSON v. CLARKE (1846), 15 M. & W. 292; 15 L. J. Ex. 171; 6 L. T. O. S. 396; 153 E. R. 860, Ex. Ch.

458. Value to be fixed by arbitration, if necessary.—A. being possessed of certain plant & materials for the construction of a canal & other engineering works in Holland, in Mar. 1853, agreed by parol to sell the same to B., & two persons were sent to the spot to value them. An inventory was accordingly made, & on Mar. 31, A. & B. signed the following memorandum at the foot thereof : "Agreed between B. & myself, £4,509 12s." On May 8, a written contract for the sale of the plant & materials was executed by A. & B., by which it was agreed "that A. should sell, & B. should purchase, all such parts of the plant, materials, & things then on or about the works of the canal, which belonged to A., & that the price to be paid for the same should be the fair amount of the value thereof, such amount to be settled, in case the parties should differ as to the same, by arbitration," in manner therein provided; "& that B. should pay to A. the amount of such price or value within two calendar months after such price or value should have been fixed & determined as aforesaid." B. was let into possession of the plant immediately after Mar. 31, & remained in possession. No arbitration was ever demanded, or any dissatisfaction expressed by B. at the price fixed by the valuers :—Held : the event upon which the arbitration clause of the contract of May 8 was to take effect, viz. the parties differing as to the value, never having arisen, A. was entitled, at the expiration of two

b. Failure of valuers to appoint umpire—Rescission of contract.—A contract for purchase of stock in trade at a valuation provided for the appoint-

What amounts to valuation—Figures left to be added up.]—By agreement between A. & B. it was agreed that B. should buy of A. certain plant, materials, & tools, "at a valuation to be made by A. & a person to be appointed by B." & that B. should pay for the same by a bill for £150 at two months from the valuation, & by another bill for the balance of the valuation at three months after date. Under this agreement, B. was let into possession, & A. & one J., who represented B., met & proceeded to value, having a list of the articles to be valued, as to all of which, except certain timber, the prices were finally agreed upon; but, as to the timber, the price per foot & the superficial measurement only were agreed upon, the calculation of the cubical contents & the carrying out the amount being left to be filled in by B.'s foreman. A. & J. never met again, & did not agree upon the sum total; but B., after action brought for it, paid the £150:—Held: sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in finding that a valuation had been made by A. & J.—GORDON v. WHITEHOUSE (1856), 18 C. B. 747; 25 L. J. C. P. 300; 139 E. R. 1564.

460. Mistake in valuation.]—Upon the sale by auction of land under the direction of the ct., one of the conditions was that the timber should be taken at a price to be fixed by the auctioneer at the sale, or by valuation, at the option of the purchaser. J. became the purchaser of lot 2, & elected to take the timber at the price stated by the auctioneer. The chief clerk confirmed the sale, & his certificate was filed. It afterwards appeared that by mistake the timber on a portion of the land had not been valued by the auctioneer. An application by the vendors to compel the purchaser to pay the value of the timber thus omitted was refused, with costs.—GRIFFITHS v. JONES (1873), L. R. 15 Eq. 279; 42 L. J. Ch. 468; 37 J. The purchaser having accepted bills for the amount of the purchase-money, refused to pay so much thereof as represented the excess caused by the overvaluation of the malt. In an action by the vendor to recover this amount:—Held: this was a mere clerical error, & not an erroneous exercise of judgment & pltf. was not entitled to recover.—GOSDEN v. FUNNELL (1899), 15 T. L. R. 547.

462. Goods invoiced back on default of sellers—Closing price declared by trade association—Balance in favour of sellers.]—A contract for the sale of Japanese peas to be shipped from abroad contained a clause providing that disputes should be referred to arbn.; it also contained a clause, numbered 8 in the contract, providing that if the sellers made default in shipping or declaring shipment the contract should be closed by invoicing back the goods at such price, whether higher or lower than the contract price, as the London Corn Trade Assocn. should determine; that the said Assocn. should if requested by either party declare the closing price; that this price should be accepted as final by all parties, & that settlement should be made on the basis of that price by net cash not later than a certain date. The sellers failed to ship or tender any goods under the contract. They then applied to the Assocn. to declare a closing price & gave notice to the buyers that they were doing so. The market price had fallen since the date of the contract. The Assocn. declared a closing price at which if the goods were invoiced back to the sellers a balance would be found in their favour. The sellers claimed this balance; the buyers refused to pay it, & the dispute was referred to arbitrators, who awarded, subject to a special case, that the buyers should pay the balance to the sellers:—Held: clause 8 applied, notwithstanding that the sellers were the party in default, & they were entitled to the balance in their favour after the goods had been invoiced back to them by the buyers at the closing price properly declared by the Assocn.; the closing price should be fixed with reference to the date on which the buyers received notice of the sellers' inability to perform their contract.

made by A., the issue was, whether a valuation was made by A. It appeared that the goods were in fact valued by B., A.'s clerk:—Held: deft. was not bound by it, unless it were shown that it was agreed between the parties that B.'s valuation should be taken as A.'s; & the fact of deft.'s seeing B. valuing, & making no objection until B. told him the amount, was not evidence of such agreement.—*Ess v. 466. Failure of mode of valuation—Reference to master.—Where there are circumstances under which a mode of valuation agreed upon by the parties fails, the ct. will ascertain the value by a reference to the master.

In a contract for the purchase of timber, time is of the essence of the contract; & if, by difficulties improperly raised by the vendor, the timber is prevented from being felled & carried away at the time limited by the agreement, the ct. will not afterwards enforce the performance of the contract.—*ARKWRIGHT v. 468. Delegation of valuation.—Ess v. TRUSCOTT, No. 465, ante.

469. Effect on property—Payment of deposit—Payment of balance on completion of valuation.—In an agreement between A. & B. whereby A. agreed to let, & B. to take, a certain brewery for a term of years at a yearly rent; it was stipulated that A. should take also the casks & stock of beer, a horse & dray, & the book debts, at a valuation to be estimated by two indifferent persons; " & in consideration of the above grant being fulfilled, A. has paid a deposit of £20 & upon the valuation being complete, payment to be made as under ":—Held: the property in the casks, etc., passed to A. by that agreement, though no valuation had been made.—CHALLON v. HUMMELL (1849), 14 L. T. O. S. 173.

470. Disagreement of valuers—Valuation by chief clerk.—A. B. agreed to purchase a factory at a certain price, & to take the plant & fixtures at a valuation, the amount to be ascertained by valuers appointed on each side, or by an umpire to be appointed by the valuers before proceeding with the business. The valuers could not agree & had neglected to appoint an umpire. At the instance of the vendor the ct. decreed specific performance, & directed the value of the plant & fixtures to be ascertained by the chief clerk.—JACKSON v. JACKSON (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 184; 22 L. J. Ch. 873; 21 L. T. O. S. 98; 1 W. R. 284; 65 E. R. 80.

471. Consumption of goods—Quantum meruit.—Pltf. entered upon the occupation of a farm under a written agreement, by which he agreed, amongst other things, " to pay £5 sterling for every load of fodder, straw, haum, dung, or turnips which should be sold or carried off the premises, & the same sum for every load of hay or wheat straw sold or carried off the premises, for which there should not be two loads of good dung or other manure, at the option of the landlord to be spent on the premises "; & also " to purchase all the hay, sanfoin & tares now in the yard, also all the dung & manure now on the premises, also all the straw from the crops now stacked or about to be stacked in the yard, paying a fair price for same, to be ascertained by valuers on both sides :—Held: the incoming tenant having consumed the straw, & the valuers named by the parties not having agreed upon the valuation, or appointed an umpire, pltf. was entitled to maintain an action for it as upon a quantum meruit.—CLARKE v. WESTROPE (1856), 18 C. B. 765; 25 L. J. C. P. 287; 20 J. P. 728; 139 E. R. 1572.

472. —Valuation by umpire—Whether in nature of award on arbitration.—On the sale of land one of the conditions of sale was that the purchaser should pay for the timber on the land at a valuation, & it was provided for the purpose of such valuation that each party should appoint a valuer, & the valuers thus appointed should, before they proceeded to act, appoint by writing an umpire, & that the two valuers, or, if they disagreed, their umpire, should make the valuation. The two valuers appointed being unable to agree, the umpire made the valuation:—Held: such valuation was not in the nature of an award on an arbn., & an application to set it aside must be refused.—Re CARUS-WILSON & GREENE (1886), 18 Q. B. D. 7; 56 L. J. Q. B. 530; sub nom. Re WILSON & GREENE, Re CASTERTON ESTATES, 55 L. T. 864; 35 W. R. 43; 3 T. L. R. 22, C. A.

473. —Valuation determined by arbitration—Abortive reference—Valuation of court.—Where an arbn. has become abortive it is the duty of a ct. of law, in working out a contract of which such arbn. was part of the machinery, to supply the defect.

Where in a contract for the sale of goods it was agreed that the purchaser should be entitled to deduct from the price the value of any goods not delivered, such value to be determined by arbn., & the arbitrators appointed were unable to agree, the purchaser was entitled, in an action brought by the vendor to recover the contract price to apply to the ct. to fix the value of the goods not delivered & to deduct it from the price due, without bringing a cross action.—CAMERON v. CUDDY, [1914] A. C. 651; 83 L. J. P. C. 70; 110 L. T. 89, P. C.

474. No implied promise that valuer should act—Remedy against valuer.—An agreement to settle disputes between two parties as to the amount to be paid by one of them in respect of the value of goods belonging to, or work done by the other of them, by a reference to two valuers, one to be appointed by each party, does not import any undertaking by the former that the valuer whom he may appoint shall act in the valuation, nor any liability for his not acting. The party is only bound to appoint a valuer on his part; & if the person appointed does not act, the other party is remitted to his original cause of action, & may revoke his submission; or may possibly, if the valuer has undertaken to act & failed in his duty, have a right of action against him; but has no right of action against the party who appointed him.—*COOPER v. that pltf. should sell & deft. purchase crops at a valuation to be made by two persons, one named by each party, &, if such persons disagreed by a third person to be named by them before entering on the valuation; that each party should appoint a referee by May 31, & if either should neglect to appoint, the referee of the other alone might make a final decision; &, in case either party or his referee should neglect to attend any reference after notice, the party or the referee attending should enter upon the reference ex p. & make a final decision; the valuation to be made by June 3. The declaration alleged that on May 31, pltf. appointed a referee, & gave notice thereof to deft. a reasonable time before June 3, but no appointment of which pltf. had notice was made by deft.; & pltf., a reasonable time before June 3, gave deft. notice of the intention of pltf.'s referee to proceed in the valuation on June 2; but deft. did not attend, wherefore pltf.'s referee valued at a sum named; which deft. though requested had not paid. Plea: that pltf. did not, within the time appointed appoint his said referee in manner, etc. It appeared at Nisi Prius that, under the above agreement, pltf. did nominate his referee late on May 31, & sent by that night's post a notice thereof to deft., who received it on June 1:—Held: the issue on the plea must be found for deft., since the appointment was not complete without notice thereof to the opposite party.—TEW v. 477. Specific performance.]—A. & B., being in partnership as distillers, came to an agreement whereby B. was to buy out A., & it was agreed that if B. should, during A.'s life, be desirous of retiring, he should give notice, & A. should then have an option of repurchase, on the terms that within six months after notice by A., the premises, goodwill, stock-in-trade, & all such of the subsisting contracts as A. should be willing to take, should be valued "in the usual way" by two valuers, one to be named by A., the other by B., or by the umpire of the two valuers. B. gave notice of his intention to retire; whereupon A. gave notice of his intention to repurchase; & two valuers were appointed; but after the appointment B. refused to allow his valuer to proceed with the valuation:—Held: there was no contract between the parties which the ct. could specifically enforce.—VICKERS v. Injunction.]—Where an agreement has been entered into for the sale of a house at a fixed price, & of the fixtures & furniture therein at a valuation by a person named by both parties, & he undertakes the valuation, but is refused permission by the vendor to enter the premises for that purpose, the ct. will make a mandatory order to compel the vendor to allow the entry to enable the valuation to proceed. The ct. has jurisdiction to make any interlocutory order which is reasonably asked as ancillary to the administration of justice at the hearing.—SMITH v. PETERS (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 511; 44 L. J. SUB-SECT. 1.—CONDITIONS.

480. Whether stipulation amounts to condition —Dependent on construction of contract.]—A declaration stated that by a certain contract pltf. agreed that they would during a certain term, supply to defts. & that defts. would take from them all the coke defts.' co. should require at L. according to the capacity of certain ovens, provided that the coke should be of the best quality; pltf. on their part engaging that same should be large, & of the best quality, & equal to that made from the best B. coal, & be to the satisfaction of the co.'s inspecting officer for the time being; & agreeing that the co. should have power to refuse to accept coke of inferior quality or small in its pieces; & to purchase what they might elsewhere if pltf. did not supply coke of the best quality, & equal to that above described, & to the satisfaction of the co.'s officer, & to charge pltf. with the excess of price beyond the contract price. The declaration then contained an averment, that, during the term, pltf. manufactured & supplied to defts., in the manner provided by the agreement, certain coke which they required at L., which was of the quality required by the agreement, & equal to that made from the B. coal, & large in its pieces & laid as a breach the refusal of defts. to accept the coke:—Held: according to the true construction of the agreement, it was a condition precedent to the right of pltf. to insist upon defts.' acceptance of the coke, that it should be to the satisfaction of their inspecting officer; & consequently the declaration which omitted that allegation, was bad in substance.—GRAFTON v. EASTERN COUNTIES RY. CO. (1853), 8 Exch. 699; 1 C. L. R. 573. Annotation:—*Refd. Scott v. Liverpool Corp. (1857-8), 1 Giff. 216.

482. — Finding of jury as element in decision.]—In an action brought by the vendors against their vendees for refusal to accept, evidence was given to show the circumstances under which the contract was made, & that it was of vital importance that the vessel should be in the port named at the time of making the contract. The jury found, that the condition "ship now at Rangoon," had not been fulfilled, & that it was a condition absolutely vital:—Held: (1) it was rightly left to the jury to say under what circumstances the contract was made; (2) the words "ship now at Rangoon" amounted to a warranty justifying deft. in saying that there had been a failure of performance of a condition precedent & in refusing to carry out the contract; (3) the finding of the jury was rightly taken as an element in enabling the ct. to say that the words amounted to a condition precedent.—OPPENHEIM v. FRASER (1876), 34 L. T. 524; 3 Asp. M. L. O. 146.

484. Distinguished from warranty.]—Deft. bought of pltf., at a price named, "413 bales of wool, to arrive ex Stige, or any vessel they may be transhipped in. The wool to be guaranteed about similar to samples in the selling broker's possession; & if any dispute arises it shall be decided by the selling brokers, whose decision shall be final." On the arrival of the wool, it turned out not about similar to sample, & the brokers, after protest from deft., awarded that defts. should take it at a certain abatement in the price of different bales:—Held: as the contract was for the sale of specific goods, the guarantee was not a condition but only a warranty, & deft. could not reject the wool on account of its inferiority; the brokers had power to award as they had, & deft. was bound to take the wool accordingly.

Generally speaking, when the contract is as to any goods, such a clause is a condition giving to the essence of the contract; but when the contract is as to specific goods, the clause is only collateral. . . . Here there is merely a warranty as distinguished from a condition (BLACKBURN, J.).—HEYWORTH v. HUTCHINSON (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 447; 36 L. J. Q. B. 270.

In fact the vessel had, without the knowledge of either sellers or buyers, arrived & discharged the goods before the date of the contract. The buyers took up the documents & then discovered that the vessel had already arrived & discharged her cargo:—Held: the word "afloat" was used in reference to the goods & not to the ship, & was intended to be a condition & not a mere warranty, & the buyers were entitled to reject the goods & to recover the money which they had paid for them.—*BENABU & CO. v. To debt for goods sold & delivered, debt. pleaded in substance that the goods were quantities of coals sold & delivered by him to plffs., respectively exceeding 500 lb. & respectively delivered within the city of London, in divers, to wit, two carts, without delivering, before any such quantities of coals were unloaded, a ticket signed by plffs. according to the form of the statute; & that debt. did not purchase the same at the coal market:—Held: the statute being passed for the protection of the purchasers of coal, the plea was an answer to the action.—CUNDELL v. DAWSON (1847), 4 C. B. 376; 17 L. J. C. P. 311; 9 L. T. O. S. 173; 11 Jur. 634; 136 E. R. 552.

Nor are they within Excise Licences Act, 1825 (c. 80), ss. 6, 7, by which penalties are imposed for distilling spirits without a licence, & the spirits are forfeited & may be seized, etc., or within Excise Management Act, 1827 (c. 53), s. 32, which enacts forfeiture of excisable goods deposited in any place with intent to defraud the revenue. Assuming that, by any of the above enactments, the spirits or compound are liable to forfeiture, & the maker to a penalty, he may nevertheless, except where they have actually been lost to the purchaser by seizure, maintain an action against a purchaser for the price; for the statutes do not avoid the contract. If debt. in such action pleads that, by reason of the spirits having been so illegally distilled or deposited, the sweet spirits of nitre were seized while in his possession, & an information laid against him in the Exchequer, where they were afterwards condemned, such plea does not amount to the general issue, but, admitting a sale, shows only a failure of consideration.—*BAILEY v. 495. Waiver of performance of condition.]—A contract provided for the sale of rosewood for shipment in 1903, to be delivered at Hull in instalments during that year, cash payable against bill of lading. While the first consignment of rosewood was on the sea, the buyers repudiated the contract & refused to accept any rosewood under it upon the ground that the seller had committed a breach of a collateral oral agreement not to supply rosewood to any other person in the trade during 1903. When the bill of lading for the first consignment was tendered to the buyers they refused to accept it or to pay for the rosewood comprised in it; the rosewood was therefore sold by the seller as against the buyers, & the seller claimed as damages from the buyers for their refusal to accept the consignment the difference between the contract price & the price at which it was sold as against the contract. The second consignment, consisting of the balance of the rosewood, was likewise refused by the buyers on the same ground & sold as against them. It subsequently came to the knowledge of the buyers that a portion of the rosewood in the first consignment did not answer the description of the quality of rosewood in the contract, & it was admitted that there was some inferiority in a portion that would be compensated for by an allowance of about 6 per cent. on the value of the consignment. The second consignment was in accordance with the contract. The seller having sued the buyers for damages for not accepting the rosewood, the judge at the trial found as a fact that the collateral oral agreement relied upon by the buyers had never been entered into:—Held: the original repudiation of the contract by the buyers was wrongful & by refusing to take delivery of the consignments on arrival on the ground that they had already repudiated the entire contract the buyers had waived the performance of conditions precedent on the part of the sellers, who were entitled to damages based upon the difference between the contract price of the rosewood & the price at which it had been sold by them as against the contract.—*BRAITHWAITE v. PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

496 I. Warranty imports liability.]—A seller who gives an express warranty with the article sold must supply an article which complies with the warranty.—MAENNEL v. GARAGE CONTINENTAL, LTD, [1910] App. D. 137.—S. AF.

ranty of parts extended to warranty as to whole.]—NORTH-WEST THRESHER CO. v. ANDREWS (Alta.) (1908), 8 W. L. R. 827.—CAN.

2. Evidence of warranty.—Express of a warranty, he is liable whether they are within his knowledge or not (TINDAL, C.J.).—BUDD v. FAIRMANER (1831), 5 C. & P. 78; 172 E. R. 885, N. P.; subsequent proceedings, 8 Bing. 48.

500. —.]—In an action by a tradesman against the manufacturers of an iron safe, for the breach of an alleged warranty that it was strong enough to resist all attempts that might be thereafter made to force it open, it having in fact been broken open by burglars more than six years after the sale & delivery, & there being evidence that it was broken open easily, & that it was far less strong & secure than it ought to have been:—Held: the warranty, as declared upon & set up at the trial, was an absolute warranty of perfect security for all time to come, was one so extensive, even if it would be valid, that it required cogent evidence of express warranty to that extent, & was not sustained by proof of mere representations that the safe would be strong enough to resist burglars. Semble: even assuming that such a warranty had been given, though it had certainly been broken, the statute ran from the time of the delivery of the safe, not from the burglary.

The question, however, will be upon the whole of the evidence whether the warranty set up was given. The warranty set up is one which is to last as long as the safe itself shall endure, which may endure from generation to generation for a hundred years. It is a warranty which is to be co-existent & continuing during the whole of that period or during all that time is to impose an unlimited liability upon the seller from which he can never divest himself. Is it likely that any one in his senses would take upon himself such a responsibility? (COCKBURN, C.J.).

It is undoubtedly true that there may be a warranty without the use of the word "warrant"; but then there must be words used tantamount to it & such as men of business would recognise as imparting a warranty. . . . A warranty imports an absolute liability on an undertaking. . . . It is not because the seller represented that this safe was secure against burglars or used other eulogistic language about it . . . that therefore he is to be held liable as for a warranty (COCKBURN, C.J.).—WALKER v. MILNER (1866), 4 F. & F. 745.

502. Necessity for word "warrant" or "warranty."—CAVE v. COLEMAN, No. 437, ante.

503. —.]—A. sent his horse to Tattersall's for sale by public auction where he was to be sold without a warranty. On the day prior to the intended sale, meeting B. at the stable, & seeing him in the act of examining the horse's legs, A. said, "You have nothing to look for: I assure you he is perfectly sound in every respect"; whereupon B. replied, "If you say so, I am perfectly satisfied," & upon the faith of the representation so made to him by A., which was admitted to have been made in perfect good faith, became the purchaser:—Held: there was no evidence of warranty to go to a jury, the representation made by A., on the day preceding the auction forming no part of the contract of sale.

There is no necessity that the word warrant or promise should occur in the bargain. . . . Nor is it necessary that the statement or representation should be simultaneous with the close of the bargain: if it be part of the contract it matters not what period of the negotiation it is made (JERVIS, C.J.).

The fact of that conversation passing between pltf. & deft. at the time when it was known to both that the sale was to take place by public competition on the following day, affords to my mind a very strong reason for thinking that deft. could not have intended what he then said to be imported as a warranty into the transaction (MAULE, J.).—HOPKINS v. TANQUERAY (1854), 15 C. B. 130; 2 C. L. R. 842; 23 L. J. C. P. 162; 23 L. T. O. S. 144; 18 Jur. 608; 2 W. R. 475; 139 E. R. 369.

504. —.]—Pltf., having heard that deft. had some barley to sell, went to his counting-house, when his agent produced a sample which he said was "seed barley," offered to deft. at 39s., & if pltf. would take it at 40s. he might have it. Pltf. looked at the barley & said it was a good sample of seed barley, & agreed to buy it. At pltf.'s request deft. wrote to the person who had offered it to him saying that he would accept it, & asking what sort it was as it would do well for seed. Pltf. afterwards sold it under a warranty in writing as "Chevalier seed barley." It turned out that it was "barley bigg," a species of barley unfit for malting purposes; & the person to whom pltf. had sold it recovered damages against him for the breach of warranty:—Held: there was no warranty by deft. that the barley was "seed barley"; the contract was satisfied by the delivery of barley fit for sowing; & if the term "seed barley" meant barley fit for malting purposes, that ought to be shown by clear & irresistible evidence.

I do not doubt the proposition contended for on behalf of pltf., that a statement at a sale may be a warranty although the word "warrant" is not used. If a person asks a dealer for a particular article, & he produces something which he says is the particular article, that amounts to a warranty. Here there is no warranty: both parties say that the barley is seed barley (BRAMWELL, B.).—CARTER v. CRICK (1859), 4 H. & N. 412; 28 L. J. Ex. 238; 33 L. T. O. S. 166; 7 W. R. 507; 157 E. R. 899.

507. Collected from more than one document—Advertisement & contract of sale.—An action of deceit does not lie against a person making an untrue representation to another, on the faith of which the hearer acts & thereby incurs damage, if the party making such representation did not know it to be untrue. The owners of a ship circulated advertisements of sale beginning with a description of the ship, which stated her to be copper fastened; after which was a notice, that the hull, masts, yards, & rigging were to be taken with all faults. Under this was printed the word "inventory" which was followed by a list of the ship's stores & tackle; & there was then a further announcement that the vessel & her stores were to be taken with all faults, & without allowance for weight, length, quality, quantity or any defect whatever. The owners afterwards executed a written contract of sale not stating the vessel to be copper fastened but containing this clause: "On payment of the purchase-money the said brig with what belongs to her shall be delivered according to the inventory which has been exhibited; but the said inventory shall be made good as to quantity only; & the said brig together with her stores, shall be taken with all faults in the condition they now lie without any allowance for weight, length, quality or any defect, whatsoever":—Held: assuming that the advertisement could, by words of reference, be incorporated with the contract of sale, the word "inventory" in the contract referred only to the list of stores, etc., & not to the prior part of the advertisement; & therefore, on the two documents taken together, no warranty appeared that the ship was copper fastened.—*FREEMAN v. 509. Extension of warranty—By implication—Express warranty.]—Upon a contract for the sale of goods, with a particular express warranty, the ct. will not extend such warranty by implication.

The declaration stated a bargain for the sale by debts, to pltf. of a certain cargo, to wit, the cargo of Indian corn then shipped at Orfano, on board the Ottoman, at a certain price, including freight & insurance to Cork, Liverpool, or London, & that it was agreed that the quality of the said Indian corn was equal to the average of the shipments of that article in the season of 1847, & that the said Indian corn had been shipped in good & merchantable condition; & alleged for breach, that the corn was not, at the time of shipment, or at any other time, in good & merchantable condition, or in a fit & proper condition for the performance of the voyage from Orfano to Cork, etc. The judge left it to the jury to say whether the corn was, at the time of shipment, in a good & merchantable condition for a foreign voyage:—Held: a misdirection; inasmuch as it was extending by implication the express warranty contained in the contract.—DICKSON v. ZIZINIA (1851), 10 C. B. 602; 20 L. J. C. P. 73; 16 L. T. O. S. 366; 15 Jur. 359; 138 E. R. 238.

511. Evidence of warranty—Express warranty—Statements in invoice or prospectus.]—When a man purchases a patented article, with a known title, there is no implied warranty that it will answer any particular purpose; but it is for the jury whether there was an express warranty, & the mere fact that in printed invoices or prospectuses the invention is described as effecting an object, is not in itself conclusive evidence of a warranty.—PRIDEAUX v. M'MURRAY (1860), 2 F. & F. 225.

512. ——— Admissibility of antecedent or subsequent negotiations.]—Under a contract in writing which contained no mention of the particular purpose for which they were required, the pltf. bought "the 24/40 h.p. Fiat omnibus" they had inspected & "six 24/40 h.p. Fiat omnibus chassis" at an agreed price. The articles when delivered were not fit to perform the work required of them. In an action for damages:—Held: this was not a contract for the sale of a specified article under its patent or trade name, & there was an implied condition that the goods should be reasonably fit for the purpose for which they were required within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14 (1), & also they should be of merchantable quality within sub-sect. 2 of the same sect., & consequently the pltf. were entitled to recover damages for breach of the contract.

The proviso at the end of sect. 14 (1) assumes the absence of any express assurance by the seller & deals only with the case of express or implied information by the buyer of the purpose for which he requires the article, so framed as to show that he relied on the seller's skill or judgment, but the seller is not bound to refrain from carrying out his order for a particular article because it is ill adapted for the purpose mentioned in the order, provided the article has in fact a patent or trade name under which it can be ordered.

The condition implied by sect. 14 (2) that the goods are of merchantable quality applies to all goods bought from the seller who deals in goods of that description whether they are sold under a patent or trade name or otherwise.

When the contract is expressed in a formal document or in a letter of offer & a letter of acceptance, no antecedent or subsequent negotiations are admissible to construe such a contract (FARWELL, L.J.).

The phrase ["merchantable quality"] in sect. 14 (2) is, in my opinion, used as meaning that the article is of such quality & in such condition that a reasonable man acting reasonably would after a full examination accept it under the circumstances of the case in performance of his offer to buy that article whether he buys for his own use or to sell again (FARWELL, L.J.).—BRISTOL TRAMWAYS, ETC., CARRIAGE CO., LTD. v. The iron when tendered was found to bear the mark of the new firm H. & co., with a crown, & was rejected by deft. In an action for refusing to accept the iron, the jury found that the mark S. & H. was not a material part of the bargain, & that the article tendered was substantially what deft. bargained for:—Held: construing the contract by the surrounding circumstances, the mark S. & H. might, if necessary, be rejected as falsa demonstratio, & the contract was complied with by the tender of iron marked H. & co.—*HOPKINS v. 524. ———.]—Deft., living at Cardiff, on Nov. 9, 1874, wrote to pltf., living in London, offering to sell him a secondhand locomotive engine, in "good working order," for £385, & asking if pltf. would get it inspected, & see if he could take it, to which pltf., on Nov. 10, replied, saying, "Tell me who are the makers, what material are the fire box & tubes made of, & how old is the engine." Deft.'s answer of Nov. 12 was as follows: "E. & co. are the makers of the locomotive, age about thirteen & a half years, fire box & tubes are copper. Can you let some one inspect her?" In reply to which pltf., on Nov. 14, wrote as follows: "If you can assure me that the loco. is in good working order I will, on the faith of that, send an engineer down to look at it." Deft. having on Nov. 16 written, saying "the engine is now in good order," pltf. thereupon sent an engineer to Halifax, where the engine was, to inspect & give him an estimate of the value, with particulars of the size, & diameter of the cylinder & wheels, & their condition. The engineer inspected the engine, & in the course of his examination he cleared away the soot & smoke from one of the tubes, & finding it to be of brass, he took for granted that all of them were of that material, & carried his examination in that respect no farther. He then sent his report, giving a detailed description of the engine to pltf., stating, amongst other particulars, "copper fire box & brass tubes," & specifying the repairs necessary to be done. Upon this pltf., on Nov. 27, wrote to deft. saying, "The condition of the engine, & all things considered, I cannot offer you more than £300 for it, & if you like to accept that I will take the engine." That offer deft. accepted, & the bargain was thereupon concluded between them. Upon taking the engine to pieces some months afterwards, pltf. found that only five of the boiler tubes were of brass, the remaining one hundred & thirty-one being of iron, & thereupon, on the strength of deft.'s representation, in his letter of Nov. 12, that the tubes were copper, he claimed compensation from deft. for the difference in value between the two metals, which deft., denying his liability, refused to make. Pltf. then brought an action, at the trial of which a verdict was formally entered for him, with leave to deft. to move to enter the verdict on the ground that on the true construction of the correspondence, deft. did not warrant as alleged, & that the representation therein contained did not enter into or form part of the subsequent contract:—Held: (1) deft.'s letter of Nov. 12 amounted to an express warranty by deft., on the faith of which pltf. acted in concluding the bargain, that the tubes of the engine were of brass or copper; (2) the subsequent inspection by pltf.'s engineer, which was intended only to apply to the ascertaining the engine's working condition & state of repairs, & not to the material of the tubes, did not do away with or in any way affect such previous warranty.—COWDY v. THOMAS (1876), 36 L. T. 22.

525. ———.]—Assertion by seller of fact unknown to purchaser.]—It was laid down by BULLER, J. . . . in Pasley v. Freeman, No. 517, ante: "It was held . . . in Crosse v. Gardner, No. 515, ante, & Mudina v. Stoughton, No. 516, ante, that an affirmation at the time of sale is a warranty provided it appears on evidence to have been so intended." In determining whether it was so intended a decisive test is whether the vendor assumes to assert a fact of which the buyer is ignorant or merely states an opinion or judgment upon a matter of which the vendor has no special knowledge & on which the buyer may be expected also to have an opinion & to exercise his judgment. In the former case it is a warranty in the latter not (A. L. SMITH, M.R.).—DE LASSALLE v. GUILDFORD, [1901] 2 K. B. 215; 70 L. J. K. B. 533; 84 L. T. 549; 49 W. R. 467; 17 T. L. R. 384, C. The particulars also contained words not accountable for errors in description. Pltf.s relying upon the particulars agreed to buy the ships, & a memorandum of the contract, which did not in terms refer to the particulars, was signed by the parties on Dec. 9, 1915. The ships were delivered to & accepted by pltf.s, & it was subsequently discovered that the dead-weight capacity of each ship was only 360 tons. tion, though executed at request, could extend beyond the promise which the law would imply while the consideration was executory; at the time of sale the only implied promise was to deliver the horse on request, & after the sale therefore there was no consideration for the subsequent express promise of warranty.—ROSCORLA v. 551. Specification to be given within certain time—"Beginning of May"—Given between twelfth & fifteenth thereof.]—Whether or not a term of a contract is a condition precedent must be collected from the provisions of the instrument creating the contract & the circumstances legally admissible in evidence with reference to which it is to be construed.

Defts. agreed to sell & deliver to plffs. 1,000 tons of iron. By the sale note it was provided: "Delivered . . . cost & freight Japan, direct port, specification to be given in the beginning of May. Time of shipping May & June from Antwerp. It was known by both parties that the specification had to be sent from Japan, & in fact, the specification was given in various parts between May 12 & 15. All the iron could be manufactured by defts. in eight days, & opportunities of shipment in May & June were frequent from Antwerp to Japan:—Held: "specification to be given in the beginning of May" was not a condition precedent, a breach of which entitled defts. to repudiate the contract, but, even if it was, the giving of the specification between May 12 & 15 was sufficient compliance.—*KIDSTON & Co. v. 1. Whether time essence of contract—Intention of parties.]—Where in a contract a definite time had been fixed for completion, the ct. will consider whether the true intention of the parties at the of beans, made in the form adopted by the London Corn Trade Assocn., contained the clause, "Shipment made or to be made, & bill or bills of lading dated or to be dated during Dec. 1909 &/or Jan. 1910." It also contained the clause: "Bill of lading to be considered proof of date of shipment in the absence of evidence to the contrary":—Held: the stipulation that the bills of lading were to be dated during Dec. 1909, &/or Jan. 1910, was a condition of the contract, & therefore the buyers were entitled to reject the beans where they were shipped in Jan. 1910, but the bill of lading tendered was dated Feb. 1910.—Re GENERAL TRADING CO. & VAN STOLK'S COMMISSIEHANDEL (1911), 16 Com. 553. Delivery of notice of appropriation.—Resps. in Rotterdam contracted to buy from appls. in Hamburg 6,000 tons of South Russian wheat, the conditions of the contract providing that notice of appropriation with ship's name & date of bill of lading should be given by the shippers to the buyers within seven days from date of bill of lading & that provisional invoice with ship's name & date of bill of lading should be sent by the shippers' London house to the buyers within three days from the arrival of the documents in London. The sellers shipped the wheat at Novorossisk, & within the seven days the sellers sent to the buyers a telegram & confirming letter, which the sellers alleged to be a notice of appropriation, but neither document stated the date of the bill of lading. On the same day the sellers posted to the buyers a provisional invoice which gave the date of the bill of lading, but the provisional invoice was not received by the buyers until after the expiry of the seven days. The buyers contended that there had been no tender in conformity with the contract, & it was found by the appeal committee in an arbn. that there had been no good notice of appropriation in the telegram & confirming letter & that the provisional invoice was not intended as a notice of appropriation & that it was a recognised custom that notice of appropriation & provisional invoice should be separate documents, & that therefore the buyers were under no liability to the sellers:—Held: even if the provisional invoice constituted a notice of appropriation, yet, as it was not received by the buyers within the contract time, the sellers had not satisfied the contract, & as the custom was not unreasonable & was not inconsistent with the contract, the provisional invoice was not a notice of appropriation, & the award of the appeal committee must be upheld.—*COMPAGNIE CONTINENTALE D' IMPORTATION v. After the straw had been supplied for some time W. refused to pay for the last load delivered, & insisted on always keeping one payment in arrear:—Held: according to the true effect of the agreement each load was to be paid for on delivery, & on W.'s refusal so to pay for them, R. was not bound to send any more.—*WITHERS v. In Jan. the co. delivered part only of that month's instalment, & in the beginning of Feb. made a further delivery. On Feb. 2, shortly before payment for these deliveries became due, a petition was presented to wind up the co. Resps. bonâ fide, under the erroneous advice of their solr. that they could not without leave of the ct. safely pay pending the petition, objected to make the payments then due unless the co. obtained the sanction of the ct., which they asked the co. to obtain. On Feb. 10 the co. informed resps. that they should consider the refusal to pay as a breach of contract, releasing the co. from any further obligations. On Feb. 15 an order was made to wind up the co. by the ct. A correspondence ensued between resps. & the liquidator, in which resps. claimed damages for failure to deliver the Jan. instalment, & a right to deduct those damages from any payments then due; & said that they always had been & still were ready to accept such deliveries & make such payments as ought to be accepted & made under the contract, subject to the right of set-off. The liquidator made no further deliveries, & brought an action in the name of the co. for the price of the steel delivered. Resps. counterclaimed for damages for breaches of contract for non-delivery:—Held: upon the true construction of the contract, payment for a previous delivery was not a condition precedent to the right to claim the next delivery; the resps. had not, by postponing payment under erroneous advice, acted so as to show an intention to repudiate the contract, or so as to release the co. from further performance. —MERSEY STEEL & IRON CO. v. 560. —.]—In an agreement for the sale of goods the question whether time is of the essence of the contract will depend on the intention of the parties as disclosed in the terms thereof.

"Ascertained goods," within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 52, are goods the individuality of which has in some way been found out at the time of the contract.

By a sold note dated Sept. 12, 1916, the sellers sold to the buyers ten bales of Hessian bags, all conditions according to the "spot," which meant that the goods were available & ready for delivery—contract form of a certain trade assocn., terms net cash against delivery order on or before Sept. 19, 1916, delivery prompt, rent & insurance free to Sept. 19, 1916. On the same day, but after the sold note was given, the sellers sent to the buyers an invoice for the goods which gave the specific marks & numbers of the bales as 10.30 ex 6782/6806, & stated that the sale was "ex wharf, London." On Sept. 19, no cheque for payment having been received, the sellers wrote to the buyers cancelling the contract. On Sept. 20 the buyers tendered the price, which was refused. On a reference to arbn., it was decided as a fact, so far as it was a question of fact & not of law, that it was a recognised custom in the trade that if the sellers tendered to the buyer an invoice giving specific marks & numbers of the goods, such goods were specifically appropriated to the contract, & were ready for delivery against payment, that if the price was tendered within a reasonable time before notice of resale, the buyer was entitled to delivery of the goods against payment, & that, no such notice having been given, the contract stood. On an award stated in the form of a special case:—Held: (1) time was of the essence of the contract to make payment & take delivery, the buyers were in default, & the sellers were entitled to cancel the contract; (2) in any event, the buyers were not entitled to specific performance of the contract, as the goods were not "ascertained" within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 52.—

562. — Shipment in part before time—Whether compliance with condition.]—Defts. employed pltf. as brokers to buy cotton, & received from them this note signed by them as brokers “bought by order & for account of Messrs. Shand & co. at, etc., the following cotton 500 bales June &/or July shipment.” Pltf. had no principal, & in performance of their contract with defts. tendered cotton which they were selling on their own account, of which defts. were ignorant & this cotton, being of May shipment, was refused. Within a reasonable time pltf. tendered other cotton, also on their own account, of June & July shipment, & this cotton also was refused by defts.:—Held: assuming a contract of purchase & sale between pltf. & defts., pltf. were not, by declaring cotton of May shipment, estopped from declaring other cotton of June or July shipment in performance of their contract.—TETLEY v. SHAND (1871), 25 L. T. 658; 20 W. R. 206.

563. —.—.]—Deft. contracted for the purchase of a large quantity of Danubian maize “fair average quality of the season & port of shipment when shipped. To be shipped from Danube, etc., by three or more first class vessels. For shipment in June &/or July, 1869, old style, seller’s option,” etc.

In fulfilment of the contract on the part of the seller two cargoes of maize were tendered to deft., the bills of lading for which were dated respectively June 4 & 5, 1869. The loading of these two cargoes was commenced respectively on May 12 & 16, & completed on June 4 & 6; somewhat more than half of each cargo having been put on board in May. There was evidence that grain shipped in May was more likely to damage by heating than grain shipped in June.

It was left to the jury to say whether in their opinion the cargoes in question were “June shipments” in the ordinary business sense of the term; & they found that they were. The judge was of the same opinion, & directed a verdict for pltf.:—Held: the conclusion was right.—ALEXANDER

564. — Usage of trade.]—(1) Two contracts each for the sale of 300 tons of rice were made in London. The first contract, which the second exactly followed, was for 300 tons “of Madras rice, to be shipped at Madras, or coast for this port, during the months of Mar. &/or Apr. 1874, per Rajah of Cochin. The 800 tons filled 8,200 bags. The vessel arrived at Madras in Feb., & on Feb. 23, 1,780 bags were put on board, & on Feb. 24, a like number; on Feb. 28, 3,560 bags were put on board, & bills of lading were given for those amounts on the days mentioned. A bill of lading for the remaining 1,080 bags was given on Mar. 3, but all, except 50 bags, had been put on board before that day. In an action for refusing to accept the rice, the defence was that it had not been shipped during the months of Mar. &/or Apr.:—Held: the contract had not been complied with; its words must be construed in their plain & ordinary sense; evidence of any usage in the particular trade must, to affect their meaning, be very clear & consistent, & such evidence not having been given in this case, pltf. could not recover on the contract.

Under two contracts—Partial fulfilment of second contract.]—Deft. entered into two contracts, each of which was for the purchase from pltf. of 4,500 quarters of Russian oats, more or less, “shipment by steamer or steamers during Feb. Should ice at loading port prevent shipment within stipulated time, shipment to be made immediately after re-opening of the navigation.” Pltf. shipped on board one steamer 4,511 quarters to answer the first contract, & 1,139 quarters to answer in part the second contract. Pltf. also shipped on board another steamer a sufficient quantity of oats to complete the second contract. The shipment on the first steamer was made in time; that on the second steamer was made too late:—Held: deft. was bound to accept the 1,139 quarters in part fulfilment of

580. —. —.]—(1) Under a contract for the sale of goods to be delivered within a certain period of time the buyer's right to require delivery within that period may be waived even after that period has expired; but it would seem that, where the contract is within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, the waiver must be evidenced by writing.

(2) Where, after the expiration of the period of delivery fixed by a contract for the sale of goods, the buyer by his letters & conduct leads the seller to entertain the belief that the contract still subsists & to act upon that belief at serious expense to himself, a new agreement may be implied that the period for delivery is extended & that delivery may take place within a reasonable time of which notice is to be given by the buyer to the seller.

By a contract coming within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, & duly made in writing, pltf. agreed to sell to deft. 11,000 lb. of cotton yarn, delivery to begin in Sept. 1918, & to be at the rate of 1,100 lb. per week, failure to deliver within the stipulated time to render the contract liable to cancellation by the deft., & incomplete deliveries not to be taken into account. Delivery should have been completed by Nov. 15, 1918. Pltf. delivered no yarn till Oct. 20, 1918, when he delivered 550 lb., & thereafter on various dates from the end of Nov. 1918, to the end of Feb. 1919, he delivered seven further quantities averaging upward of 500 lb. each. During all this period & the early part of Mar. 1919, deft. by his letters complained of the delay & asked for better deliveries, but thereby led pltf. to entertain the belief that the contract still subsisted, & to act upon that belief at expense to himself. On Mar. 13, 1919, deft., having given no previous notice requiring delivery in any reasonable time, wrote to pltf. cancelling the order, & he thereupon refused to take any further quantity of the yarn. Pltf. brought an action against deft. for damages for refusing to take the remainder of the yarn:—Held: although time was of the essence of the contract with respect to delivery which should, prima facie, have been completed by Nov. 15, 1918, yet deft. by his letters, though written after that date, had waived his right to insist that the period for delivery terminated on that date; deft. was also thereby estopped from alleging that that period terminated on that date; the letters between the parties implied a new agreement that delivery might be made within an extended & reasonable period, of which notice was to be given by deft. to pltf., & as deft. had given no such notice, no period had been fixed within which pltf. should make delivery; & in these circumstances deft. had no right to cancel on Mar. 13, 1919, & pltf. was entitled to damages to be assessed as at that date.—HARTLEY v. HYMANS, [1920] 3 K. B. 475; 90 L. J. K. B. 14; 124 L. T. 31; 36 T. L. R. 805; 25 Com. Cas. 365.

581. — Delivery within particular year.]—By a written contract dated Nov. 26, 1917, resp. firm sold to applt. firm 864 bales of dhotis as specified to be manufactured by named mills, with whom the sellers had contracted for a larger number of bales. The contract provided that the goods "are to be taken delivery of as & when the same may be received from the mills; delivery to be caused to be given in full by Dec. 31, 1918." The sellers delivered only part of the goods, owing to the mills failing to manufacture or deliver to them the balance:—Held: the buyers were entitled to recover damages from the sellers; the stipulation as to delivery quoted above did not limit the goods to be delivered to those supplied by the mills in 1918, nor did they make delivery by the mills a condition precedent, & the sellers were not relieved of their obligation by frustration of the contract or by any implied condition.—*HURNANDRAI FULCHAND v. Defts. did not deliver any iron in June or July, but on Aug. 15 they sent a small portion of iron to pltf., & on Aug. 21 pltf., acting on the notion that under the contract the time for delivery had expired on Aug. 17, wrote to defts., that as the time for delivery had expired, they would receive no more iron, & they afterwards commenced the present action for breach of contract in not delivering the iron on or before Aug. 17.

584. Excuse for non-observance of condition—Industrial disturbance.—By a contract in writing dated Feb. 21, 1912, defts. agreed to build a steamer for, & deliver her to pltf. on or before Feb. 28, 1913. The contract contained the following exceptions clause:—"If the steamer is not delivered entirely ready to purchaser at the above-mentioned time, the builders hereby agree to pay to the purchaser for liquidated damages, & not by way of penalty, the sum of £10 sterling for each day of delay & in deduction of the price stipulated in this contract, being excepted only the cause of force majeure, &/or strikes of workmen of the building yard where the vessel is being built, of the workshops where the machinery is being made, or at the works where steel is being manufactured, for the steamer, or any works of any subcontractor."

As a result of the universal coal strike of 1912 the works from which defts. obtained their materials for other ships they were building got behindhand; the ship in turn to be built before pltf.'s occupied the berth that was intended to be occupied by pltf.'s much longer than otherwise she would have done, & consequently pltf.'s steamer was late in being laid down. The steamer having been delivered after the contract date, pltf. claimed damages:—Held: (1) the general dislocation of the business of defts. & of those from whom they obtained materials operating indirectly on the completion of pltf.'s steamer, by preventing the completion of the vessel prior in turn, constituted a case of force majeure within the meaning of the exceptions clause & therefore excused defts. in respect of the delay so caused; (2) delay due to breakdown of machinery was, but delay due to bad weather was not, covered by the exception of force majeure.—*MATSOUKIS v. 589. Whether time essence of contract—Non-clearance of goods from auction rooms.—In an action for the non-delivery of goods, it appeared that defts., who were auctioneers, issued printed catalogues, headed "Great Western Railway Co. Catalogue of unclaimed property, etc., which will be sold by auction by Messrs. H. & E., defts., on Tuesday, Nov. 7, & following day. By order of the directors of the above co., etc.'" The catalogue contained, amongst others, the following conditions: "The lots to be cleared away, within three days after the sale at the purchaser's expense, etc. If any deficiency shall arise, or from any cause the auctioneer shall be unable to deliver any lot or portion of a lot, then in such case the purchaser shall accept compensation. Upon failure of complying with the above conditions, the money deposited in part payment shall be forfeited. All lots unclaimed within the time aforesaid shall be resold by public or private sale without further notice, & the deficiency made good by the defaulter." Pltf. attended the sale, received a catalogue, bought one of the lots, & paid a deposit. He did not fetch the goods away on Saturday, the last of the three days for clearing, but went for them on the Monday following, when he was told by one of defts. that the lot had been delivered to another person. There was evidence that the lot was seen on Saturday morning in defts.' possession, as if ready for delivery, & that it was usual to delay the delivery of large lots like it till the smaller lots had been delivered. Pltf. having been nonsuited:—Held: the condition as to clearing the lot within three days was not a condition precedent to pltf.'s right to claim delivery.—WOOLFE v. HORNE (1877), 2 Q. B. 590. — Alleged impossibility—Perishable goods.—The general rule is that in a mercantile contract time is of the essence of the contract. In this case it is particularly so, for potatoes are a perishable commodity. The seller cannot leave them in the farmer's hands until they become rotten. It is obvious, then, that in such a contract the time of taking is most material. The purchasers, therefore, not having taken the potatoes before Christmas, failed to perform their part. . . . Pltf.s. said that they could not send the boat on account of the frost, but as they had undertaken to send it they could not set up an excuse for not doing so. There was, therefore, a failure on their part to perform the contract, & they are not entitled to maintain the action (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—SHARP v. CHRISTMAS (1892), 8 T. L. R. 687, C. A.

591. Vessel to obtain clearance before named date—Certificate of clearance obtained—Though loading not completed.—Wheat was sold for shipment at Galveston, in the United States, by a specified vessel for Havre, "clearance" to be not later than May 31. A certificate of clearance was obtained on May 28. Part only of the cargo was then on board, the rest being alongside ready to be loaded. The loading was not completed until June 2, when the vessel sailed. By the statute of the United States the master must furnish a manifest of the cargo "on board, whereupon the collector shall grant a clearance." It was, however, customary to grant a clearance before the completion of loading, & such a clearance was valid & effective for all purposes, & entitled the vessel to sail immediately:—Held: the vessel

The mtgees. of the premises upon which the boiler stood having prevented pltf. from carrying it away, pltf. brought an action against deft., relying upon an alleged implied warranty that he had good title to the boiler, & that they should be permitted to remove it:—Held: there was no evidence to justify the jury in finding a warranty as alleged.—BAGUELEY v. 602. Sale of unredeemed pledge.]—

(1) There is no implied warranty of title in the contract of sale of a personal chattel; & in the absence of fraud, a vendor is not liable for a defect of title, unless there be an express warranty, or an equivalent to it, by declaration or conduct.

A warranty may be inferred from usage of trade, or from the nature of the trade being such as to lead to the conclusion that the person carrying it on must be understood to engage that the purchaser shall enjoy that which he buys, as against all persons; as where articles are bought in a shop professedly carried on for the sale of goods.

A pawnbroker, who sells a chattel as a forfeited pledge, merely undertakes that the subject of the sale is a pledge, & irredeemable, & that he is not cognisant of any defect of title to it.

(2) Semble: although, on the sale of a personal chattel, there is no implied warranty of title, so that the vendor would not be liable for a breach of it to unliquidated damages, yet the purchaser may recover back his money as on a consideration that failed, if it be shown that it was the understanding of both parties that the bargain should be put an end to if the purchaser should not have a good title.—MORLEY v. ATTENBOROUGH (1849), 3 Exch. 500; 18 L. J. Ex. 148; 12 L. T. O. S. 532; 13 J. P. 427; 13 Jur. 282; 154 E. R. 943.

When the Govt. wished to redeem any of these bonds, they gave notice to holders by public notification that they would be paid on presentation. After such notice, the bonds notified were called "Called Bonds." These bonds are dealt in England for the purpose of making remittances to America. The course of business is for the seller to supply the buyer with bonds or coupons of railway cos., etc., payable in America at an agreed price, no particular bonds or coupons being specified. It was proved that whenever default was made in payment of the coupons in America, the seller returned the money paid for them, but no evidence was given of any case in which payment of a bond had been refused.

A. sold to B. in accordance with the above course of business certain "Called Bonds," which had been originally stolen from American holders, & payment to B. of the bonds was refused by the American Govt.:—Held: there was an implied warranty of title on the sale by A. to B., & B. was entitled to recover from A. the price paid.—*RAPHAEL & SONS v. It then appeared that deft. had had no title to it, & pltf. was compelled to surrender it to the true owner. Pltf. sued deft. to recover back the purchase-money that he had paid as on a total failure of consideration:—Held: notwithstanding that he had had the use of the car the consideration had totally failed, & he was entitled to get the purchase-money back. The use of the car that he had had was no part of the consideration that he had contracted for, which was the property in & lawful possession of the car, whereas what he got was an unlawful possession which exposed him to the risk of an action at the suit of the true owner.

There is no doubt that what the buyer had a right to get was the property in the case, for above Act expressly provides that in every contract of sale there is an implied condition that the seller has a right to sell (ATKIN, L.J.).—*ROWLAND v. 610. ——— Infringement of trade marks.]—(1) A firm who dealt in confectioners' materials agreed in writing to sell condensed milk in tins & of a certain standard at a price including insurance & freight from New York to London. Payment was to be made in cash on receipt of the shipping documents. The buyers received the documents & paid the price. The goods arrived bearing a name or brand which was an infringement of the registered trade mark of certain manufacturers of condensed milk, at whose instance the comrs. of customs detained the goods. The buyers were obliged to remove the name or brand in order to get possession of the goods & could only sell them at a loss without any distinctive mark. In an action by the buyers against the sellers for breach of warranty:—Held: defts. had broken the implied condition in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 12 (1), that they had a right to sell the goods; they had broken the implied condition in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14 (2), that the goods should be of merchantable quality; they had also broken the implied warranty in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 12 (2), that the buyers should have & enjoy quiet possession of the goods.

(2) Defts. alleged that the contract of sale was an oral contract & that one of its terms was that they might deliver milk of several brands one of which was the infringing brand:—Held: assuming this to be a term of the contract it was not a circumstance showing a different intention so as to negative the implied condition & warranty in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 12.—*NIBLETT v. See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 13.

616. General rule.]—The expression "contract for the sale of goods by description," in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 13, applies to all cases where the buyer has not seen the goods, but relies solely on the description given by the seller.

Pltf. agreed to sell & deft. to buy a reaping machine, which deft. had never seen, & which pltf. stated to have been new the previous year, & to have been used to cut only 50 or 60 acres. The machine was delivered, & shortly afterwards deft. wrote complaining that it did not correspond with pltf.'s statements. After some further correspondence deft. returned the machine. In an action to recover the price:—Held: there was a contract for the sale of goods by description, within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 13, & therefore, by sect. 13, there was an implied condition that the goods should correspond with the description, there had been no acceptance of the machine by deft., within sect. 35, the property had not passed to deft., within sect. 17, & pltf. was not entitled to recover.—*VARLEY v. 621. Sale of goods packed in cases.]—By a contract for the sale of a quantity of cases of Australian canned fruits the goods were stated as being in cases containing thirty tins each, payment to be per dozen tins. The sellers tendered the whole quantity ordered, but about one-half of the cases contained twenty-four tins only; the remainder contained thirty tins. The buyers refused on this ground to take delivery & the dispute was referred to arb'n. The umpire found that there was no difference in the market value of the goods whether packed twenty-four or thirty tins in a case, & that the goods tendered were a good delivery:—Held: the sale was a sale of goods by description & as the goods contracted to be sold were mixed with goods of a different description the buyers were entitled under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 30 (3), to reject the whole consignment.—Re MOORE & Co. & LANDAUER & Co., [1921] 2 K. 624. ———.]—By deed poll, dated Oct. 21, 1836, def't. sold & assigned, etc., to pl'tf. all that ship or vessel called, etc., with her masts, tackle, & appurtenances, & covenanted that he had then good right, full power, & lawful authority, to sell & assign the premises to pl'tf. To a declaration on this covenant, assigning as breaches, (a) that at the time of making the deed poll, the ship was wholly lost & destroyed, & was incapable of being assigned, etc.; (b) that def't. had not at that time good right, etc. to assign her; def't. pleaded, that the ship was not, at the time of making the deed poll, wholly lost & destroyed, etc.; & that def't. had good right to assign her. It appeared in evidence, that at the time of the sale the ship was on a foreign voyage, that, on Oct. 13 she went aground in a storm on the coast of the Prince of Wales's Island, & was left by the crew, who, however, had access to her afterwards; that she lay aground 5 feet above water on one side, & with her masts standing, till the 24th, when the captain called a survey, & by the surveyor's advice, sold her; that her bulk ends were strained, but that if there had been facilities at hand, & it had been a different season of the year, she might have been got off & repaired; & that she had sustained no more damage on Oct. 21 than when she first took the ground:—Held: the covenant of def't., that he had power to transfer her as a ship, was not broken.

In the bargain & sale of an existing chattel, by which the property passes, the law does not, in the absence of fraud, imply any warranty of the good quality or condition of the chattel so sold. The simple bargain & sale, therefore, of the ship does not imply any contract that it is then seaworthy, or in a serviceable condition; & the express covenant that def't. had full power to bargain & sell in the manner before-mentioned, does not create any further obligation in this respect. But the bargain & sale of chattel, as

Thus, where A. bought of B. a cargo of Calcutta linseed, tale quale:—Held: the contract was not satisfied by the delivery of linseed, though coming from Calcutta, which contained so large an admixture of other inferior seeds as to have lost its distinctive character of Calcutta linseed.

The jury have in substance found that the linseed in question was so mixed with seeds of a different & inferior description as to have lost its distinctive character & prevent its passing in the market by the commercial name of Calcutta linseed. The purchaser had a right to expect, not a perfect article, but an article which would be saleable in the market as Calcutta linseed. If he got an article so adulterated as not reasonably to answer that description, he did not get what he bargained for (WILLES, J.).—WIELER v. SCHILIZI (1856), 17 C. B. 619; 25 L. J. C. 632. —.—.]—On a sale of goods to arrive by a particular ship, the contract being for the sale of a specific thing which the purchaser has no opportunity of examining, there is an implied warranty that the goods when shipped should be reasonably merchantable, & the question whether they were so is a question for the jury.

The maxim caveat emptor does not apply to a sale of goods where the buyer has no opportunity of inspection. Pltfs., at Liverpool, entered into a contract with deft. for the purchase of a quantity of Manila hemp, to arrive from Singapore by certain ships. The ships arrived, & the hemp was delivered to pltfs. & paid for; on examination of the bales it was found that they had been wetted through with salt water, & afterwards unpacked & dried, & then repacked & shipped at Singapore. The hemp was not damaged to such an extent as to make it lose its character of hemp, but it was not merchantable. Deft. did not know of the state in which the hemp had been shipped at Singapore. Pltfs. sold the hemp by auction as Manila hemp with all faults, & it realised 75 per cent. of the price which similar hemp would have fetched if undamaged:—Held: there was an implied warranty on the part of deft. to supply Manila hemp of the particular quality of which the bales consisted in a merchantable condition; & pltfs. were entitled, as damages, to the difference between what the hemp was worth when it arrived & what the same hemp would have realised had it been shipped in a state in which it ought to have been shipped.—*JONES v. Though the declaration stated also that it was sold as & for pimento of good quality & condition, whereas the samples showed that it was dusty and of inferior quality, yet the jury having found for plffs., the ct. refused to set aside the verdict.—*JONES v. 642. Instalment contract—Each instalment must correspond with description.]—By a contract dated Dec. 8, 1920, pltf. sold to defts. about 2,500 carcasses of frozen meat weight under 72 lb., average not to exceed 60 lb. Each month's or steamer's contract was to be considered a separate contract, & payment was to be made against documents on arrival of steamer. Plffs. shipped the carcasses on two vessels, The W., which arrived on Aug. 14, 1921, & The P. C., which arrived in Oct., 1921. The W. contained 1092 carcasses of average weight of 62.81 lb. The average weight of the carcasses on The P. C. was 53.43 lb. The average weight of the whole quantity shipped was under 60 lb. Defts. rejected the carcasses shipped on The W. on the ground that their average weight was over 60 lb., & plffs. brought an action for damages:—Held: defts. were entitled to reject The W. shipment. The words average not to exceed 60 lb. constituted part of the description of the goods. The contract was in substance an instalment contract under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 31, as to which each instalment must conform to the description.—*BALLANTINE & CO. v. for a passenger ship." Pltf., having read the advertisement, negotiated for its purchase, & a contract was signed by pltf. & deft., whereby the former agreed to buy & the latter to sell "the barque Intrepid, as she now lies in the St. Katherine Dock, agreeable to the inventory annexed." The inventory commenced by describing the ship in the same terms as the advertisement: under that was the word "Inventory," which was followed by a list of the ship's stores & tackle; & in the margin, opposite to this list, deft. signed his name. The document concluded thus: "The vessel & her stores to be taken with all faults as they now lie, without any allowance for deficiency in length, weight, quantity, quality, or any defect or error whatever." The vessel proved not to be teak-built, nor of class A.1, nor adapted for a passenger ship:—Held: there was no warranty of the vessel.—TAYLOR v. BULLEN (1850), 5 Exch. 779; 20 L. J. Ex. 21; 16 L. 645. —.]—It is a condition precedent to plffs.' right to recover that the eggs should be Galician eggs. The eggs not being Galician eggs, deft. is under no obligation to accept or pay for them. . . . Even if the misrepresentation is a perfectly innocent one, it goes to the substance of the whole consideration for the agreement of deft., & therefore, justified the refusal of deft. to accept or pay for the 110 cases. . . . Notwithstanding the absence of fraud the stipulation "with all faults," does not cover or apply to a case where the complaint of the purchaser was the non-fulfilment of a condition precedent in not tendering or delivering the articles or the goods of the kind or description contracted for. In such a case the purchaser's complaint would be, not that the goods tendered were faulty, but, whether faulty or not, they were not those he bought. Again, such a stipulation will not cover a case where the goods tendered, although they might be of the nationality stipulated for, have, at the time appointed for delivery, by reason of decay or other damage become worthless, having entirely lost their distinctive character as merchantable commodities but "with all faults" does cover & disentitle the purchaser to reject any number of faulty eggs, so long as there remains a sufficient number of good ones corresponding with the sample to represent a merchantable bulk diminished as it might be by such faulty or worthless ones (HAWKINS, J.).—*PETERS & CO. v. 646. Provision for month's trial—Contract for supply of railway engines.]—Plffs. agreed with defts. to manufacture for them certain locomotive engines, under the following contract: "Each engine & tender to be subject to a performance of a distance of 1,000 miles, with proper loads; during which trial Messrs. S. & co., plffs., are to be liable to any breakage which may occur, if arising from defective materials or workmanship; but they are not to be responsible for nor liable to the repair of any breakage or damage, whether resulting from collision, neglect, or mismanagement of any of the co.'s servants, or any other circumstances, save & except defective materials or workmanship. The performance to which each engine is to be subjected, to take place within one month from the day on which the engine is reported ready to start; in default of which, Messrs. S. & co. shall forthwith be released from any responsibility in respect of the said engine; the balance to be paid on the satisfactory completion of the trial, & release of Messrs. S. & co.

from further responsibility in respect of such engine." It was also agreed, that the fire boxes should be made of copper of the thickness of 7-16ths of an inch, & they were accordingly so made; & that the best materials & workmanship were to be used. The engines were accordingly delivered to defts., & performed the distance of 1,000 miles within the month of trial, but nine months afterwards the fire box of one of them burst, when it was discovered that the copper had been considerably reduced in thickness. In an action against defts. for the balance due from them:—Held: they could not give evidence of an inherent defect in the copper, no fraud being alleged, since, by the terms of the contract, the month's trial, if satisfactory, was to release pltf's. from all responsibility in respect of bad materials & bad workmanship.—SHARP v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. (1841), 9 M. & W. 7; 2 Ry. & Can. Cas. 722; 11 L. J. Ex. 17; 152 E. R. 4.

The buyer to have the option, agreeably with the terms of the charterparty, of discharging the rice at any good & safe port in the United Kingdom, or on the continent between Havre & Hamburg, both inclusive. This contract to be void provided the above vessel makes the intermediate voyage between Akyab & Calcutta agreeably with the conditions of the charterparty. Payment to be made in cash on the arrival of the vessel at port of call, in full, less freight, at invoice net weights, etc., on handing the buyer bills of lading & charterparty, with the policies of insurance, indorsed to buyer, for full value, which are to be effected in London, with particular average in the usual way, free under 3 per cent. Should the vessel be lost, this contract to be null & void":—Held: a warranty on the part of A. to deliver a cargo consisting of "fair average Nicranzi rice" provided neither of the events occurred in which the contract was to be void.—SIMOND v. BRADDON (1857), 2 C. B. N. S. 324; 26 L. J. C. P. 198; 3 Jur. N. S. 719; 5 W. R. 594; 140 E. R. 441.

The cotton guaranteed equal to sealed sample in our, the brokers', possession. Should the quality prove inferior to the guarantee, a fair allowance to be made." The sample was of "Long-staple Salem" cotton. The 128 bales marked $\frac{D.C.}{C.}$ which arrived by the Cheviot contained Western "Madras" cotton. Upon a special case, in which it was stated that there were at the time of the contract different kinds of Madras cotton known in the market, & divided into certain classes & divisions; that the cotton tendered was not "Long-staple Salem," but a particularly good sample of Western Madras; that "the cotton was therefore not in accordance with the sample"; & that "Western Madras cotton is inferior to Long-staple Salem, & requires machinery for its manufacture different from that which is used for 'Long-staple Salem'":—Held: the cotton tendered was not that which defts. bargained for, & they were not bound to accept it with an allowance; for, the allowance clause had reference only to inferiority of quality, & not to difference of kind.—AZEMAR v. CASELLA (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 677; 36 L. J. C. P. 263; 16 L. T. 571; 15 W. R. 998, Ex. Ch.

The greater part was Chilean partly decorticated cotton cake but was not in sound merchantable condition at the time of shipment & contained only 32.28 per cent. protein & 7.78 per cent. oil. The goods were already afloat when they were sold:—Held: the words as to no guarantee did not apply to the words that followed them & therefore the buyers were entitled to damages because the goods were not in good condition at the time of shipment, & the words as to the percentages were words of description within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 13, under which there was an implied condition that the goods must comply with the description & as the variation in percentage was substantial the clause as to no guarantee did not apply & the buyers were entitled to further damages because of the variation from the contract description.—*WIMBLE, SONS & Co. v. Deft.'s agent afterwards sold pltf's. a second parcel of turnip seed, stating that it was "of the same stock" as the first parcel. No sold note was given; the invoices described it as "24½ quarters of turnips":—Held: as to the first parcel, the jury was properly directed that the description of it in the sold note amounted to a warranty that it was Skirving's swedes; as to the second parcel, the statement of def't.'s agent that it was "of the same stock" as the first, on the subsequent sale to pltf's., was evidence for the jury of a warranty that the second parcel also was Skirving's swedes.

661. "Reasonably free from stone & shale"—Coal.—Under an agreement dated Oct. 20, 1903, made between applt. coal co. & resp. steel co., each theretofore well acquainted with the business of the other, & the character of the coal won, the former contracted to supply to the latter, on terms & conditions which were specified in great detail, "all the coal that the steel co. may require for use in its works as hereinafter described," with the specific requirement that "all coal furnished shall be freshly mined & of the grade known as run-of-mine, reasonably free from stone & shale, & shall be supplied from such seams then being worked by the coal co. as the steel co. may designate." Other provisions imposed on the steel co. the obligation to purchase all their coal from the coal co. if the latter were ready to supply it, & gave the latter a preferential right to repurchase any excess delivery at less than the cost price. On Nov. 9, 1906, the coal co. notified the steel co. that the contract was at an end owing to their refusal to accept the coal furnished & to be furnished thereunder.

In a suit for a declaration that the coal co. had no power to rescind, for specific performance, or in the alternative for damages, the trial judge found, & their lordships approved the finding—(a) that the coal rejected was unfit for use by the steel co. for its metallurgical purposes, i.e., the manufacture of steel, owing to the large quantity of sulphur it contained; (b) that it was not reasonably free from stone & shale:—Held: (1) on the true construction of the contract, "reasonably free from stone & shale" was irrespective of the method by which that result was obtained, & could not be so restricted as to mean as free from stone & shale as it could be made by reasonable & proper picking, & nothing more; (2) the above obligation to supply related to coal suitable in character for pltf's. works to the extent that the same could be obtained by the reasonable & proper working of their mines. Those works were enumerated in great detail, not, as the terms of the contract & surrounding circumstances showed, for the purpose of measuring the quantity required, but of specifying precisely the uses to which the coal was to be put; & the provision as to repurchase was inexplicable in the case of unsuitable coal.—DOMINION COAL CO., LTD. v. epithet has acquired in the trade a definite meaning, as, the usual or average length or quality, then the buyer is entitled to an article of such equal or average length or quality; & it is no sufficient excuse for not delivering it, that it is a fair average of the growth of the year. Assuming the meaning of such a contract to be for the jury, the question will be whether it meant an article of a certain, definite quality, with reference to length, colour, or the like, or merely the average growth of the year, & if the contract in its terms, according to their ordinary meaning, imports the former, it is for the seller to adduce evidence to show that they are understood in the latter sense.—FRITH v. MITCHELL (1865), 4 F. & F. 464, N. P.

667. — “Pure butter.” — I cannot believe the parties ever intended that the butter to be supplied should be in the simple state that it left the churn, for the purchaser expected that some preservative would be added so that it should keep good while exposed for sale in her shop. I should myself have had no hesitation in finding that this was pure butter within the meaning of the warranty, but that is a question of fact for the judge & not us to decide. I think that he went wrong in refusing to take into consideration evidence that this expression “pure butter” had a meaning as used between plff. & defts. in trade apart from its natural meaning (BIGHAM, J.). — *ROOSE v. Defts. delivered rice in single cotton bags, which were thicker & closer made than the gunny bags, & the rice arrived in America in perfect condition, but plff. refused to accept it because it was not in double bags. It was proved that in New York rice in double bags was more saleable than rice in single bags, & that double bags were considered as essential for transit to the west:—Held: the mode of packing affected the quality & description of the thing sold, & therefore plff. was entitled to reject the rice.—*MAKIN v. If, indeed, the representation was false to the knowledge of the party making it, this would in general be conclusive evidence of fraud; but if the representation was honestly made, & believed at the time to be true by the party making it, though not true in point of fact, we think this does not amount to fraud in law, but that the rule of caveat emptor applies, & the representation itself does not furnish a ground of action (TINDAL, C.J.).—ORMROD v. SUB-SECT. 2.—FITNESS FOR PARTICULAR PURPOSE.

A. In General.

See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14 (1).

693. General rule—Condition of fitness implied.]—(1) If a person sells a commodity for a specific purpose & with knowledge at the time of sale that it was to be applied to that purpose he must be understood in point of law to warrant that the commodity so sold should be reasonably fit & proper for the service for which it was sold (ABBOTT, C.J.).

(2) Allowing that a person who sells a commodity for a specific purpose shall be taken, by law, to undertake that it was reasonably fit & proper for that purpose, yet plffs. have not, in this case, declared on that implied warranty; as the declaration states, in general terms, that defts. undertook that the copper in question should be good, substantial, & serviceable. Now we are all of opinion, that a warranty to that extent, & in those unqualified terms, could not be implied by law out of the circumstances attending the sale of an article like this, of which the defects were equally unknown to both parties at the time of the sale (ABBOTT, C.J.).—GRAY v. COX (1825), 4 B. & C. 108; 1 C. & P. 672; 6 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 200; 107 E. R. 999.

694. — —.]—On the sale of an article for a specific purpose there is a warranty by the vendor that it is reasonably fit for the purpose, & there is no exception as to latent undiscoverable defects.

The limitation as to latent defects introduced by Readhead v. Midland Ry. Co. (1867), L. R. 4 Q. B. 379, does not apply to the sale of a chattel. Pltf. ordered & bought of deft., a coach builder, a pole for pltf.'s carriage. The pole broke in use & the horses became frightened & were injured. In an action for the damage, the jury found that the pole was not reasonably fit for the carriage, but that deft. had been guilty of no negligence:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover the value of the pole, & also for damage to the horses, if the jury, on a second trial, should be of opinion that the injury to the horses was the natural consequence of the defect in the pole.—RANDALL v. NEWSON (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 102; 46 L. J. Q. B. 259; 36 L. T. 164; 25 W. R. 313, C. A.

695. — —.]—When there is a specific thing there is no implied contract that it shall be reasonably fit for the purpose for which it is hired or is to be used. That is the leading distinction between a contract to supply a thing which is to be made, & which is not specific, & a contract with regard to a specific thing. In the one case you take the thing as it is, in the other the person who is to supply it is bound to supply a thing reasonably fit for the purpose for which it is made (BRETT, L.J.).—ROBERTSON v. AMAZON TUG & LIGHTERAGE Co. (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 598; 51 L. J. Q. B. 68; 46 L. T. 146; 30 W. R. 308; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 496, C. A.

imply a warranty that the article sold shall be free from latent defects unknown to the seller, & without fraud on his part:—Held: therefore, upon a sale of garden seeds, there was no implied warranty that the seeds were fresh or otherwise good & fit for growing, & that they would grow, but merely that the packages contained such seeds as the labels indicated, & to a sale of this kind the maxim

b. — — Defect known to vendor—Liability of vendor for collateral damage.]—The rule caveat emptor only protects the vendor against damages resulting to him by decrease in the actual value of the articles sold, but where there is collateral damage to person or property of the purchaser occasioned by a defect in the article sold, which is known to the vendor, the rule caveat emptor will not protect him.—URCH v. 700. — Barge.]—Upon the sale of a barge by the builder, a warranty that it is reasonably fit for use is implied, notwithstanding the written agreement of sale is silent as to any warranty. But if the vendee in declaring upon such warranty assigns a breach in the barge not being reasonably fit for use, the breach is not supported by evidence that the barge was not fit for a special purpose for which the builder knew that it was designed. Qu.: whether, upon such a sale, a warranty is implied, that the barge is fit for the purpose for which it is known by the builder to be purchased.—SHEPHERD v. 701. — Printing machine.]—Pltf., who was the patentee of a two-colour printing machine, obtained from deft. an order for one of his machines upon the following terms, proposed by himself: "I undertake to make you a two-colour printing machine on my patent principle," etc., describing the particulars of it. Deft. had seen one of the machines upon pltf.'s premises, but not in action. The machine put up by pltf. on deft.'s premises was found to be of no use for the purpose for which it was designed. Upon the trial of an action for the price, the judge directed the jury that if the machine was a known ascertained article, & deft. had specifically ordered it, deft. must pay for it whether it answered his purpose or not; but if it was not a known ascertained article, & pltf. undertook to supply such a machine, he could not recover the price of it unless it was reasonably fit for the purpose for which it was designed; & he left it to the jury to say whether the machine in question was constructed according to the patent principle, & also whether it was reasonably fit for the purpose for which it had been ordered:—Held: the jury were rightly directed.—OLLIVANT v. BAYLEY (1843), 5 Q. B. 288; 114 E. R. 1257; sub nom. OLIPHANT v. BAYLEY, Dav. & Mer. 373; 13 L. J. Q. B. 34; 7 Jur. 1130.

702. — Furniture.]—Pltf. being about to furnish a house, deft. agreed to manufacture certain furniture for him; the furniture was sent in & paid for, & subsequently part of it was found defective, & the wood not well seasoned. In an action for breach of this contract, alleging that deft. agreed to make & deliver certain furniture that should be fit & proper to furnish pltf.'s house:—Held: the proper question for the jury was, whether or not the furniture was reasonably fit for the purpose for which it was ordered, reference being had to pltf.'s station; & if pltf. gave a price, which was a fair price, for well-seasoned goods, it would be a breach of contract on which deft. would be liable, if he did not send in well-seasoned goods, although the price had been paid, & a space of six weeks had elapsed before pltf. made any complaint on the subject.

If you order goods to be made by the manufacturer, there is an undertaking on the part of the manufacturer that they shall be reasonably fit for the purpose for which they are ordered. Pltf. gave a fair price, & gave deft. an order to execute according to that price. This has nothing to do with bargaining for specific goods, where the law says there is no warranty. If this order was to be executed by deft. as an upholsterer or manufacturer of furniture for the price of well-seasoned goods, if he did not send well seasoned goods, it was a breach of his contract. The law says that the goods ought to be reasonably fit for the purpose for which they are ordered according to the price paid for them, & as these were not articles ready manufactured, but to be made, we think the verdict ought to stand (PARKER, B.).—LEWIS v. BUCKLAND (1846), 1 New Pract. Cas. 585; 8 L. T. O. S. 191.

703. — Sheep wash.]—In an action by a farmer against a chemist for vinding a sheep wash which killed his sheep, the evidence being that it was used according to deft.'s directions, & that the sheep died from the absorption of arsenic contained in it, although it was also shown that the same mixture had been sold by deft. for many years, & used with impunity, the jury were directed that they might find for pltf. upon this evidence; & they having done so, their verdict was sustained.

In such a case the manufacturer warrants that the mixture is reasonably fit for use (WILES, J.).—BLACK v. ELLIOT (1859), 1 F. & F. 595; 33 L. T. O. S. 228.

705. — Hair wash.]—Pltfs., J. & his wife E., by their declaration alleged that deft., in the course of his business, professed to sell a chemical compound made of ingredients known only to him, & by him represented to be fit to be used for a hair wash, without causing injury to the person using it, & to have been carefully compounded by him; that pltf., J., thereupon bought of deft. a bottle of this hair wash to be used by pltf., E., as deft. then knew, & on the terms that it could be safely so used, & had been carefully compounded. Breach, that deft. had so negligently & unskilfully conducted himself in preparing & selling the hair wash, that by reason thereof it was unfit to be used for washing the hair, whereby pltf. E., who used it for that purpose, was injured:—Held: the declaration disclosed a good cause of action.—GEORGE v. SKIVINGTON (1869), L. R. 5 Exch. 1; 39 L. J. Ex. 8; 21 L. T. 495; 18 W. R. 118.

709. ———— Altered during construction.]—There are two well-known kinds of contract—first, a customer might ask a manufacturer to make a machine according to a given plan or according to a plan supplied by the customer; in that case the manufacturer would only have to make the machine according to the plan & in a workmanlike manner. Secondly, a customer might ask the manufacturer to make a machine for a particular purpose, not supplying any plan, but leaving it to him to make it for that purpose; in that case, unless the contrary was expressly stated in the contract, the manufacturer would have to make a machine fit for that purpose. There might be a third kind of contract, where both parties said that they would jointly endeavour to make a machine that would do its business, when he thought that there would be no warranty that it would affect its purpose. Here there was a contract by pltf. to make the machine, not according to a given plan, but for sawing stone or marble. There was, therefore, a guarantee that it would be fit for that purpose, & this notwithstanding that the manufacturer had never made a machine like it before. After the contract was made deft. ordered certain alterations, & it was argued that those alterations caused the breakdown. But when the manufacturer was to make a machine fit for a particular purpose, & it was left to his skill to make it, even though the customer ordered alterations, the manufacturer had a right to refuse to make those alterations, as he was responsible for the machine under the contract. If the customer were then to insist upon them, the contract would be altered, & the machine would be made according to a given plan. But if, on the alterations being suggested, the manufacturer adopted them, he could not at the same time say that the contract was altered; he had made the suggested alterations his own, & having agreed to make the machine for a fixed price, he could not charge for them, however expensive they were, unless there was an agreement to that effect (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—HALL v. years before Dec. 1881, supplied limestone to defts., who owned iron smelting works, from a certain quarry. This quarry was known to be a second-grade quarry in which were beds of limestone of varying quality. In Dec. 1881, defts. agreed to obtain from the quarry & from no other place, so long as plffs. should supply the same, all the limestone they should from time to time require for the smelting & other purposes of their works, & plffs. agreed to supply from the quarry all the limestone so required by defts.:—Held: plffs. were bound to supply limestone reasonably fit for use in defts.' works, which were known to be iron smelting works, & in determining what was reasonable fitness the fact that the limestone was to come from a particular quarry, which was known to be a second-grade quarry, & from which defts. had for some years before the date of the contract taken limestone, must be taken into consideration.—*STRONGITHARM v. 719. — Purchase for export to special market.—Whisky.—A co. of merchants ordered, & a co. of distillers agreed to furnish, a cargo of whisky to be coloured like rum for the African market. It was stipulated that the colouring matter should be harmless. The stipulation was disregarded. The whisky produced effects alarming & startling though not shown to be actually deleterious. It consequently proved unmarketable:—Held: the distillers were liable in damages.

720. — Hay.—J., a horse dealer in Canada, agreed by contract in writing to supply the Glasgow Tramway co. with 2,100 tons of hay. The hay was described in the contract as "Cut Canadian Timothy hay," subject to the qualification that "small quantities of clover mixed in hay not be objected to."

To carry out part of this contract J. contracted with S. & Co., hay dealers in Canada, for the supply of 900 tons of hay. Under this contract, which was in writing, the hay was to be delivered in Glasgow, & was described as "good sound Canadian hay," with the explanation, "good sound Canadian hay is understood to mean No. 1 export hay of fair average quality."

S. & Co. on the instructions of J., tendered delivery of the hay in Glasgow to the Glasgow Tramway co., who rejected the greater part of the hay as disconform to their contract with J. J. then, founding on this rejection, brought an action against S. & Co. for damages for breach of their contract with him:—Held: it was an implied condition of the contract between J. & S. & Co. that the hay to be supplied as "No. 1 export hay" should be of the standard required by the Glasgow market, & as the hay rejected did not answer to that description, it had rightly been rejected.—*JACOBS v. 721. — Sale of wine fit to be laid down.—S., def't.'s traveller, agreed, without sample, to sell to pl'tf. a pipe of superior port wine, fit to be laid down. The wine was afterwards bottled by def't., & when delivered to pl'tf. was described in the invoice as superior old port. The wine afterwards proved to be sour, owing to there being a deficiency of spirit at the time of bottling:—Held: def't. did absolutely contract to sell wine fit to be laid down, & was bound to supply wine suitable for that purpose; there was evidence for the jury that def't. had warranted the wine to be fit to be laid down; as words of commendation do not amount to a warranty, the general rule of law is that the maxim caveat emptor applies to the sale of specific goods whenever the buyer has an opportunity of inspecting the chattel sold.—OSBORN v. HART (1871), 23 L. T. 851; 19 W. R. 331.

722. — Supply of power for machine.—Defts., who were the lessees of a factory, demised to pl'tfs. a room therein & agreed to supply to them power of an engine for working a machine in the room demised at a yearly rent of £100. The engine was under the control & in the possession of defts. While the engine was working the machine, owing to a defect in the governor, it went too fast, with the result that part of the machine in pl'tfs.' room became heated & broke, & killed a workman employed by pl'tfs. Pl'tfs., having paid the widow compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sued defts. to recover the amount so paid. The jury found that defts. had not supplied power which was reasonably fit for the purpose of working the machine:—Held: apart from the demise of the room, there was a contract by defts. to supply to pl'tfs. power for working the machine; this was a contract of purchase & sale; there was therefore an obligation to supply power reasonably fit for the purpose; & pl'tfs. were entitled to recover.—*BENTLEY BROTHERS v. 723. — Supply of mineral waters.—Pl'tf. retailed mineral waters, the supplies of which she received from def't. who was a mineral water manufacturer. Pl'tf. was charged by def't. three shillings per dozen for the mineral waters, & one penny in respect of each bottle, the penny being refunded on the bottle being returned, but not otherwise:—Held: even if the bottles containing the mineral waters were not sold but only hired by def't. to pl'tf., they were nevertheless "supplied under a contract of sale" within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14, & therefore that there was an implied condition that they, as well as their contents, should be reasonably fit for the purpose for which they were required by pl'tf.; therefore where a bottle so supplied by def't. to pl'tf. was not reasonably fit, & in consequence thereof, it burst & injured pl'tf., she was entitled to recover damages from def't.—*GEDDLING v. 726. —.]—A woollen merchant ordered from a woollen manufacturer piece dyed indigo blue cloth by sample, & being also a tailor, made the cloth supplied into liveries. The cloth was unfit for this purpose & the liveries were consequently returned. The manufacturer did not know the merchant was also a tailor, nor the purpose for which the cloth was to be used. There was evidence that the cloth was fit for caps, boots, & carriage linings. In an action by the merchant to recover damages for breach of contract, the jury were directed to find a verdict for the manufacturer if the cloth was merchantable as supplied to a woollen merchant:—Held: the direction was right, since an implied warranty that an article is fit for a particular purpose only arises when the purpose for which the goods are supplied is known to the manufacturer; & in the absence of evidence that a particular use of an article is so usual as to affect the manufacturer with knowledge of the purpose for which it is required, there is no implied warranty that the article is fit for every ordinary purpose for which an article of the description is used.—JONES v. PADGETT (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 650; 59 L. J. Q. B. 261; 62 L. T. 934; 38 W. R. 782, D. C.

727. What constitutes making purpose known—Question of fact.]—(1) The particular purpose for which an article purchased is required may, under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14, be made known to the seller by the recognised description by which the article is purchased.

(2) The question whether, on a sale of goods the buyer made known to the seller the purpose for which the goods were required so as to show that he relied on the seller's skill of judgment is one of fact depending on the circumstances of the particular case. Pltf., a draper, went to the shop of deft., a retail chemist, & asked for a "hot water bottle." An article was shown to him as such. He inquired whether it would stand boiling water, & deft. told him that it was meant for hot water, but would not stand boiling water. He then purchased it. Some days afterwards the bottle, while in use by pltf.'s wife, burst, & she was in consequence scalded. Pltf. sued deft. as for breach of a warranty that the bottle was fit for use as a hot water bottle. The jury found at the trial that it was not, when sold, fit for that purpose, & that this was the cause of its bursting. The judge to whom power was given by consent to draw any inferences of fact, if necessary, on further consideration, found that pltf. had, when purchasing the bottle, made known to deft. the particular purpose for which it was required, so as to show that he relied on the skill & knowledge of deft.; & held that the case therefore came within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14 (1), & there was, consequently, an implied warranty that the bottle was fit for the purpose of holding hot water, of which there had been a breach. He therefore gave judgment for pltf.:—Held: the facts justified the conclusion arrived at by the judge.—PREIST v. LAST, [1903] 2 K. B. 148; 72 L. J. K. B. 657; 89 L. T. 33; 51 W. R. 678; 19 T. 728. — Antecedent negotiations—Sale of "material."]—In Apr. & July, 1843, B. purchased of A. a certain material called oropholithe, of which A. was the patentee. The portion purchased in Apr. was described in the invoice as "roofing," & was put on a building belonging to B. by A.'s workmen. That supplied in July was described as "material," & was put on by B.'s workmen. There had been a previous purchase in Oct. 1842, which had been described as "flooring," & was so applied, & as to which money was paid into ct. In an action upon a bill of exchange given by B. in payment of the above goods, B. pleaded that he accepted the bill in consideration of goods called Oropholithe, which A. had warranted "fit for the roofing of buildings," but which proved to be useless. At the trial B. proved that, in Sept. 1843, his agent had a conversation with A.'s agent about roofing certain premises he was building with the patent article; on which occasion the latter gave the former a prospectus, which described it as fit for external roofing. The judge ruled that there was no evidence to be left to the jury in support of the plea:—Held: the direction was right, inasmuch as there was no evidence to show that the contract for the goods subsequently supplied was made with reference to the treaty for roofing, which took place in Sept. 1842; or, at all events, nothing to show that the "material" sold in

It turned out unsound & unfit for human consumption:—Held: no warranty of soundness was implied by law between the farmers A. & C.—BURNBY v. BOLLETT (1847), 16 M. & W. 644; 17 L. J. 746. Sale of refuse by dyers.]—Pltfs., calico printers, used madder roots in their business for dyeing purposes, & the refuse, or "spent madder," as it was called, after it had gone through pltfs.' processes was thrown out into heaps. By the application of a patented chemical process, this "spent madder" was convertible into a commodity called "garancine" which contained a greater or less quantity of colouring matter, according to the state & quality of the "spent madder" itself, & was used as a dyeing material. Deft. who was a maker of "garancine" bargained by letter with pltf. for the purchase of a quantity of their "spent madder" which he did not inspect before delivery, & indeed it appeared that the precise quality of the "spent madder" could not be ascertained until it had been made into garancine & tested by trial in dyeing. Upon a portion of the "spent madder" being converted by deft. into "garancine" in the usual way, it was found that the garancine produced was of very inferior quality, & an unmarketable article, owing, as deft. alleged, to the inferior quality or bad condition of the "spent madder." Deft. thereupon repudiated the bargain. On an action to recover the price, the judge directed the jury that if the article supplied fairly & reasonably answered the description of "spent madder," there was no implied warranty of a particular quality, or of fitness for any particular use, & the jury found a verdict accordingly for pltfs.:—Held: the judge rightly directed the jury, & there was no implied warranty on the sale of the article in question by pltfs. to deft. It was immaterial that deft. bought it for a particular purpose, because the vendors did not, as deft. knew, make it for that purpose, but in the course of their own business, for their own purposes. They merely sold a refuse article of manufacture called "spent madder," & that was what deft. purchased, & what the jury found that he purchased; & the vendors entered into no special bargain of the kind contended for, & the principle of implied warranty does not apply to the sale of a refuse article which has done its duty.

Where the sale between the parties is the sale of a specific article no warranty attaches, & the maxim caveat emptor applies (MARTIN, B.).—TURNER v. MUCKLOW (1862), 6 L. T. 690; 8 Jur. N. S. 870; 10 W. R. 668.

747. Sale of tar by gas company.]—The contract was between a gas co. & a person who purchased tar from them. The co. did not profess to manufacture tar as the subject-matter of their trade, nor did they profess to sell it as a mercantile thing which was the subject of purchase & sale in the ordinary way in trade. They did not describe it in the contract simply as tar. They made gas, & as a result of the manufacture tar was produced. Defts. agreed to purchase all the tar, not used or sold at retail prices, produced at the Ipswich Gasworks, the tar that resulted from the manufacture of gas for five years. There is no obligation under that contract that the co. will manufacture gas in the same way for the five years; not that the tar will be fit for distillation, even though the gas co. knows of the purpose for which it is bought. . . . There is no guarantee that the tar will be of any quality, nor that it will be fit for distillation, or merchantable tar as being the subject of purchase & sale in the market, but only that it will be the tar produced in the gasworks (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—IPSWICH GASLIGHT CO. v. In an action for damages for breach of warranty by the sellers:—Held: (1) evidence of what took place between the parties prior to the making of the contract was admissible to raise the implication of the condition specified in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14, & therefore, by virtue of that sect. a warranty or condition by the sellers that the coals were reasonably fit for the purpose for which they were required must be implied; (2) a contract

762. ———.]—Pltf., being desirous of buying a motor car, applied to defts., motor car dealers, & told them that he wanted a comfortable car which was suitable for touring purposes. Defts. said they thought that a "Bugatti car," a type of car in which they specialised, would meet those requirements, & showed him a specimen. Pltf. then gave defts. an order for "an eight cylinder Bugatti car" on the terms that defts. should guarantee the car for twelve months against defects of manufacture, it being stipulated by defts. that that guarantee "expressly excludes any other guarantee or warranty, statutory or otherwise." An eight cylinder Bugatti car was delivered to pltf. in pursuance of the order, but proved to be uncomfortable & unsuited for touring purposes. Pltf. claimed to reject the car, & sued to recover back the purchase-money which he had paid:—Held: (1) the requirement that the car should be comfortable & suitable for touring purposes was a condition & not a warranty, & on the principle of Wallis, Son & Wells v. Pratt & Haynes, No. 996, post, the implication of that condition was not excluded by the terms of the contract; (2) the mere fact that an article is sold under its trade name, in the sense that the trade name forms part of the description of the thing sold, does not necessarily bring the case within the proviso to Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14 (1), so as to exclude the implication of the condition of fitness. If the buyer, while asking to be supplied with an article of a named make, indicates to the seller that he relies on his skill & judgment for its being fit for a particular named purpose, he does not buy it "under its trade name" within the meaning of the proviso; & the ct., being satisfied upon the facts that pltf. relied on defts.' skill & judgment, held that the proviso did not apply.—*BALDRY v. Goods were delivered & accepted according to sample & of the agreed weight; but it was afterwards discovered that the weight was made up by introducing into the fabric 15 per cent. of china clay, which rendered the goods unmerchantable. The presence of the china clay could not be discovered by an ordinary examination of the sample. In an action against defts. for breach of an implied warranty of merchantable quality:—Held: (1) in the absence of a sample, a warranty of a merchantable quality would have been implied; (2) the selling by sample excluded that implied warranty only with respect to such matters as could be judged of by the sample, & the action was therefore maintainable.—MODY v. 773. —.]—Deft., a brewer, let to pltf. a public-house, on the terms, among others, that pltf. should purchase of deft. all the malt liquor consumed on the premises: provided that, in case of any breach of that agreement, pltf. should forfeit, as liquidated damages, the sum of £50, secured by the promissory note of pltf. Deft. indorsed over the note for value; & pltf., having been compelled to pay it, entered a plaint in the county ct. against deft., & stated in the summons & particulars that "the cause of action was money paid for the use of deft. to the indorsees of the note, for which he never received from deft. any value or consideration." At the trial before a jury it appeared that, on pltf.'s taking possession of the premises in Oct. 1849, he commenced ordering beer from deft., & continued to do so until Feb. 1850. Pltf. proposed to prove that the beer supplied by deft. subsequently to Christmas, 1849, was unmarketable. This evidence was objected to, but received by the judge. Deft. submitted that there was no case for the jury, & that pltf. must be nonsuited. Pltf. refused to be nonsuited: & the judge left it to the jury to say whether the liquor supplied by deft. was of a marketable quality; & they found a verdict for pltf.:—Held: under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, ss. 14, 15, the Ct. of Appeal is not confined to the precise questions submitted to them, but may decide upon the whole case as stated; & therefore, looking at the summing up in this case, it was erroneous; for the circumstances of deft. having on one or two occasions supplied pltf. with bad beer, did not authorise him to avoid the contract, but he should have returned the beer, & if better were not sent instead of it, he might, on the particular occasion, procure some elsewhere; & if deft. continued to send bad beer, he might sue him on the implied contract that he would supply beer reasonably

In Mar. 1874, plffs. demised the Sutton Arms public-house to C. & H., & the lessees covenanted with plffs. to purchase from them all the beer which should be consumed upon the Sutton Arms, & also upon the Milton Arms, during the residue of the respective terms, plff. covenanting with C. & H. to supply all beer required for the Sutton Arms & Milton Arms, such beer to be of a certain quality & of a certain price. In May, 1874, C. assigned the Milton Arms to deft. with notice of the covenant. In June, 1874, deft. mortgaged the Milton Arms to plffs. to secure a loan, & in consideration thereof covenanted to purchase of plffs. all beer which should be brought by him upon the Milton Arms:—Held: deft., as an assign with notice, was bound in equity by the covenant in the lease, but that such covenant was conditional on the fulfilment of plff.'s covenant, & the covenant in the mtge. was conditional on the fulfilment of an implied covenant to supply good beer, & therefore, evidence to show a breach of the actual or implied covenants on plff.'s part was admissible.—LUKER v. Plff. knew of the objection by hop merchants to sulphured hops, & deft. would not have bought the hops if he had been aware that sulphur had, in fact, been used:—Held: the contract was conditional on sulphur not having been used in the growth of the hops; & if sulphur had been so used, deft. was at liberty to reject the hops, although they corresponded with the sample by which they

Every facility was offered defts. for inspection; but, being pressed for time, they did not have any of the barrels opened, & merely looked at the outside of the barrels. The horns were delivered in several instalments. The buyer, after accepting the first instalment, rejected the later instalments on the ground that the goods were not of merchantable quality. In an action for the price of the goods the official referee found that a large proportion of the horns were dented & badly polished owing to defective packing & careless workmanship, but that they could easily have been made merchantable at a trifling cost, & he declined to hold that the consignment as a whole was unmerchantable & gave judgment for the seller with an allowance to the buyer in respect of the defective goods :—Held : (1) upon the construction of the contract, the acceptance of the first instalment did not preclude the buyer from rejecting the later instalments; (2) the buyer was justified in rejecting the later instalments as unmerchantable.—JACKSON v. ROTAX MOTOR & CYCLE CO., [1910] 2 K. B. 937; 80 L. J. K. B. 38; 103 L. T. 411, C. A.

In an action for damages for breach of a condition alleged to be implied by Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14, as to the fitness of the goods for importation into Argentina, & as to their being of merchantable quality :—Held : (1) as pltf. had not shown that they relied on defts.' skill or judgment on the question whether the goods could be legally sold in Argentina, there was no implied condition as to fitness for the particular purpose of importation; (2) the words merchantable quality in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14, had no reference to the state of the law of the country to which the goods were sent, & therefore the action failed.—*SUMNER, PERMAIN & CO. v. THOMPSON (1846), 7 L. T. O. S. 66.

795. Express condition in contract—Bulk to be equal to sample & analysis.]—In June A. employed a broker to buy for him from B. some guano, then lying in C.'s warehouse. In contemplation of the purchase, a sample was taken & an analysis made of the guano, but no contract was then entered into. In Nov. following, A.'s broker, on behalf of A., entered into a written contract with B. for the purchase at a certain price, of some guano, then about to arrive by the ship S. By the terms of the contract the guano was to be equal to sample & analysis of the guano in C.'s warehouse:—Held: the written contract of Nov. had reference to the sample & analysis of June, & not to a sample & analysis to be made of the guano in C.'s warehouse in the state in which it was in Nov.—CLARK v. SCHWARTZ (1853), 22 L. T. O. S. 88; 2 W. R. 16.

Guaranteed analysis.]—

On Jan. 13 defts. wrote to pltf. inquiring the terms on which he would supply them with Peruvian guano, & adding "a sample, with guaranteed analysis, to accompany your offer." On Jan. 23 pltf. replied by letter as follows: "I shall be glad to do the best I can for you; I may say that my guano contains 18 per cent. of ammonia; this is the highest analysis this year." On Feb. 1 pltf. forwarded three samples of guano to defts., with a letter, offering them to defts. at certain prices, viz., "No. 1 at £14 2s. 6d.; No. 2 at £13 10s.; & No. 3 at £12 5s. per ton"; & in the same letter he inclosed a copy of a printed analysis, headed, "Analysis of Government Peruvian Guano, ex Mindano, now landing at Whitehaven," & said he could "send three more in a day or two." This analysis pltf. described as "the mean of three eminent chemists, who were furnished with an average sample of the bulk of the cargo." It set out the specific proportion per 100 of the various constituent parts, & at its foot was the following note: "containing nitrogen, 14.31—equal to ammonia, 17.37," & it was signed by pltf. On Feb. 4 defts. wrote informing pltf. that they agreed to accept his tender, "according to the conditions named" in his letter; & on Mar. 8 they wrote an order to pltf. for a quantity of "the best Peruvian guano, No. 1, price £14 2s. 6d., delivered, conditions & analysis as per yours of Feb. 1." The guano was delivered according to order; & after the bulk had been broken, defts. had a sample of it analysed by their own analytical chemist, when it was found to contain much less ammonia than mentioned in the analysis sent by pltf., whereupon defts. claimed a deduction from the price, which pltf. refused to allow:—Held: the correspondence contained not merely a guarantee that the bulk was equal to the sample, but also a guarantee that the analysis, at the time it was made, fairly represented & was a fair analysis of the bulk of the cargo out of which the goods were supplied.—TOWERSON v. ASPATRIA AGRICULTURAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. (1872), 27 L. T. 276, Ex. Ch.

797. Mistake in sample.]—Declaration for non-delivery of 100 chests of tea ex the ship S, sold by deft. to pltf. at a fixed price, with the usual averments that pltf. was always ready & willing, etc., & that all conditions precedent were fulfilled. Equitable plea, that the tea was bought & sold upon a sample which defts. believed to be a sample of the said tea ex the said ship, & that by the said contract defts. agreed that the tea in the said 100 chests should be equal to the said sample; that the said sample was not a sample at all of the said 100 chests, but was a sample of a totally different tea; & that defts. afterwards discovered that there had been a mistake respecting the said sample, & forthwith, & before pltf. had in any respect altered his position on account of the said contract having been made, gave notice of such mistake to pltf., & that defts. would, on account of the said mistake, treat the contract as void; & the contract was entered into solely through the mistaken belief of both parties that the said sample was a sample of 100 chests, & would not have been entered into but for the said mistake:—Held: the plea was bad, because it failed to show that a

799. Sample taken from damaged goods—Bill of lading disclosing damage—Brokers' duty to disclose.—Brokers acting for owners, the shippers of cocoa lying in warehouse at Liverpool, acted also as brokers to the purchaser of a number of bags of this cocoa. The brokers had been informed by the shippers that there was a note on the bill of lading: bags in bad condition, stained & damp cocoa mouldy. The brokers employed a firm of experts to examine the cocoa, & they reported that some of the mouldy cocoa being removed, the rest would be a merchantable article. Upon this the brokers sent a sample of the cocoa to the purchasers, & the contract was concluded:—Held: the sale was one by sample, & the brokers acting honestly were only under a duty of communicating such facts as reasonable men would think material in the ordinary course of business, & in the circumstances, were not under an obligation to inform the purchasers of the note on the bill of lading.—PAYNE v. LEWIS & PEAT (1917), 61 Sol. Jo. 507.

800. When warranty implied.—To an action by the indorsee against the drawer of a bill of exchange, deft. pleaded that the bill was given in payment of the price of 17 pockets of hops sold by pltf. to deft., as hops of a certain grower, & answering certain samples, to be delivered by pltf. to deft. within a reasonable time; that, although a reasonable time had elapsed, pltf. had not delivered to deft. any hops answering the samples, or any hops whatsoever; & that there was no consideration for the bill except as aforesaid. Replication, de injuria. It appeared that pltf. had delivered to deft. 17 pockets of hops, but inferior to the samples:—Held: the general allegation in the plea that pltf. had not delivered any hops whatever, was immaterial, & might be rejected; & without it, the plea showed a total failure of consideration, & was an answer to the action; if pltf. relied on deft.'s acceptance of the inferior hops, he ought to have replied it.—*WELLS v. 803.—Sale "per sample."—Declaration stated that deft. bargained for & bought of pltf's. a quantity of E. I. rice, according to the conditions of sale of the E. I. co., to be put up at the next E. I. co.'s sale by the proprietors, if required, at a certain price there mentioned. The proof was, that, besides these conditions, the rice was sold per sample. This is no variance; the words "per sample" not being a description of the commodity sold, but a collateral engagement that it shall be of a particular quality. The rice did not correspond with the sample; but deft., after seeing fresh samples inferior in quality to the original purchase sample, put it up at the E. I. co.'s sale, at a limited price; & no bidding taking place to that extent, he bought it in:—Held: he could not afterwards repudiate the contract.—*PARKER v. 805.—Goods "accepted on report & samples."—A contract for the sale in London of a cargo of Taganrog wheat then lying afloat at Queenstown, in Ireland, contained the following provisions: "In case of any dispute, this contract not to be void; it being agreed by buyers & sellers to leave the same to two London corn factors mutually chosen, or their umpire, & to be bound by their decision. The above cargo is accepted on the report & samples of Messrs. Scott & co. of Queenstown":—Held: this latter stipulation amounted to a warranty that the bulk was equal to the report & samples; & was not merely a representation that the report was the genuine report of Scott & co., & the samples taken by them.—RUSSELL v. NICOLOPULO (1860), 8 C. B. N. S. 362; 2 L. T. 185; 8 W. R. 415; 141 E. R. 1206.

unknown to the seller, & without fraud on his part, but arising from the fraud of the grower from whom he purchased, such seller is not answerable, though the goods turned out to be unmerchantable.—PARKINSON v. LEE (1802), 2 East, 314; 102 E. R. 389.

The same defect existed in the samples, but was latent & was not discoverable by due diligence upon such inspection as was ordinary & usual upon sales of cloths of that class:—Held: upon such a contract there was an implied warranty that the goods should be fit for use in the manner in which goods of the same quality & general character ordinarily would be used.—DRUMMOND v. 828. ————. Construction of contract.]—Pltf. entered into a contract with defts. for the supply of 30,000 pair of army shoes, as per sample, to be delivered free at a wharf in weekly quantities, to be inspected & quality approved of before shipment, & payment to be made in cash at the time of each delivery. A sample shoe was deposited which was approved of by pltf. & also by the French Govt., for whom the shoes were ordered. The first batch of shoes were inspected & passed, & ordered to be sent for shipment to a wharf named by pltf. as the place of delivery, from whence they were forwarded to Lille. In the meantime, it was discovered that some of the shoes contained paper fillings in the soles, & upon opening the sample shoe, it was found that that sole contained paper. Pltf. accordingly stopped the delivery of the shoes. Defts. stated that the paper in the soles must be a mistake, & subsequently wrote a letter, agreeing to take back those shoes which might be thrown on pltf.'s hands in consequence of paper being found in them; upon this understanding, the delivery of the shoes was continued. Upon the shoes being tendered to the French Govt., some were opened & found to contain paper; upon which discovery the whole number were rejected by the French authorities. In an action to recover the money paid for the shoes, the jury found that no reasonable inspection would have discovered the defects in the shoes:—Held: although by the original contract pltf. must be taken to have accepted the shoes, yet that, upon the construction of the contract, coupled with the agreement to take back any shoes that might be thrown on pltf.'s hands in consequence of paper being found in them, pltf. was entitled to throw back all the shoes forwarded to Lille upon deft.'s hands, notwithstanding his acceptance of them at the wharf, & to recover the price paid, & also the loss of profit arising from the shoes not being according to sample.

Under the original contract pltf. could have returned the shoes at Lille; in contracts of sale by sample there must be an opportunity for the inspection of the goods, & if the goods are of such a character that the inspection cannot take place until the time for the delivery & payment for the goods has elapsed, the purchaser is at liberty after such inspection, if the goods be not equal to sample, to return them to the vendor.—*HEILBUTT v. On the same day deft. resold the barley to a brewer. Afterwards pltf. discovered that his servants had by mistake mixed some inferior barley with the barley sold to deft., & gave deft. notice of the mistake, offering to make good any deficiency of quality. He duly delivered the barley at T. Station, & while it was there the station master, at deft.'s request, took a bulk sample of the barley & sent it to deft. Deft. having received the bulk sample, directed the station master to send on the barley to the brewer who had purchased it; but he rejected it as not being according to the sample. Deft. then himself claimed to be entitled to reject the barley:—Held: there was nothing in the contract or the circumstances to rebut the presumption that the place of delivery was to be the place of inspection; & as deft. had inspected a sample at such place of delivery, & ordered the barley to be sent on to the sub-purchaser, he must be considered to have accepted the barley, & could not afterwards reject it.—*PERKINS v. The vessel arrived at Hull, the port of discharge, on Mar. 18, 1922, & reported on Mar. 20. On Mar. 21 the buyers, without having examined the wheat, resold a substantial portion of it to sub-purchasers & forwarded it to them. On Mar. 23 the buyers, having examined samples of the wheat, rejected it on the ground, as the fact was, that it was not Rosario or Santa Fe wheat. The matter was referred to arbn., & the arbitrators held that the notice of rejection was given with reasonable promptitude, & that the buyers were entitled to reject the wheat:—Held: the buyers, by reselling a part of the wheat without examination & sending it to their sub-purchaser, had done an act which was "inconsistent with the ownership of the sellers"; they must therefore be deemed to have accepted it within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 35, & had lost their right of rejection.—*HARDY (E.) & CO. The purchasers refused to pay for any deliveries on production of the shipping documents, demanding an opportunity of first inspecting the bulk in order to compare with the sample:—Held: the goods were arrived goods, & the sellers were in a position to tender the shipping documents to the buyers. Under the contract there was no right to inspect before payment. The contract contained an express condition, i.e. to pay on arrival against shipping documents. h. Duty of purchaser to return goods on rejection.—A merchant, who had ordered certain goods according to sample, on their being delivered, intimated to the seller that he rejected them as disconform to sample, but at the same time refused to return them contract in writing for the sale of barley at an agreed price per bushel provided that the barley at the time of shipment under the contract was to be about as per sample, & contained an arbn. clause. The buyers having rejected the barley for inferiority to the sample, the sellers relied before the arbitrator upon a custom of the London Corn Exchange, applicable to such contracts, by which the buyer was not entitled to reject for difference or variation in quality, unless the same was excessive or unreasonable, & was so found by arbn. under the contract. The arbitrator found that the barley was not about as per sample, so as to entitle the sellers to insist upon payment of the full contract price without any allowance; but that the inferiority was not excessive or unreasonable, nor so great as to amount to a difference of description, & he awarded that the buyers were not entitled to reject the barley, but must accept it with an allowance in price in respect of the inferiority:—Held: the custom was good in law, not being unreasonable or uncertain or in contradiction of the written contract, & the award must therefore be upheld.—Re WALKERS, WINNER & HAMM & SHAW, SON & Co., [1904] 2 K. This fluid, which was a secret preparation & had a property, unknown to pltfs. & to first defts., of giving off hydrogen if it was in contact with cast iron, was used & gave off hydrogen which made an explosive mixture in contact with the air. A workman then went to the spot with a lighted candle, & an explosion occurred, doing damage to the ship. First defts. repaired the damage, & pltfs. claimed a declaration that they were not liable to pay for the repair, & damages for loss of use of the ship during the repair; & alternatively pltfs. claimed damages against second defts.:—Held: on the facts first defts. were not liable, but as the "pluperfect liquid" was dangerous in itself & the instructions issued with it failed to give any adequate warning, pltfs. were entitled to recover as against second defts.—*ANGLO-CELTIC SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. in the warranty, used the gun which but for the warranty he would not have done; & that the gun, being in the hands of pltf., by reason & wholly in consequence of its weak, dangerous, & insufficient construction & materials, burst & exploded, whereby pltf. was greatly wounded, etc., & wholly by means of the premises, breach of duty, & improper conduct of deft., lost the use of his hand:—Held: the action was maintainable.—*LEVY v. 854. — Third party.—A tradesman, who contracts with an individual for the sale to him of an article to be used for a particular purpose by a third person, is not, in the absence of fraud, liable for injury caused to such person by some defect in the construction of the article.

A declaration by husband & wife stated, that deft. was the maker & seller of certain lamps, called "The Holiday Lamp," & thereupon the husband bought of him one of those lamps to be used by his wife & himself in his shop, & that deft. then fraudulently warranted that the lamp was reasonably fit & proper for that purpose, whereas the lamp was dangerous & unsafe, by reason whereof, when the wife attempted to use the lamp, it exploded & injured her. At the trial, it appeared that the accident arose from the defective construction of the lamp, but there was no proof that deft. knew of the defect; & the jury found that he was not guilty of any fraudulent or deceitful representation:—Held: the action could not be maintained by the wife, there being no misfeasance towards her independently of the contract, which was with the husband alone.—*LONGMEID v. 869. — Disclosure by seller to broker — Usage of Liverpool—Buyer bound.]—Defts., London merchants, employed a broker at Liverpool to purchase some wool. The broker negotiated a sale by pltf. to defts. of certain bales deliverable at Odessa, "the names of the vessels to be declared as soon as the wools were shipped." In this transaction the broker acted for both pltf. & defts. By the custom of Liverpool, where a contract contained a stipulation that notice of an event should be given by the vendor to the vendee, it was usual for the vendor to give the notice to the broker who communicated it to the vendee:—Held: defts. were bound by such usage, & therefore a notice by pltf. to the broker, of the names of the vessels on which the wools were shipped was a performance of that stipulation, although the broker omitted to communicate them to defts.—*GRAVES v. The contract also provided: "(a) Should the vessel or vessels which may apply to this contract be lost before declaration this contract to be cancelled so far as regards such lost vessel or vessels on the production of the bill or bills of lading or other satisfactory proof of shipment by sellers so soon as fairly practicable after the loss is ascertained. (b) Should the vessel or vessels & the goods or any portion thereof be lost, the contract to be cancelled for the whole or any such portion, but should the vessel or vessels be lost & the goods or any portion thereof be transhipped to some other vessel or vessels & arrive on account of the original importer, this contract to stand good for the whole or such portion." On Mar. 27, 1918, defts. declared in fulfilment of the contract goods shipped on a named steamer which sailed from Singapore on Jan. 21, 1918, but was lost at sea by enemy action about Feb. 26, 1918. At the time of the declaration both pltf. & defts. knew that the ship & cargo had been lost. In an action for damages for failure to deliver pltf. contended that the declaration, having been made after defts. knew of the loss of the vessel, was invalid:—Held: the declaration was made with due despatch, & was good although made with knowledge of the loss, & the contract was consequently cancelled.—*CLARK v. Averment, that defts. duly delivered divers portions of the goods according to agreement, & that pltf. was not required by defts. to accept delivery of the residue. Breach, non-delivery of the residue. Plea, that defts. were ready & willing to deliver the residue according to the agreement, whereof pltf. had notice, & that pltf. was not ready & willing to accept, & would not accept, & did not require delivery of the same:—Held: before defts. were bound to deliver the goods, pltf. was bound to name the ship or the place where he desired the goods to be delivered, & a tender of the goods by defts. was not a condition precedent to their delivery, or to the ship or place being named by pltf.—*SUTHERLAND v. In the unexpected event of the John Phillips getting ashore, or being unable to prosecute her voyage, from any casualties of the sea, then the seller agrees to deliver, & the buyer agrees to take, in lieu thereof, another cargo or cargoes of about equal quantity, to be named at the earliest practicable period prior to arrival off the coast. The only ground on which the seller is to be excused delivery of the above nitrate of soda, is the loss of the vessel, or that which may be substituted for it, on her homeward voyage; in which case this contract is to be considered void, but in no other event whatever":—Held: (1) this was an absolute contract for the sale of 500 tons more or less, & not of a quantity limited by

The contract provided that, in case of prohibition of export, blockade, or hostilities preventing shipment, the contract or any unfulfilled part thereof should be cancelled. In Dec. 1899, the Orlando was stranded through perils of the sea without default on defts.' part, & was so much damaged as to render it impossible for her to arrive at the port of loading in time to load during Jan. In an action by pltf. against defts. for failure to ship a cargo under the contract:—Held: the contract must be construed as subject to an implied condition that, if at the time for its performance the Orlando should, without default on defts.' part, have ceased to exist as a ship fit for the purpose of shipping the cargo, then the contract should be treated as at an end; & the action was therefore not maintainable.—*NICKOLL & KNIGHT v. 882. Prevention of shipment by force majeure—Hostilities.—On Dec. 5, 1914 a coaling contract was entered into between pltf., the owners of a line of steamships, & defts., a coaling co., by which it was agreed that pltf. should take all the bunker coal they wanted at (inter alia) Algiers from defts., & that defts. should supply all the coal normally needed by pltf. at that port. The form of contract utilised was one in use before the outbreak of the war, & contained a clause allowing defts. to cancel the contract if either Great Britain or France became engaged in war with any other power. A slip, however, was pasted on the contract, which provided that, "notwithstanding the war clause in the contract, depôts will supply during the present hostilities . . . & should circumstances arise to further interfere in any manner with the supply, shipment, carriage, or delivery of the coals, this contract is subject to cancelment by suppliers." In Feb. 1915, defts. refused to supply one of pltf.' ships with coal at Algiers, & pltf. were thereby put to expense in obtaining coal elsewhere. In an action by pltf. for breach of contract defts. contended that they were protected from liability by the exception clause in the contract & added slip. It appeared that between Dec. 1914, & Feb. 1915, there was a great rise in freights between Cardiff & Algiers. The judge held that the word "supply" in the slip meant supply to defts. at Cardiff, & not to pltf. at Algiers, & was satisfied that if defts. were bound by their contract they would have had difficulty in chartering a vessel between these places at more than double the freights prevalent when the contract was made:—Held: since, to fulfil their contract, defts. would not only have been put to extra expense, but would have had difficulty in obtaining ships, there was "interference" within the meaning of the slip, & therefore, defts. were excused from liability.—*SCHIEPVAART MAATSCHAPPIJ GYLSSEN v. 884. — Usage of dried fruit trade.—The ct. found that since the outbreak of war in 1914 it had been a universal custom in the dried fruit trade to insert in all contracts for the sale of sultanias a clause as follows, "Should shipment be prevented by force majeure such as prohibition of export, blockade, war, or any consequence of warlike operations, this contract or the then unfulfilled part thereof to be cancelled without claim." The ct., therefore, rectified certain bought & sold notes by the addition of this clause on the ground that the parties must be taken to have contracted on this basis.—CARAMAN ROWLEY & MAY v. APERGHIS (1923), 40 T. L. R. 124.

885. Dating of bill of lading—On provisional invoice—Error unaffected by letters "E. & O. E."—By a contract dated Jan. 23, 1925, the sellers sold to the buyer about 50 tons of Japanese green peas. The conditions of the contract included:—"Provisional invoice based on bill of lading weight with ship's name & date of bill or bills of lading shall be sent by shipper's house . . . within three days after arrival of documents in Europe & by other sellers to their buyers respectively in due course after receipt." "Shipment as per bill or bills of lading dated or to be dated Feb. & or Mar. 1925." "Bill of lading to be dated when goods actually on board."

The provisional invoice described the bill of lading as dated Feb. 1, 1925, but the date of the bill of lading was Feb 2, 1925. On the provisional invoice appeared the letters "E. & O. E." which were understood to mean "errors & omissions excepted." The buyer refused to accept the peas on the ground that the error was material, & that the provision that the date of the bill of lading must be given in the provisional invoice was a condition precedent. Arbitrators decided in favour of the buyer, & found that a wrong statement in a provisional invoice as to the date of a bill of lading under a contract in this form affected the substance of the contract:—Held: the provision as to the date of the bill of lading being stated in the provisional invoice was not a warranty only, but a condition, that the letters "E. & O. Pltfs. took up the documents & paid the price before the barley arrived, & when it arrived they claimed to reject it on the ground of bad quality. The claim was referred to arbns., & an award was made that pltfs. were entitled to reject & that the sellers must refund the price. The sellers then refused to carry out the award, on the ground that it must be mutual, & that a term must be implied in it that on receiving back the price pltfs. must return the barley to defts. in the condition in which they received it, which they were unable to do because on receipt of the barley they had turned it out of the bags in which it had been delivered to them & had bulked it in a warehouse & had afterwards put it in different bags & had disposed of the original bags. In an action by pltfs. on the award:—Held: (1) pltfs. were entitled to have the award enforced as it stood without any implied term being read into it; (2) whether that was so or not, the contract was one for the sale of barley, not for the sale of barley in particular bags, & as pltfs. were prepared to return the actual barley received by them defts. must accept its rejection.—DOWER (E. 887. Approval of goods by inspector—To be notified within reasonable time—Whether such condition implied.]—In an action on a contract by defts. to deliver goods at the wharf of third parties, in equal portions, in four months, to be made to the satisfaction of the inspector of such parties, & if not so made, to be removed by defts., & others substituted in the time named, to wit, four months; averments of performance on pltfs.' part, & breach that the goods were delivered & not made to the satisfaction of the inspector, whereby they were rejected, & pltfs. lost the benefit of a contract with the third parties mentioned: pleas, denying the contract as stated; denying the breach; & alleging that the contract was subject to a condition that the disapproval of each portion should be notified in a reasonable time after its delivery. The contract, as stated, being proved, in fact, & it not appearing that there was any such condition in fact:—Held: there was no such condition implied in law from the contract as stated or proved; nor that the disapproval should be notified within the time named, or the four months; & the jury not having found that the disapproval was in an unreasonable time, the ct. discharged a rule to enter the verdict for defts.—COULSON v. ATTWOOD (1857), 26 L. J. Ex. 244.

888. Sale by manufacturer as such—Goods must be of manufacturer's make.]—On the sale of goods by a manufacturer of such goods, who is not otherwise a dealer in them, there is, in the absence of any usage in the particular trade or as regards the particular goods to supply goods of other makers, an implied contract that the goods shall be those of the manufacturer's own make.

Pltfs., who were manufacturers but not dealers in iron, by a written contract, on the margin of which was their trade mark, a crown with their initials, contracted to sell to defts., who thereby contracted to buy of pltfs., 2,000 tons of ship plates of the quality known as "Crown," to pass Lloyd's survey to be delivered monthly, at defts.' shipyard. The contract contained a strike clause by which the supply of the iron contracted for might be suspended during the continuance of any strike of workmen; but it had no express stipulation that the plates should be of pltfs.' manufacture. Before the contract was completed pltfs. closed their works, & proposed to complete the contract by delivery of ship plates of the quality mentioned in the contract made by another firm. Defts. having refused to accept these, pltfs. sued them for breach of contract. At the trial defts. tendered evidence to show that in the iron trade there is a custom that, under a contract between a manufacturer of iron plates & a customer for the supply of them, the seller must, in the absence of stipulation to the contrary, supply plates of his own make, & that the purchaser is entitled to reject other plates if tendered, though of the quality contracted for. The judge at the trial rejected this evidence, & gave judgment for pltfs.:—Held: (1) such evidence was improperly rejected; (2) without such evidence defts. were entitled to succeed, as the contract implied that the plates to be supplied should be of the manufacture of pltfs., & therefore pltfs. could not require defts. to accept plates not of their own manufacture, even though of the quality contracted for, & as good as those

The Rag Flock Regulations, 1912, made under that Act in relation to flock manufactured from rags provide by art. 1 that flock shall be deemed to conform to the standard of cleanliness for the purposes of the above sub-sect. when the amount of soluble chlorine in the form of chlorides removed by thorough washing with distilled water at a temperature not exceeding 25 degrees Centigrade from not less than 40 grammes of a well mixed sample of flock does not exceed 30 parts of chlorine in 100,000 parts of the flock:—Held: the word "rags" in the above provisions is not limited to rags which have become polluted through association with human or animal life, but it includes flock made from new & uncontaminated material.—*BALMFORTH v. 893. Dissolution of contract on frustration of adventure.]—By eight contracts in similar form, made in June & July, 1914, a firm of merchants in New York sold to a co. which carried on business at Antwerp a quantity of wheat to be shipped during Aug. & not later than the middle of Sept. 1914, from an Atlantic &/or Canadian port at sellers' option, under one contract to Rotterdam & under the rest to Antwerp, at a price free on board including freight & insurance, to be paid net cash on presentation of bills of lading &/or delivery order. The contracts provided that the sellers were to furnish marine policies of insurance for 2 per cent. over invoice amount; & they contained the following clauses: "In the event of war, should sellers not have received from buyers approved English &/or American policies . . . for approximate invoice amount covering war risk three days prior to shipment, sellers shall have the right, if they think fit, & are able, to cover war risk for account & risk of buyers." "In case of prohibition of export, force majeure, blockade, or hostilities preventing shipment, this contract or any unfulfilled part thereof shall be at an end."

At the beginning of Aug. the sellers cabled to the buyers that they could not effect insurance against war risks & that they were therefore unable to sell the drafts, & asking the buyers to arrange for payment in New York. The buyers refused, & the sellers on Aug. 6 cancelled the contracts. The buyers claimed damages for breach of contract. The dispute was referred to arbn. in London under a clause in the contracts. The wheat was in fact shipped, but for other buyers & for other ports. The sellers claimed that they were entitled to treat the contracts as cancelled as they were unable to sell in America exchange on Rotterdam or Antwerp. The arbitrators found that the business of exporting grain from America to Europe was based upon the sale of exchange in America & it had long been a well-recognised usage or custom for shippers of grain from America to sell or negotiate the exchange to or with an exchange buyer in America, & the sale of wheat could not be carried out unless such exchange were possible, & it was an implied term &/or condition of the contracts that the sellers should at all material times be able to sell or negotiate the exchange; that the buyers were aware of this usage or custom at the time when the contracts were made; that from Aug. 1 to 6 inclusive when the sellers claimed to cancel the contracts they were unable to sell exchange on Antwerp or Rotterdam, & this inability continued throughout the whole period for shipment provided by the contracts; that from Aug. 1 to 6 inclusive no war insurance could have been effected by the sellers on the shipments; that the commercial purpose of the adventure so far as the sellers were concerned became frustrated by the impossibility in the circumstances prevailing of their being able to sell or negotiate exchange in America; that this impossibility & the circumstances prevailing were caused by hostilities; & that shipment was prevented by hostilities within the meaning of the prohibition clause in the contracts. They accordingly made an award in favour of the sellers:—Held: (1) the shipment was not "prevented" by hostilities within the meaning of the prohibition clause in the contracts, "prevention" there meaning a physical or legal prevention; (2) the question whether a term should be implied in the contracts providing for their dissolution on the ground of the frustration of the commercial adventure was a question of law for the ct.; & as the buyers were not concerned with the general method by which the sellers financed their exports of wheat to Europe, & considering that the contracts contained a provision as to insurance of war risks in the event of war, a term or condition could not be implied in the contracts that if the sellers were unable to sell the exchange the contracts should be determined.—Re COMPTOIR COMMERCIAL ANVERSOIS & POWER, SON & Co., [1920] 1 K. 909. ——— Special conditions not brought to buyer’s notice—Bicycle.—Pltf. wrote to defts., inquiring the price of a certain type of bicycle sold by them, & thereupon was sent defts.’ catalogue. Subsequently pltf. went to defts.’ depot & selected a bicycle. The catalogue contained at the end terms of sale, which excluded the implied warranty under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14, & contained in lieu a modified warranty & conditions as to repair free of charge in case any fault should be developed in a bicycle sold. An erratus slip at the beginning of this catalogue had a notice referring to the terms of sale, & then there were 10 pages, each with a model of a bicycle depicted, & at the foot of the model on the last page was a notice calling attention to the terms of sale at the end. Pltf. did not read the slip, & stopped short plled warranty that it shall be reasonably fit for the work that the vendor knew the buyer wanted it for, which is not inconsistent with any of the express warranties usually inserted in such a contract.—NORTH WEST THRESHER CO. v. DARRELL (1905), 15 Man. L. R. 553.—CAN.

k. ————Pltfs. sold machinery to the deft., who signed a written contract containing a special clause stating that “There are no other warranties or guarantees, promises or agreements, than those contained herein”:—Held: this stipulation was not sufficient to exclude the implied condition as to reasonable fitness for the purpose for which the article was bought which attached to such a sale as this by the Sale of Goods Ordinance, C. O. 1905, c. 39, s. 16 (1), & which is something higher than a warranty, & not inconsistent with the express warranty first set out in the contract.—

of the third page, on which was a model of the bicycle he intended to buy, & did not appreciate that the bicycles were offered on any special terms. Nothing was said to him at the depot about any special or modified warranty & no reference was made to any special terms in either the invoice or receipt which were given. If the special terms of sale were imported into the contract for sale of the bicycle the claim pltf. made for damages could not succeed:—Held: the bicycle was not contracted to be sold subject to the special terms & warranty & therefore there was a warranty implied by Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14, that the bicycle was reasonably fit to be ridden by pltf. & as it was owing to the family construction of the bicycle that the accident occurred, that implied warranty has not been fulfilled & pltf. was entitled to the damages claimed.—*WALLS v. At the head of defts.' letter was a printed notice, "All offers are subject to our usual strike & guarantee clauses, accidents, etc." Pltfs. ordered the cylinder, but after it had been delivered & fitted it was found to be defective. A new cylinder was subsequently supplied by defts., but owing to the delay pltf. were not able to complete the repairs in accordance with their contract with the shipowners, & had to pay them damages. In an action to recover the amount of the damages defts. alleged that the contract for the supply of the cylinder was made subject to "our usual" guarantee clause & that their guarantee clause provided (inter alia) that "the contractors shall not in any case be liable for any detention of the vessel or other consequential damages howsoever arising":—Held: as it was not clear what guarantee clause was incorporated, since the clause suggested by defts. was inapplicable to the contract, & as it was not proved that defts. had made it clear that they intended to limit their liability, pltf. were entitled to recover.—*J. 923. —[By a contract dated July 26, 1922, the sellers sold to the buyers 500 tons of palm kernels, shipment from Matadi during Sept. 1922. One of the terms of the contract was that particulars of the kernels, namely quantity, port of shipment, & ship's name should be duly declared, & that the sellers were to be deemed to have made default in declaring shipment if the goods were not declared within six weeks of the last day allowed for shipment. On Aug. 17, 1922, the buyers agreed at the sellers' request to accept the balance of the palm kernels necessary to complete the contract from a shipment which the sellers declared would arrive on board the steamship W. The W. did not call at Matadi, nor were any kernels in fact shipped on that vessel. In Sept. 1922, the sellers shipped the balance of the palm kernels by the steamship A. V., & the documents for the goods were presented to the buyers in Oct. 1922, who then refused to take them up on the ground that the contract had been converted into a contract for palm kernels to be shipped by the W. The arbitrators appointed under the contract held that the buyers were entitled to reject the goods, but their decision was reversed by the committee of appeal on the ground that there had been no effectual declaration of shipment by the W. & that the sellers were entitled to ship the goods by the later steamer. Upon a case stated for the opinion of the ct.:—Held: there had been a variation of the contract by the agreement to ship in August by the W., & the buyers were entitled to reject the goods which did not comply with the contract as varied. The award of the committee of appeal was set aside & that of the arbitrators restored.—BERNARDINO CORREA, LDA v. PORTER (W.) & Co. (1923), 129 L. T. 800.

924. —[Temporary waiver of breach—Notice to purchaser.]—A contract, made in Sept. for the sale & shipment of 4,000 tons of flour, to be shipped to Greece not later than Nov. 7, provided that "each shipment shall be deemed a separate contract," & that payment should be "by confirmed bankers credit." The buyer opened a banker's credit which was not in fact "confirmed" & the seller, with notice of that fact, made some shipments & received payment therefor by means of the credit, & also obtained from the buyer an extension of time to Nov. 30 for shipment of the balance of the flour. On Nov. 25 the seller cancelled the contract as to the shipment of the balance of the flour, without any previous notice, upon the ground that the credit was not in accordance with the contract:—Held: the seller, by waiving for a time the breach of the condition as to a confirmed credit, was not thereby bound to act upon that credit up to the end of the contract, but he was not entitled to cancel the contract without giving the buyer reasonable notice of his intention to cancel so as to give the buyer an opportunity of complying with the condition.—

Whether right to damages affected.]—A contract note for the sale of 2,000 gross of "200 yards reels" of sewing cotton contained the following condition: "The goods delivered shall be deemed to be in all respects in accordance with the contract & the buyers shall be bound to accept & pay for same accordingly unless the sellers shall within fourteen days after the arrival of the goods at their destination receive from the buyers notice of any matter or thing by reason whereof they may allege that the goods are not in accordance with the contract." Eighteen months after delivery the buyers discovered for the first time that the length of cotton per reel was less than 200 yards, the average shortage being about 6 per cent., & they brought an action against the sellers for damages for breach of contract. The sellers pleaded that the condition was a bar to the action:—Held: (1) the condition applied to quality only & not to quantity, & the buyers were entitled to judgment; (2) assuming that the conditions extended to quantity, while the condition excluded the right to reject, it did not extend to the right to claim damages.—BECK & Co. v. Rejection of goods—Invalid exercise of right to reject—Remedy in damages.]—Applts. sold to resps for shipment from Hamburg to Liverpool, a cargo of coal to consist of briquettes size 2 in., the contract providing as follows: "Bills of lading to be accepted by buyers as absolute & conclusive proof of weight, quality, & description, the buyers having right of inspecting the cargo. No warranty is expressed or implied, & sellers accept no responsibility in regard to the description, size, quality, condition, or fitness for steaming purposes or otherwise of the coal or fuel contracted for or supplied, & no reduction in price will be made in respect of any such matters."

Resps. required the coal to supply power stations, & at the time of the contract applts. were aware of this. The cargo was shipped, some of it being in the holds & the remainder on deck & covering the hatch covers. On arrival at Liverpool the vessel had to wait for a discharging berth, & the captain, finding that the cargo in the holds was heating, bought the deck cargo from resps. & removed it & opened the hatches. Resps. then found that, though the briquettes on the deck were of the contractual size, the briquettes in the holds were larger & were not suitable for use in power stations, & they gave notice of rejection of the whole cargo:—Held: (1) it was a condition of the

927. Buyer compelled to treat breach as breach of warranty—Acceptance of goods—Remedy in damages.]—By a written agreement, pltf. contracted to sell to deft. from 300 to 350 bales of white washed Donskoy fleece wool, laid down at certain ports in England, "deliverable at Odessa during Aug. then next, to be shipped with all despatch, warranted fair average quality; but should they prove otherwise, to be taken with fair allowance, to be assessed by Messrs. H. & R., subject to the safe arrival of the wool in good condition at any of the ports stated, & the names of the vessels to be declared as soon as the wools were shipped," etc. To an action for the breach of this contract, by not accepting the wools, deft. pleaded that the wools were bought, with the knowledge of both parties, for the purpose of reselling in the course of deft.'s business; that wool is an article of fluctuating value, & not saleable until the names of the vessels in which it was shipped should have been declared according to the contract; & pltf. had neglected to declare the names of the vessels in which the wools were shipped until after an unreasonable time after they had been shipped:—Held: the provision in the contract, that the names of the vessels in which the wools were shipped should be declared as soon as they had been shipped, was a condition precedent to defts.' obligations to accept & pay for them; & the plea was good.

After such acceptance, defts. would have been bound to pay the price, or the residue of it, & could not have insisted on the neglect to name in due time, but, if there had been any such neglect, would nevertheless have had their remedy for the damage by cross action on the contract to declare the names (PARKE, B.)—*GRAVES v. There was contradictory evidence in an action on an accommodation bill given for the price, as to whether there was a warranty, or only a representation. The picture was kept:—Held: if the jury thought there was a warranty, & it was broken, then they should find their verdict for that sum which they considered to be the actual value of the picture.—*DE SEWHANBERG v. p. ———— Seed sown when known to be defective.—A dealer in grass seeds held liable in damages & liable to K. & C. in the first action in respect of damages & costs, claimed to be indemnified in respect of the same by a French firm of manufacturers from whom they had originally bought the skins. The manufacturers contended (inter alia) that the law governing the sale of the skins was the law of the French Republic, & that the action was barred by the French law of limitation:—Held: (1) although a contract made in England is prima facie to be governed by English law, in view of the facts that the goods were made in France & were to be delivered in France, & that payment was to be made in French money by a draft in favour of a French vendor payable on a French bank, it must be inferred that here the parties intended French law to govern the contract; but that in matters of limitation the lex fori applied, & the action was not statute barred by not having been brought within the French time limit; & (2) according to the rule governing the measure of damages laid down by FRY, L.J., in Hammond v. Bussey, No. 995, post, the damages that must reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties as the probable result of a breach of the contract, in view of the special circumstances, were the damages & costs incurred by G. & A. S. in reasonably defending the action brought against them, & they were accordingly entitled to recover these from the manufacturers.—SLAVONSKI v. LA PELLETERIE DE ROUBAIX SOCIÉTÉ ANONYME (1927), 137 L. T. 645.

939. —————Inspection of goods by buyer's engineer—Inspection conclusive.—An English co., who owned a railway in Russia, entered into a contract for the manufacture & delivery to them of rails for their railway. The contract provided that a sample should be sent to the co.'s engineer for approval before the commencement of the work. It was, however, "to be expressly understood that such approval is not in any way to relieve the contractor from any of the conditions or stipulations contained in this specification." During the progress of the work tests were to be applied by the engineer at his discretion, & the entire contract was to be executed in every respect to the satisfaction of the engineer, "who shall have the power of rejecting any rails or fishing plates he may disapprove on any ground whatever, & whose decision on any points of doubt or dispute that may arise in reference to this contract shall be final & binding on all parties. . . . The engineer will inspect, either personally or by deputy, every stage of the process of the manufacture at the works. . . . This examination at the works is not in any way to commit the co. to the approval & acceptance of any rails or fishing plates which, when delivered, shall not be strictly in accordance with the drawings & specification." After the rails had been repetition of the price of certain seed grown by himself, & sold by him at a good price, but which, from its bad quality, did not vegetate; & held not to be a bar to the buyer claiming damages, that before sowing the seed he had observed it to have a bad colour & smell, without returning it, or intimating this to the seller.—HILL v. PRINGLE (1827), 6 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 229; 3 Fac. Coll. 227.—SCOT.

Waiver of warranty of fitness—Warranty of fitness—here goods which are not at once returned, & the contract of sale repudiated, the implied condition that they are fit for the purpose for which they are bought is waived, but the implied warranty of fitness remains, on which an action for damages may be brought.—WHITE

19.—Breach of conditions and delivered to the co. & paid for by them, & more than half of them laid down in Russia, it was discovered that they were defective. An action being brought by the co. for breach of contract:—Held: it could not be maintained, as the contract showed that the parties intended the final expression of the engineer's satisfaction with the entire contract to be conclusive.—DUNABERG & WITEPSK RY. CO., LTD. v. HOPKINS, GILKES & CO., LTD. (1877), 36 L. T. 733.

940. Seller holding out as manufacturer—Goods manufactured by third party.]—A., a wine merchant, orders a crane rope of B., a dealer in, & who represents himself as a manufacturer of, ropes. B.'s foreman thereupon ascertains the nature & dimensions of the rope required, & being told that it is wanted to raise pipes of wine from the cellar, says that a rope must be made on purpose. B. does not make the rope himself, but sends the order to his manufacturer, who employs a third party to make the rope:—Held: in an action on the case by A. against B., to recover damages resulting from the insufficiency of the rope, B., as between him & A., is to be considered as the manufacturer of the rope; & an implied warranty arises out of the contract, that the rope is a fit & proper one for the purpose for which it was ordered. Semble: to raise an implied warranty, it is not necessary that the vendor should also be, or should represent himself as, the manufacturer, where he is told of the purpose for which the goods are required, & the purchaser does not select them himself, but relies on the skill & judgment of the vendor.—BROWN v. EDGINGTON (1841), 2 Man. & G. 279; Drinkwater, 106; 2 Scott, N. R. 496; 10 L. J. C. P. 66; 5 J. P. 276; 133 E. R. 751.

941. Right to recover purchase-money—Part delivery—Resale of undelivered part by vendor.]—Pltf. agreed to buy 13 tons of oil from deft., & paid a deposit for the price, 5 tons were delivered, when pltf. said they were of inferior quality, & required deft. to take them back or return the deposit money. Def. sold the other 8 tons, but it did not appear whether he had thus rendered himself incapable of completing the contract, before or after pltf. refused to receive any more of the oil:—Held: in the absence of such evidence, on an action brought to recover back the money, the jury were properly directed, whether there was fraud on the part of deft. in the inception of the contract & if, not, whether there was sufficient evidence that deft. had agreed to rescind the contract.—FITZ v. CASSANET (1842), 4 Man. & G. 898; 5 Scott, N. R. 902; 12 L. J. C. P. 70; 134 E. R. 369; sub nom. PITT v. CASSANET, 6 Jur. 1125.

On arrival in London the goods were found to be defective & not according to contract, & the defects in them were not due to sea voyage:—Held: inasmuch as the breach was continuing, so as to speak, the English cts. had a jurisdiction, & defts. might be served with notice of a writ of summons under R. b. General rule.]—A completed sale of chattels cannot be rescinded for breach of warranty.—WILLIAM HAMILTON MANUFACTURING CO. v. KNIGHT BROTHERS (1897), 5 B. C. R. 391.—CAN.

c. ———.]—Where a chattel sold with a warranty is delivered as agreed upon & is not up to the warranty, that fact, in the absence of fraud, affords no ground for rescinding the contract, sale represented the goods to be of a particular quality. The vendee of goods who has used or sold a portion of them after he has discovered that they do not answer the contract, cannot repudiate the contract, & recover back the price.

But where the contract is executory only when the chattel is received, as where goods are ordered of a manufacturer, & he contracts to supply them of a certain quality, or fit for a certain purpose, the vendee may rescind the contract if the goods do not answer the warranty, provided he has not kept them longer than was necessary for the purpose of trial, or exercised the dominion of an owner over them, as by selling them.—*STREET v. 962. ———.]—The breach of a warranty is no answer to an action for the price of a specific chattel supplied, though it may be used in reduction of the price, & may be the subject-matter of an action at law.

A. contracted in writing with B. to supply him with "a 14-horse power engine" & erect the same by a given day upon the premises of B. in a good & workmanlike manner. B. in answer, wrote, "In consideration of your supplying me with a 14-horse power engine, which my foreman has inspected, & erecting the same according to your undertaking, I agree to pay £260 for the same, by instalments, etc.: & on being satisfied with the engine, to pay the remainder within two months of the completion of the contract." At the time of the inspection, the engine was lying in separate parts on pltf.'s premises; & upon being put up, defts. asserted that it did not do the work of a 14-horse power engine, & insisted on their right to return it, & refused to pay the last instalment, upon which pltf. brought an action:—Held: defts. had contracted for the purchase of a specific chattel, & if there was any breach of warranty, it would only amount to evidence in reduction of the sum agreed to be paid.—PARSONS v. SEXTON (1847), 4 C. B. 899; 16 L. J. C. P. 181; 9 L. T. O. S. 410; 11 Jur. 849; 136 E. R. 763.

Where the breach of warranty, of which a deft. complains, is upon the very subject-matter of the action, it is competent for him to show in reduction of damages, how much less the subject-matter of the action is worth by reason of such breach. S. M. 1913, c. 174, s. 13, not to prevent his right of action for breach of warranty.—SMALLMAN v. BATES (Man.), [1919] 2 W. W. R. 238; 47 D. L. R. 709.—CAN.

f. Proof of breach.—Of warranty of title.]—In an action for breach of warranty of title it is necessary to prove at the trial that the title was not for the price of the work alleged to have been improperly done, & pltf. had settled by paying the whole amount then sued for; & that, as pltf. might have given the non-performance & the defective performance complained of in evidence in reduction of damages, pltf. was precluded from bringing a cross action for them:—Held: though pltf. might have used the causes of action for which he sued in reduction of the claim in the former action, yet he was not bound to do so, but might maintain a separate action for them.

It is clear that before any action is brought for the price of an article sold with a warranty . . . the person to whom an article is sold . . . may pay the full price without prejudice to his right to sue for the breach of warranty. . . . Is there any reason why he should be deprived of this right by the mere fact of his opponent having commenced an action for the price? We think that there is none . . . he [the buyer] may claim no reduction at all & afterwards sue for his entire cause of action (HANNEN, J.).—DAVIS v. HEDGES (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 687; 40 L. J. Q. B. 276; 25 L. T. 155; 20 W. R. 60.

983. Action founded on invalid instrument—Sale of ship.—Defts.' testator being sole owner of a ship, signed & delivered to pltf., G., an instrument, describing the ship as copper bolted, but not reciting the certificate of registry; at the foot of which was written, "Sold the within-mentioned ship to G." He afterwards executed a bill of sale to pltf. in the usual form, which did not describe the ship as copper bolted. She was not copper bolted, & pltf. declared in assumpsit against defts., as exors. of the vendor, for the breach of his warranty in that particular:—Held: the action could not be maintained, the instrument first mentioned being void by 34 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 14.—KAHN v. OLD (1824), 2 B. & C. 627; 4 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 52; 2 L. J. O. S. K. B. 102; 107 E. R. 517.

984. Breach must be caused by seller—Evidence of negligence by purchaser.—In an action on a contract to sell to & ship for & on account of pltf. a quantity of beer, to a firm at Bombay, for sale on his account, & on an alleged undertaking that it should be in a fit condition for shipment; it was proved that when the beer was warehoused it was in bad condition; but it appeared that, through the default of pltf. in not advising the Bombay firm of the consignment, the beer had lain for six weeks unwarehoused in the ship or on the quays, & that this would amply account for its bad condition:—Held: there was no evidence of a cause of action, whether for breach of contract or negligence.—ESCOMBE v. 985. Provision for inspection before payment—Failure to inspect—Or to discover defect on inspection.—Where goods are sold "Payment net cash after inspections of goods immediately on arrival of steamer," the buyer has a right to claim damages if the goods are not in accordance with the contract even though he does not inspect the goods, or, by mistake does not on inspection discover the defect in them.—KHAN v. D. Measure of Damages.

(a) In General.

See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 91), s. 53 (2), &, generally, DAMAGES, Vol. XVII., pp. 130 et seq.

990. Damages & costs paid or payable to third party—On resale.]—A. in Holland commissioned B. in London, to purchase & ship tobacco of the best quality, B. employed C. as his broker for that purpose who accordingly made a purchase from D. On the arrival of the tobacco in Holland, it turned out to be of a very bad quality, when A. brought an action & recovered against B.:—Held: B. was entitled to recover from C. the whole of the damages he had sustained in the action brought against him by A. although he had received a bought note from C. in which the tobacco was not described as of the best quality.—MAINWARING v. BRANDON (1818), 8 Taunt. 202; 2 Moore, C. P. 125; 129 E. R. 361.

991. ———.]—A. sold a picture to B., warranting it a Claude. B. sold it to J., & warranted it a Claude to him. The picture was not a Claude, & J. brought an action against B. on the warranty. B. defended the action, & J. recovered damages & costs against him. B. then brought an action against A. upon the first warranty:—Held: B. was in this action entitled to recover against A. the amount of the damages & costs that B. had paid to J., & also the costs incurred by B. in defending the first action. But, if the jury should be of opinion that the sale from B. to J. was not a real sale of the picture, in the ordinary course of business, but merely a colourable sale, on the usurious discount of a bill, they ought to disallow these sums.—PENNELL v. WOODBURN (1835), 7 C. & P. 117, N. P.

992. ———.]—Declaration charged that deft. had sold to pltf. seed barley, warranting it to be of a particular quality, but had delivered seed barley of an inferior quality & it alleged, as special damage, that pltf., relying on the warranty, had sold the seed barley with a similar warranty to T., who had sown it & had thereby obtained a crop inferior to that which would have been produced by seed barley of the quality warranted, & so incurred damages which the pltf. was liable to make good. Deft. having suffered judgment by default, it was proved, on the execution of the writ of inquiry for damages, that the sale by pltf. had taken place as alleged; & evidence was given of the pecuniary amount of the values of the crop obtained & the crop which would have been produced by seed barley of the quality warranted. It further appeared that pltf.'s vendee had claimed from him compensation, which pltf. had agreed to make; but no sum had been agreed upon, & no payment actually made:—Held: in assessing the damages, the jury ought to include the amount to which they considered pltf. had become liable

995. ———.]—Deft. contracted for the sale of coal of a particular description to pltf.s., knowing that they were buying such coal for the purpose of reselling it as coal of the same description. Pltf.s. did so resell the coal. The coal delivered by deft. to pltf.s. under the contract & by them delivered to their sub-vendees did not answer such description, but this could not be ascertained by inspection of the coal, & only became apparent upon its use by the sub-vendees. The sub-vendees thereupon brought an action for breach of contract against pltf.s. Pltf.s. gave notice of the action to deft., who, however, repudiated all liability, insisting that the coal was according to contract. Pltf.s. defended the action against them, but at the trial the verdict was that the coal was not according to contract, & the sub-vendees accordingly recovered damages from pltf.s. Pltf.s. thereupon sued deft. for breach of contract, claiming as damages the amount of the damages recovered from them in the action by their sub-vendees, & the costs which had been incurred in such action. Deft. paid the amount of the damages in the previous action into ct., but denied his liability in respect of the costs:—Held: the defence of the previous action being, under the circumstances, reasonable, the costs incurred by pltf.s. as defts. in such action were recoverable as being damages which might reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties, at the time when they made the contract, as the probable result of a breach of it.—HAMMOND & Co. v. 997. —.]—Pltf., a coal merchant at Cardiff, having contracted with shipowners for the supply of coal to their steamers there, entered into a contract with defts., who were colliery proprietors also carrying on business at Cardiff, for the supply to him of coal, which was expressly stated to be for shipment in those steamers. Defts. committed a breach of their contract in not supplying coal under it with reasonable despatch, in consequence of which the supply of coal to one of the steamers by pltf. was delayed & the steamer was detained. The shipowners thereupon made a claim of £150 upon pltf. in respect of her detention, & subsequently brought an action against him to enforce their claim. Pltf. gave notice of the claim & action to defts., who repudiated all liability, & refused to take up the defence, stating however that they considered the claim preposterous, & the amount of it excessive. Pltf. thereupon defended the action, paying £20 into ct., & at the trial he succeeded in showing that the sum so paid in was sufficient. He then brought an action against defts. for breach of their contract. The judge at the trial found that the course taken by pltf. in defending the action against him was reasonable :—Held : the pltf. was entitled under the rule in Hadley v. Baxendale (1854), 9 Ex. 341, to recover from defts. as damages the amount of the costs reasonably incurred by him in defending the action against him over & above the amount which he had received for costs as between party & party from the pltf. in that action.—AGIUS v. Owing to the colouring matter with which the fur was dyed, the customer contracted a skin disease & brought an action against pltf., claiming damages. Pltf. informed deft. thereof & requested him to undertake the defence of the action. Dft. denied liability but never suggested that pltf. had no answer to the action, with the result that pltf. defended the action & a jury awarded the customer £138 18s. as damages for her suffering, & pltf. had to pay the costs of the action :—Held : pltf. were entitled to recover from deft. the damages so awarded, together with the customer's taxed costs of the action & their own costs of defending the action as between solr. & client.—BENNETT (SIDNEY), LTD. v. 999. —.]—B., a wholesale furrier, bought some dyed rabbit skins from A. for the purpose, as A. knew, of making them into fur collars. B. having made the fur collars, resold to C., C. resold to D., & D. to E., a draper. E. then sold a coat, with one of these fur collars attached, to F., a customer, for her own wear. F. developed "fur dermatitis," owing to antimony in the fur. F. sued E. for damages for breach of warranty on the sale of the coat. E. gave notice of the action to D., D. to C., C. to B., & B. to A.

E. defended, but judgment was given against him for £67 & £248 costs. E. claimed this sum, together with his own costs, £643 in all, from D. who paid without resisting the claim. D. recovered this amount from C. together with a further sum for his costs. C. claimed from B., & B. having paid £645 & £45 for costs, sued A. for £699 damages for breach of warranty on the sale of the skins.

1001. ——— Defective article used in goods manufactured by plaintiff.—Defts. contracted to sell by description to pltf. sulphuric acid, commercially free from arsenic. Pltfs. did not make known to defts., either expressly or by implication, the purpose for which they required the acid. In breach of the implied condition that the acid should correspond with the description in the contract, defts. supplied to pltfs. sulphuric acid which was not commercially free from arsenic. Pltfs. by the exercise of ordinary care might have discovered the presence of arsenic in the acid; but they did not do so, & in ignorance of the fact, used the acid in the manufacture of brewing sugar in the shape of invert & glucose, which they sold to brewers who used it in the brewing of beer. The beer thus made was rendered poisonous, & the brewers suffered loss in respect of which pltfs. were liable to them. Pltfs. also lost the price of the acid, which was rendered worthless to them, & the value of other goods spoilt through being mixed with the acid: & the goodwill of their business was damaged.—Held: pltfs. were entitled to recover from defts. the price of the acid & the value of the goods spoilt, but not the damages payable by pltfs. to the brewers or the damage to the goodwill of pltfs.' business.—BOSTOCK & CO., LTD. v. 1002. Loss of anchor—Defect in warranted cable.—Under an averment that one of the links of a warranted chain cable broke, & that thereby the chain cable & an anchor to which it was attached were wholly lost, it is sufficient to prove that a link of the chain cable being broken, the pilot, for the preservation of the ship & crew, slipped the cable, & that the anchor & chain cable were thereby lost. Under the warranty of the cable, pltfs. might, in addition to the value of the cable, recover the value of the lost anchor, to which the insufficient cable was attached.—BORRADAILE v. The jury found a verdict for pltf., & awarded £200 in respect of the damages claimed as above-mentioned.—Held: the death of pltf.'s wife not forming an essential part of the cause of action sued upon but only an element in ascertaining the damages arising therefrom there was no rule of law which prevented such damages as aforesaid from being recoverable in the action.—JACKSON v. Value of article destroyed—Contaminated beer.—The measure of damages, apart from special circumstances, which the manufacturer of an article that has had to be destroyed by the fault of another is entitled to recover, is the price which he could have sold it for on the day that it had to be destroyed:—Held: therefore, although plffs. were brewers they were entitled to recover the full selling value of the beer in their cellars, which had by the fault of defts. to be thrown away, & not merely such a sum as they themselves must have expended in order to brew an equal amount of beer of the same quality to replace it.—HOLDEN (RICHARD), LTD. v. 1016. Nominal damages—Loss not due to seller's breach of contract.—By a contract made in July, 1919, for the sale of Cyprus locust beans, it was provided (inter alia), that shipment was to be made by the sellers in July &/or Aug., 1919, & that the bills of lading were to be dated for those months.

The goods arrived in London on Sept. 27, 1919, & on Sept. 29 the buyers paid for them. It was subsequently discovered that the goods had not been shipped until Sept., & that the bills of lading, although dated Aug. 31, had not in fact been signed until on or after Sept. 6. From the date of the contract in July, the market for all locust beans had fallen heavily. The buyers had resold the beans, & so could not reject or return them. There was no difference in value at the material time between locust beans shipped in Aug. & those shipped in Sept. On a claim for damages for breach of contract, which was admitted:—Held: as the buyers' loss was not due to the sellers' breach of contract, the buyers were only entitled to nominal damages.—TAYLOR & SONS, LTD. v. BANK OF ATHENS, PINNOCK BROTHERS v. SAME (1922), 91 L. J. K. B. 776; 128 L. T. 795; 27 Com. Cas. 142.

1017. Difference between value as contracted for & value as delivered.—Goods sold are described in the invoice as scarlet cuttings, a warranty is to be inferred that the goods answered the known mercantile description of scarlet cuttings.

In an action of assumpsit it is alleged as a breach, that certain goods sold & delivered to plff., & warranted to be scarlet cuttings, were not scarlet cuttings, per quod, they became & were of no use or value to plff. Plff. is entitled, without any further allegation of special damage, to recover as much as the goods would have been worth to him had the contract been faithfully performed by deft.—BRIDGE v. The declaration contained a special count which stated a warranty that the wheat would grow, & a breach that it would not, & that plff. was deprived of great gains, etc. The declaration also contained counts for money had & received, & on an account stated. The particulars of demand were for the price of the wheat, but were expressly limited to the indebitatus counts:—Held: this did not prevent plff. from giving evidence of what the value of the crops might have been with a view to his damages on the first count.—PAGE v. In any event the compensation recoverable for loss of use of the engine in such case would be only for the time necessarily taken to rebuild it using due diligence & dispatch.—ADVANCE RUMELY THRESHER CO. 1023. —.]—Pltf. purchased an orchid from deft. at an auction for twenty guineas with the warranty that it was "Cattleya Acklandiae alba, only known plant." After two years it flowered, & produced not a white but a purple flower. The value of such a plant is 7s. 6d. In an action for breach of warranty, the county ct. judge found as a fact, that, if the orchid had been an actual alba, it was at the time of sale worth £50; but that until it showed its real nature there was no probability that an orchid grower would give more than twenty guineas for it:—Held: judgment must be entered for pltf. for £50.—*ASHWORTH v. 1024. —.]—Shippers of goods at a foreign port chartered a ship to carry the goods to London. The charterparty provided that the master should sign bills of lading in the form indorsed on it. That form contained the clauses "shipped in good order & condition & to be delivered in the like good order & condition" & "quality & measure unknown" & incorporated the American Harter Act which imposes upon shipowners & masters the duty of delivering to shippers of merchandise bills of lading stating (inter alia), "the apparent order & condition" of the merchandise delivered for carriage. The goods in question were damaged before shipment & the damage was apparent. The master, however, took them on board & gave the shippers a bill of lading in the form indorsed on the charter. Before delivery of the goods in London, the shippers sold them to purchasers there, who thereupon became indorsees of the bill of lading to whom the property in the goods passed. On presentation of the bill of lading & shipping documents the purchasers paid the contract price of the goods to the shippers & the goods having been delivered in their damaged condition in London, the purchasers, in an arbn. between themselves & the shippers obtained an award against the latter for damages representing the difference between the price paid by the purchasers & the value of the goods when delivered. The purchasers did not sue the shippers, who were a foreign firm, on that award, but now sued the owners of the ship for damages for not delivering the goods in good order & condition:—Held: the words in the bill of lading "shipped in good order & condition" were not words of contract, & the purchasers were not entitled to sue for any breach of contract in respect of them; but the shipowners were bound by the representation of the master in the bill of lading that the goods were shipped in good order & condition; & there being sufficient evidence that the purchasers had altered their position & acted to their own prejudice on the faith of that representation, the shipowners were estopped from denying the truth of it, & were liable in damages to the purchasers for not delivering the goods in good order & condition, the measure of damages being the difference between the price paid by the purchasers, & the value of the goods when delivered, together with the reasonable expenses incurred on delivery by reason of their damaged condition.

The words "shipped in good order & condition" are not words of contract in the sense of a promise or undertaking (CHANNELL, J.).—*COMPANIA NAVIERA VASCONZADA v. CHURCHILL & SIM, SAME v. 1025. Advantage accruing in mitigation of damage — Relevant considerations.]—Although the opinion of the High Ct. upon a special case stated by an arbitrator under Arbitration Act, 1889 (c. 49), with regard to a question of law arising in the course of the reference cannot be the subject of an appeal, yet, if that opinion is erroneous, an award expressed to be founded on that opinion can be set aside as containing an error of law apparent on the face of the award. Turbines supplied under a contract to a railway co. were deficient in power & in economy of working & were not in accordance with the contract. The railway co., whilst reserving their right to damages for breach of contract, used the turbines for a time, but ultimately replaced them by other turbines of a different make & design. In the course of an arbn. between the contractors & the railway co. as to the measure of damages in respect of the breach of contract the arbitrator found (1) that the purchase of the substituted turbines by the railway co. was a reasonable & prudent course for the purpose of mitigating the damages; (2) even if the original turbines had complied with the contract, under Sale of Goods Act, R. S. S. 1909, c. 147, s. 51 (3). The use of the expression prima facie in said sub-sect. indicates that the sub-sect. raises a presumption only. A buyer of farm machinery is entitled to damages for loss of use of the machinery & loss of time resulting from a breach of the statutory warranties that the machinery is well made, of good materials & durable.—SCHLOSSER v. SAWYER MASSEY CO., LTD., [1921] 1

it would still have been to the pecuniary advantage of the railway co. at their own cost to have replaced them by the other turbines owing to their greater efficiency; & he stated a special case for the opinion of the ct. whether in the circumstances the cost of the substituted turbines was recoverable by the railway co., as part of their damages. The ct. answered this question in the affirmative, & the arbitrator made an award expressed to be made on the footing of this answer. A motion to set aside the award as containing an error of law on the face of it was refused:—Held: the pecuniary advantage which the railway co. derived from the superiority of the substituted turbines was relevant matter for the consideration of the arbitrator in assessing the damages, & the award ought to be remitted to him with a declaration to that effect.—BRITISH WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC & MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. 1026. Contract for sub-sale—Whether taken into account.—Manufacturers agreed to sell 3,000 pieces of unbleached cotton cloth of a specified quality at a certain price per piece to be delivered within a certain period. They delivered 1,625 pieces of inferior quality. The purchasers accepted & paid for these pieces but refused to take any further deliveries, & being sued by the manufacturers for non-acceptance of the remaining pieces, counterclaimed damages for breach of warranty of quality in relation to the 1,625 pieces. The purchasers had made a contract to deliver 2,000 pieces of bleached cloth to third persons at a price per piece higher than the market price per piece of the 1,625 pieces as delivered, & in fulfilment of that contract had actually delivered 691 of the 1,625 pieces, & had received payment for them:—Held: this contract was not to be taken into account in measuring the damages.—SLATER v. 1027. — Value at time of delivery to sub-purchaser.—Resps. sold to claimant sodium sulphide in drums. The drums were delivered to claimant in Manchester, but resps. knew that they were intended for export. Owing to the difficulty of opening & reclosing the drums it is impracticable to open them until the contents are actually required for use. The drums were resold by claimant, & owing to congestion on the French railways & other causes they did not reach the ultimate consignees at Lyons & Genoa respectively till some months later. On the drums being opened by those consignees the contents were found to be not sodium sulphide but caustic soda of inferior quality. The drums were thereupon rejected. On a claim for damages by claimant against resps.:—Held: the damages were to be assessed according to the prices ruling, not at the date of the delivery in Manchester, but at the date when the drums were opened by the ultimate consignees at Lyons & Genoa.—VAN DEN HURK v. o. Condition for return—Return of article & replacement by another.—Where in a contract for the sale of a gasoline engine & tank there was a warranty that if the engine would not work well, notice thereof was to be given to defts. stating wherein it failed, & giving a reasonable time to get to it & remedy the defect, & if such defect could not be remedied, the engine was to be returned to the defts. & a new engine given in its place.—Held: pltf.’s remedy under such warranty was for not later than fourteen days after the final discharge of the vessel. Pltfs. resold the copra cake to B. & co., who resold it to dealers, & they in turn resold it to farmers, who used it for feeding cattle. The cattle fed on the cake became ill, & it was then found on analysis, that the cake contained an admixture of castor beans in so large a proportion as to make it poisonous. Claims were then made by the various buyers against their sellers & by pltfs. against defts. as soon as the mischief was discovered, but this was after the expiration of fourteen days from the final discharge of the vessel. Pltfs. claimed arbn., but the arbitrator before whom the matter came held that he had no jurisdiction, as notice of arbn. was not given nor the arbitrator nominated in time. In an action by pltfs. claiming damages, it was found that it was within the contemplation of the parties that the copra cake would be used for cattle food & nothing else:—Held: (1) the presence of the arbn. clause was not in itself a bar to the action, nor was the award, which dealt merely with the arbitrator's jurisdiction & not with the claim; (2) the clause as to defects in the goods did not protect defts. inasmuch as the copra cake mixed with castor beans could not properly be described as copra cake; & pltfs. were entitled to recover the damages & costs they had had to pay to their purchasers.—PINNOCK BROTHERS v. 1031. — *By two contracts made in 1919, applt. bought from resps. a large quantity of "American Fresh Eggs." The contracts provided that in case of any dispute as to the quality or condition of the goods, the question should be referred to arbn., provided that "such reference shall be claimed in writing within three days after the goods have been landed." It was also provided that the award in writing of any two arbitrators should be conclusive & binding on all parties, subject to the right of appeal. The goods arrived in England, & were not examined at the port of landing, but were sold by applt. to sub-purchasers. More than three days after the goods had been landed applt. wrote to resps. complaining that the goods were of inferior quality, & some time later he wrote a letter claiming a reference to arbn. Resps. did not then take the objection that the claim was out of time, but signed a submission to arbn. in respect of each contract. At the reference resps. took the points that applt.'s claim was out of time, & that the goods should have been examined at the port of landing. The arbitrators awarded "that the buyer was out of time in examining & making claim on the goods, & also in claiming arbn., & that therefore his case fails." The buyer took no steps to set aside the awards, but nearly two years later brought an action claiming damages for breach of contract:—Held: the awards were a bar to the action.—*AYSCOUGH v. 1033. — As a whole.—By an agreement in writing the "owners & lessors" of a gas engine agreed to let, & the "lessee" agreed to hire, the engine at a rent to be paid by instalments amounting in all to £240; upon payment in full the agreement to be at end & the engine to become the property of the lessee, but until payment in full to remain the sole & absolute property of the lessors. It was also agreed that in case of failure to pay any of the instalments or if the lessee should become bkpt. the lessors might elect either to recover the full balance remaining due, or instead to resume possession of the engine & sell it & after retaining out of the purchase-money all expenses & the balance remaining due, pay the surplus, if any, to the lessee. Provided that if the lessors should see fit to resume possession of the engine without selling, the loss to them occasioned by the lessee's non-performance of the agreement should be borne by him, & in case of bkpcy. the lessors should be entitled to prove against his estate for that loss as liquidated damages. The lessee paid the first instalment & the engine was placed on his premises. While it was still there he became bkpt., some instalments being overdue. The lessors having taken no steps to recover the balance due or to sell:—Held: upon the true construction of the agreement the property in the engine never passed to the lessee, but remained in the lessors.

If the words in one part of it point in one direction & the words in another part in another direction, you must look at the agreement as a whole & see what its substantial effect is (LORD HERSCHELL, C.).

Upon an agreement to sell it depends upon the intention of the parties whether the property passes or does not pass . . . & it might be necessary to hold that the property has passed, although the parties have said that their intention was that it should not, because they have provided that it shall (LORD HERSCHELL, C.).

They could not sue for the purchase-money & insist that the property in the goods, the price of which they were suing for, had not passed. . . . They may, instead of suing for the balance of the price & treating it then & there as a sale at that price then due, resume possession (LORD HERSCHELL, C.).—MCENTIRE v. For this purpose an invoice was made out & a receipt given to deft. for a sum therein stated to be the purchase-money, & possession of the goods was delivered to deft. Afterwards deft. sold the goods as his own, whereupon pltf. brought trover:—Held: no property in the goods passed to deft.; & pltf. was not precluded from showing that no payment was in fact made & that the transaction was not a real, but a pretended sale.

Where goods are professed to be transferred by deed, the deed actually transfers the property; & the moment the deed is executed, by law the property ceases to be the property of the person who has executed the deed, & becomes the property of the person in whose favour it has been executed (POLLOCK, C.B.).

After several deliveries had taken place, one of the firm of B. & co. called at the office of A. & co., & obtained from A. an advance of £800 "on account of the last cargo of timber," which he represented to be, & which then was, at the wharf of B. & co., & a portion of which had already been sawn into sleepers:—Held: this was such a specific appropriation of the timber & sleepers to A. & co., who had possessed themselves of them, as to entitle them to retain them as against the assignees of B. & co., who had become bkpt. after the advance.—LANGTON v. 1038. — Intention against passing.]—M., a planter residing in Jamaica, being the owner of sugars, the produce of his estate there, & indebted to deft., who resided in London, for more than their value, shipped them at Jamaica, on Apr. 4, on board a ship belonging to deft., which was in the habit of carrying supplies to Jamaica, to the estates of M. & others, & taking back consignments from M. & others, & was then employed in that course. On Apr. 4, the captain signed, & handed to M. a bill of lading, by which the sugars were to be delivered to deft. at London, he paying freight. On Apr. 6, M. made an indorsement on the bill that the sugars were to be delivered to deft. only on condition of his giving security for certain payments, but otherwise to pltf.'s agent. On the same day M. indorsed the bill of lading & delivered it to pltf., to whom he was indebted in more than the value of the sugars ; & the bill was never in deft.'s hands. During Feb. & Mar. M. had written letters to deft., advising that the ship would sail with the sugars in question & others, directing him to insure the cargo, & advising him of bills drawn in favour of B. on account of the estates producing the sugars in question. On Apr. 4, M. had written to pltf. desiring him to secure himself for his balance with the produce of those estates. The sugars arrived in London, & deft. paid the bills drawn in favour of B., but did not comply with the condition of the indorsement made on Apr. 6 :—Held : pltf. was entitled to the sugars, for that (a) M. had not parted with the property by delivering it on board deft.'s ship so employed as above stated ; (b) nor by accepting the bill of lading, as drawn on Apr. 4, from the captain ; M. being entitled to change the bill of lading, as drawn on Apr. 4, from the captain ; M. being entitled to change the destination of the sugars till he had delivered them or the bill ; (c) & that the letters to deft. did not show an intention to consign the specific property to him ; (d) that for these reasons, strengthened by the proof of intention in M.'s letter of Apr. 4, the indorsement to pltf. passed the property.—*MITCHEL v. 1040. —]—The junior partner in a London firm of diamond merchants, when the firm was in financial embarrassment, made an oral offer to pltf.s, who were diamond merchants abroad, to buy from them a certain parcel of diamonds at 180 francs per carat & to give a six months' bill. The offer was accepted on behalf of pltf.s. & the diamonds were sent by post to the purchaser's firm together with the bill for acceptance & an invoice marked "Settled by acceptance." The bill was never accepted, the senior partner repudiated the transaction, & a month later the junior partner committed suicide. Afterwards the senior partner executed a deed of assignment, & eventually a trustee in bkpcy. was appointed. Pltf.s. then brought an action against the trustees for the return of the diamonds. The defence was that the property in them had passed to the firm & therefore to the trustee. It was admitted that all similar dealings in diamonds were carried through on the credit of acceptances. The jury found that it was the intention of the parties that the property should not pass to the London firm until they had accepted the bill by signing it :—Held : there was evidence on which the jury could properly so find, & pltf.s. were entitled to the return of the diamonds & were not limited to proving in the bkpcy.—*SAKS v. (2) In ordinary cases, the seller has the right of lien until payment ; & unless he do some act to show that he means to divest himself of the property, the right in the property is concurrent with the lien.

(3) The property remains in the seller so long as any act remains to be done by him to divest it.

(4) Where a contract was made for the sale of bark at a particular place, at so much per ton, to be paid for at a certain day, & before the goods had been weighed an accident happened to them :—Held : the risk lay upon the seller ; & although a partial delivery had taken place, that partial delivery could not alter the liability, because the seller had still the right of lien.—*SIMMONS v. Before the arrival of the ship B. became bkpt., & his assignees refused to purchase the ship when she arrived. Effect of mistake in parting with possession.—The London Dock co. by mistake delivered two hogsheads of sugar to a carrier, who produced two delivery notes authorising them to deliver two other hogsheads of sugar, the property of B. The carrier broke bulk, & was indicted for larceny:—Held: the property was well described as the property of the London Dock co., they having still a special Property in the Chattels, notwithstanding that they parted with the possession by mistake.

1048. Waiver of right to dispute transfer.—Pltfs. N. & co. engaged with defts., who were shipowners, for the shipment of a large quantity of oil to Montreal during the season, & it was arranged that defts. were to receive no goods on board unless a clean receipt were given. Pltf. A.

sold fifty barrels of oil to N. & co. & delivered them to defts. Defts. received the oil, but refused to give a clean receipt for it. Pltf. A. demanded redelivery, which defts. refused, as other cargo had been stowed on the top of it. N. & co. having agreed to pay A. for the oil in cash in exchange for mate's receipt, refused to pay for the fifty barrels. A. brought an action against defts. for conversion, & afterwards amended the writ by adding N. & co. The consignees at Montreal accepted the oil & paid N. & co. who thereupon paid A.:—Held: A. had waived the right of saying that the property in the goods had not passed to N. & Co., & no action lay for his loss of interest through the delay in payment to him of the price of the goods.—*ARMSTRONG v. a. Sale by sample—Property passes acceptance.—Where unascertained on goods are sold under a contract that they shall be equal to sample, the property does not pass until the purchaser has actually accepted them.

Sect. 1.—Transfer of property from seller to buyer:
Sub-sect. 3, A. & B. (a).]

By a sold note dated Sept. 12, 1916, the sellers sold to the buyers 10 bales of Hessian bags, all conditions according to the "spot" which meant that the goods were available & ready for delivery—contract form of a certain trade assocn., terms net cash against delivery order on or before Sept. 19, 1916, delivery prompt, rent & insurance free to Sept. 19, 1916. On the same day, but after the sold note was given, the sellers sent to the buyers an invoice for the goods which gave the specific marks & numbers of the bales as 10.30 ex 0762/6806, & stated that the sale was "ex wharf, London." On Sept. 19, no cheque for payment having been received, the sellers wrote to the buyers cancelling the contract. On Sept. 20 the buyers tendered the price, which was refused. On a reference to arbn., it was decided as a fact, so far as it was a question of fact & not of law, that it was a recognised custom in the trade that if the sellers tendered to the buyer an invoice giving specific marks & numbers of the goods, such goods were specifically appropriated to the contract, & were ready for delivery against payment, that if the price was tendered within a reasonable time before notice of resale, the buyer was entitled to delivery of the goods against payment, & that, no such notice having been given, the contract stood:—Held: (1) time was of the essence of the contract to make payment & take delivery, the buyers were in default, & that the sellers were entitled to cancel the contract; (2) in any event, the buyers were not entitled to specific performance of the contract, as the goods were not "ascertained" within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 52.—*THAMES SACK & BAG CO., LTD. v. See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 16.

1054. General rule—Property passes on happening of event.—The builder's agreement was . . . a mere legal contract that, upon the happening of a particular event, the property in law should pass in certain chattels which that event itself would identify without the necessity of any further act on the part of anybody, & which could not be identified before (BOWEN, L.J.).—*REEVES v. the contractor & engineer, in respect of the value of the works executed & materials delivered, until a certain sum had been certified, & that then, the amounts certified for should be paid by the co. to the contractor within seven days after presentation of the certificates:—Held: the property in unused materials delivered by the contractor for the purpose of the construction of the railway, which had been comprised in certificates of the engineer, but had not been paid for the co. passed to the co. on the making of the certificates comprising them; & an injunction was granted to restrain the contractor from removing such materials from the land of the co.—*BANBURY & CHELTENHAM DIRECT RY. 1056. Event must identify goods.—Defts. bought from one M. all the ore of a certain mine in Spain, to be shipped by M. at Cartagena on ships to be chartered by defts. or by him. The ore was to be paid for by bills against bills of lading, or by longer bills on the execution of a charterparty, & on a certificate that there was enough ore in stock to load the vessel chartered. On being so paid for, the ore was to be the property of defts. Several vessels had been loaded, & others chartered, & several payments made up to Mar. 1872, when the T., one of the chartered ships, arrived at Cartagena. The payments which had been made at that time exceeded in amount the price of all the ore shipped & to be shipped in all the vessels chartered & not loaded, so that had M. shipped ore on the T. he would have been entitled to no payment in respect of it. He had ore which he could & ought to have shipped, taking bills of lading to the order of defts. Instead of doing this, before any ore was put on board the T., he telegraphed to defts. that he would not load the T. on their account, & though they telegraphed to him threatening him if he did not, he loaded the T., taking bills of lading, making the shipment to be by one S., & the cargo deliverable to S.'s order. No certificate in relation to this ore was ever given to defts. By the terms of the charter-party, the captain was to sign bills of lading as presented. S. was a fictitious person, & M., after indorsing the name of S. on the bills of lading & then his own, indorsed them for value to plffs.:—Held: plffs. as against defts., were entitled to the cargo.

It must be taken, I think, that by virtue of the payment, defts. had become entitled to a quantity of the ore in store, corresponding with the amount of the bills drawn against the charterer . . . but it cannot be doubted that this alone would not transfer the property in any particular part . . . & the question becomes whether by any subsequent act of appropriation the property in a particular part has passed (CLEASBY, B.).—*GABARRON v. The order was filed by C., in the way that orders accepted generally were filed by him in the usual course of his business without any indorsement being made on it of a partial acceptance only. Application was made the following day for the remaining fifteen sacks of flour, when C. replied that B. should have it as soon as he got any. A demand being afterwards made C. refused to deliver any more, saying that he had no flour of A.'s in his possession. On trover brought by B. against C.

The potatoes sold were "magnum potatoes" & "on an inch & a half sieve," i.e. magnum potatoes which would stand that test & clear such a sieve, that is, not pass through. Thus it was not a sale of all the potatoes grown on these farms, nor even of all "the magnum potatoes," but only such as cleared such a sieve, & who was to ascertain the potatoes? Clearly the seller, that is he was to ascertain what were the potatoes to be sold, & the property was not to pass until they were so ascertained. 1075. ———(1) Deft., a corn factor, residing at Bristol, in Dec. 1846, wrote to L., at Plymouth, requesting samples of barley, & to make him an offer of a cargo. In the same month L. wrote to deft., & sent samples of barley, & offered to sell deft. from 400 to 500 quarters f.o.b. at Kingsbridge, or some neighbouring port, for a certain sum for cash, on handing the bill of lading, or by acceptance, etc., Deft. accepted the terms, subject to L.'s reply. L. acceded to deft.'s proposal, & requested deft. to give him instructions about the vessel, in order to get her correctly insured. L. sent deft. the charterparty, not under seal, of a vessel in which the barley was to be shipped, & which was made in L.'s name. In Jan. 1847, the vessel was loaded with the barley, & L. received from the master the bill of lading, by which the cargo was deliverable at Bristol to the order of L., or assigns, on payment of freight. Subsequently, L. called at deft.'s counting house in Bristol, & left the invoice & unindorsed bill of lading ; he afterwards called again, when a dispute arose as to the quality of the barley ; deft., after some further dispute, tendered the amount of the cargo in money to L., who refused to accept it, but took away the bill of lading, & indorsed it to pltf's. Deft., on the arrival of the vessel, claimed & obtained part of the cargo ; but pltf's, on producing the bills of lading, obtained what remained, & paid the freight. The jury found that deft. did not refuse to accept the barley from L. ; that the tender was unconditional ; & that he was not an agent entrusted with the bill of lading by deft. In an action of trover by pltf's. for the value of the barley so obtained by deft. :—Held : no property in the cargo passed to deft., either by the transaction at Bristol, or by the shipment of the cargo on board the vessel by L., & pltf's. were entitled to recover.

of corn, which he intends to offer to the party in performance of his contract; but he keeps it as his property in the meantime. Such being the state of matters, the property in that state arrives at Bristol, & there is nothing to show that there was any transaction which amounted to an agreement between the parties to alter that arrangement; therefore the property did not pass at all (ALDERSON, B.).

The property does not pass unless there is a subsequent appropriation of the goods. The word appropriation . . . may mean a selection on the part of the vendor, where he has the right to choose the article which he has to supply in performance of his contract; & the contract will show when the word is used in that sense. Or the word may mean, that both parties have agreed that a certain article shall be delivered in pursuance of the contract, & yet the property may not pass in either case. . . . "Appropriation" may also be used in another sense, viz. where both parties agree upon the specific article in which the property is to pass, & nothing remains to be done in order to pass it (PARKE, B.).

(2) It may be admitted, that if goods are ordered by a person, although they are to be selected by the vendor, & to be delivered to a common carrier to be sent to the person by whom they have been ordered, the moment the goods, which have been selected in pursuance of the contract, are delivered to the carrier, the carrier becomes the agent of the vendee & such a delivery amounts to a delivery to the vendee (PARKE, B.).—*WAIT v. Pltf. at the time had oil at a wharf, & in order to carry out his contract with deft., he gave an order to the wharfinger to transfer such oil to deft. The wharfinger accordingly made a transfer in his books of the oil to deft.'s name, & signed a notice to deft. of such transfer having been made, which notice pltf.'s clerk took to deft., together with the transfer order, requiring from deft. in return a cheque for the purchase-money. Deft. refused to give the cheque, but kept the transfer order, against the will of pltf., who never intended to part with any property in the oil or order until the cheque was given:—Held: as the sale was not of any specific oil, & as there had been no assent to the transfer of the oil in the wharfinger's books binding on all parties, no property passed to deft. & pltf. was entitled to maintain trover for the oil & transfer order.

The contract of sale contained a stipulation that the oil was "to be free delivered & paid for in fourteen days by cash, less £2 10s. per cent. discount." Semble: the seller had fourteen days to deliver the oil, & he was therefore entitled to call for payment at the time of delivery.

If that transfer order had been delivered to the buyer, & he had carried it to the wharfinger, & the latter had consented to hold the oil therein specified for him, or if, after the order had been left with the wharfinger by the seller's clerk, the wharfinger had communicated it to the buyer, & the latter had assented to it either tacitly or explicitly, that would have constituted a complete transfer, inasmuch as the transaction would amount to an arrangement between the three, the vendor, the wharfinger, & the vendee, that the oil should remain in the wharfinger's hands as agent of the vendee. It is impossible to say that the facts here show that any arrangement of that kind was come to (WILLIAMS, J.).—GODTS v. ROSE (1855), 17 C. B. 229; 25 L. J. C. P. 61; 26 L. T. O. S. 240; 1 Jur. N. On landing, the bales were sampled & numbered, & a warrant was handed by the co. to A. for 250 bales "numbered from 1 to 250," as having been entered for him:—Held: assuming this to have been an appropriation of the specific bales to A., there having been no assent by him to such appropriation, express or implied, no property passed to him.

Deft. took away with him, & afterwards paid for, the first 2 pockets, but the last 2 were to be forwarded to him at a future time. On his return to London, pltf. went to the warehouse & selected 2 out of 3 pockets which he had there, & directed the warehouse keeper to mark them "to wait the buyer's order," but no alteration was made in the warehouse keeper's books, & he continued to hold pltf. liable for the rent. Pltf. a few days afterwards sent deft. an invoice describing the numbers, the weight, & the prices of the 2 pockets delivered at the fair, & also of the 2 which had been set apart at the warehouse, & at the same time inclosed a draft for acceptance. Deft. sent back the draft unaccepted, & refused to receive the last 2 pockets. Defts. replied agreeing to do so, & adding, "You will, of course, attend to the insurance at your end":—Held: the twine had been appropriated by pltfs. to defts.—DONAGHY'S ROPE & TWINE CO., LTD. v. Pltf. did not execute the original contract, & defts. were not expressly parties to the contract of affreightment with the shipowner. The vessel arrived in Dublin on July 11, & the discharge of the cargo was completed on the afternoon of July 14, thirty-six hours after the expiration of the time stipulated for discharging. A bill of lading, incorporating the provisions of the charterparty, was prepared on July 12, signed by pltf. on July 13, & posted by the shippers on July 14, to defts., who duly received it on July 15, when the vessel had completely discharged her cargo, & had left the port of Dublin. In these circumstances pltf. sued defts. for demurrage:—Held: as soon as the coal had been put on board the vessel at Glasgow there was an unconditional appropriation under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 18, the property then passed to defts., & not under the bill of lading, & defts. were not bound by the terms of the bill of lading incorporating the charterparty, as the cargo had not been received or accepted by them thereunder.—*MCKELVIE v. 1086. — Delivery of component parts of uncompleted article.—Deft. co. contracted with C. to provide an electrical installation, including (inter alia), a storage battery, at her house for £1,363. Deft. co. then sub-contracted with pltf. for the supply of the battery to be erected by them on C.'s premises at the price of £286, including erection. In accordance with the terms of the sub-contract pltf. sent the materials for the battery by rail to a specified station, whence they were to be carted by deft. co. to C.'s premises & there erected by pltf. Deft. co. carted the goods, but pltf. did not proceed with the erection of the battery, which was ultimately completed by deft. co. who went into liquidation. In an action against C. to which the co. was added as deft., C., in pursuance of an order, made by the master upon a summons for directions, paid into ct. the sum of £269, part of the balance owing by her to deft. co., & upon that proceedings were stayed as against her:—Held: upon construction of the sub-contract, it was not a contract for the sale of a completed article, but of the component parts of the battery, with a supplemental contract that after delivery they should be erected on C.'s premises; the delivery of the parts was an unconditional appropriation to the contract of goods in a deliverable state with Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 18, r. 5, & the property therein passed to deft. co.—*PRITCHETT CO. v. 1087. — Delivery of parcel of cargo intended for one buyer to lighter of other buyer—Loss of parcel—Delivery documents showing intention to deliver to first buyer.—A cargo of oats was shipped in bulk, & 500 quarters were sold to pltf. & 500 quarters to defts., while the ship was on her voyage. Pltf. & defts. employed the same lighterman to take delivery of the goods from the ship, & the lighterman sent one of his barges, intending it to take delivery on behalf of defts. of 500 quarters. By a misunderstanding the ship's clerk caused to be delivered to him 500 quarters which the clerk intended for pltf., & for whom he had prepared the requisite documents. Another barge afterwards, owing to a similar misunderstanding, took delivery of a second 500 quarters, which the lighterman intended to receive on behalf of pltf., but which the ship's clerk intended for defts. This latter lighter was damaged, & the oats were spoiled. In an action by pltf. for the wrongful detention of the oats conveyed to defts.' wharf:—Held: there had been an appropriation of these oats to pltf. under the contract of sale within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), ss. 16, & 18; the property therein had passed to him; & he was entitled to damages for their detention by defts.—*DENNY v. 1088. — Appropriation by original seller—Resale by purchaser—Trade usage.—By a contract dated May 30, 1912, the Produce Brokers co. agreed to sell & deliver to the Olympia Oil & Cake co. 6,000 tons of Soya beans to be shipped from an Eastern port to Hull. In fulfilment of this contract the sellers on Feb. 4, 1913, declared & appropriated a cargo of beans shipped at Vladivostok on a ship called the Canterbury by the East Asiatic co. This cargo had on Feb. 4 been tendered to & accepted by the sellers under a contract in similar terms by which the East Asiatic co. had sold to them the same quantity of Soya beans. On Feb. 3 the Canterbury had in fact met with disaster near Vladivostok, & on Feb. 4 she sank with her cargo. The fact of the loss became known to the sellers on Feb. 4, in the interval between the receipt by them of the tender from the East Asiatic co. & the handing of that tender to the buyers. On an arbn. between the parties, it was found by the Board of Appeal of the Incorporated Oil Seed Assocn. that by the custom of the trade, in case of resales, buyers under this form of contract were bound to accept the original shipper's appropriation, if passed on without delay, provided that the original shipper's appropriation was valid & in order at the time of being made by the original shipper to his buyers; & that their sellers would be under no obligation to make any appropriation other than that of passing on a copy of original shipper's appropriation without delay, even though the appropriation at the time of being passed on might, apart from such custom, be invalid & not in order. It was further found that the appropriation in question by the sellers was made under a resale to which the custom applied, & that the appropriation of the original shippers, the East Asiatic co., was valid & in order. The arbitrators awarded that the buyers were bound to accept the sellers' appropriation, although at the time it was made the cargo was at the bottom of the sea. On motion by the buyers to set aside the award the Div. Ct. held that the custom was neither unreasonable nor inconsistent with the contract, & dismissed the motion:—Held: it was not inconsistent with the contract, & the award must consequently stand.—PRODUCE BROKERS CO., LTD. v. Sub-sect. 3, B. (b) ii., iii. & iv.]

The sellers shipped the wheat at Novorossisk, & within the seven days the sellers sent to the buyers a telegram & confirming letter, which the sellers alleged to be a notice of appropriation, but neither document stated the date of the bill of lading. On the same day the sellers posted to the buyers a provisional invoice which gave the date of the bill of lading, but the provisional invoice was not received by the buyers until after the expiry of the seven days. The buyers contended that there had been no tender in conformity with the contract, & it was found by the appeal committee in an arbn. that there had been no good notice of appropriation in the telegram & confirming letter & that the provisional invoice was not intended as a notice of appropriation & that it was a recognised custom that notice of appropriation & provisional invoice should be separate documents, & that therefore the buyers were under no liability to the sellers:—Held: even if the provisional invoice constituted a notice of appropriation, yet, as it was not received by the buyers within the contract time, the sellers had not satisfied the contract, & as the custom was not unreasonable & was not inconsistent with the contract, the provisional invoice was not a notice of appropriation, & the award of the appeal committee must be upheld.—*COMPAGNIE CONTINENTALE D'IMPORTATION v. Whether it does so pass or not will in each instance depend on the intention of the parties as ascertained by the terms of the contract, their conduct, & the circumstances of the case (LORD ATKINSON).

1091. Validity of appropriation—Appropriation by sellers—After knowledge that goods lost in transit.]—In May, 1912, the P. co. sold to the O. co. 6,000 tons of Soya beans to be shipped from an oriental port during Dec. 1912, &/or Jan. 1913, by steamer to Hull. Clause 3 of the contract provided that "particulars of shipment . . . to be declared by original sellers not later than forty days from the date of last bill of lading. . . . In case of resales, copy or original appropriation shall be accepted by buyers and passed on without delay. . . ." Clause 10 provided that "this contract is to be void as regards any portion shipped that may not arrive by the ship or ships declared against this contract. . . ." In Sept. 1912, the P. co. purchased from the E. A. co. under a similar contract 6,000 tons of Soya beans for shipment in Dec. 1912, &/or Jan. 1913. On Feb. 4, 1913, the P. co. received a declaration & appropriation of a cargo of Soya beans for the Canterbury, which was stated to have sailed from Vladivostok on Jan. 31, & on the same date, Feb. 4, the P. co. declared & appropriated this shipment to their contract with the O. co. On Feb. 4, the Canterbury was wrecked & her cargo was totally lost, the loss being known in London about 3 p.m. on that day. The fact of the loss of the ship & cargo was not known to the E. A. co. at the time of their tender to the P. co., but the P. co. were aware of it at the time of making their tender to the O. co. The O. co. refused to accept the tender:—Held: the O. co. were not bound to accept the tender as the ship & cargo were to the knowledge of the P. co. lost at the time they purported to make the tender; & clause 10 did not come into operation in a case where there had been no valid declaration & appropriation as between the P. co. & the O. co.—Re OLYMPIA OIL & CAKE CO., LTD. & PRODUCE BROKERS CO., LTD., [1915] 1 K. 1092. ————.]—By a contract dated Dec. 11, 1917, defts. sold goods to pltf. to be shipped during Dec. to Feb. 1918, per steamer from the East to Liverpool, where they were to be delivered, the name of the vessel, marks & full particulars to be declared to the buyer in writing with due despatch. The contract also provided: "(a) Should the vessel or vessels which may apply to this contract be lost before declaration this contract to be cancelled so far as regards such lost vessel or vessels on the production of the bill or bills of lading or other satisfactory proof of shipment by sellers so soon as fairly practicable after the loss is ascertained. (b) . . . Should the vessel or vessels & the goods or any portion thereof be lost, the contract to be cancelled for the whole or any such portion, but should the vessel or vessels be lost & the goods or any portion thereof be transhipped to some other vessel or vessels & arrive on account of the original importer, this contract to stand good for the whole or such portion." On Mar. 27, 1918, defts. declared in fulfilment of the contract goods shipped on a named steamer which sailed from Singapore on Jan. 21, 1918, but was lost at sea by enemy action about Feb. 26, 1918. At the time of the declaration both pltf. & defts. knew that the ship & cargo had been lost. In an action for damages for failure to deliver pltf. contended that the declaration having been made after defts. knew of the loss of the vessel, was invalid:—Held: the declaration was made with due despatch, & was good although made with knowledge of the loss, & that the contract was consequently cancelled.—*CLARK v. K. becoming embarrassed, took the barley out of the sacks, & mixed it with the bulk, without the privity of pltf. K. was soon after adjudicated a bkpt. In many cases of contract to supply a quantity of goods to be delivered within a fixed period, the whole quantity cannot, from the very nature of the case, be delivered at one time, & it must frequently happen, as in contracts for supplies of provision for the army or navy, or any large establishments, that the quantities first delivered are appropriated & actually consumed by the persons to whom they are delivered before the expiration of the period within which the whole contract is to be performed. 1114. ——— Delivery order to warehouseman.—By the usage of Liverpool the vendor of goods was to pay warehouse rent for two months after the sale, if the goods remained there so long:—Held: where the vendor of such goods had, within the two months, given the usual order for delivery to the purchaser, the property in the goods from that time vested in the latter, & he became responsible for all accidents which might happen to them, & the circumstance of the goods having within that time been distrained for warehouse rent, was an accident which must fall on the vendee, & such rent having been paid by the vendor's agent, in order to redeem the goods, the latter could not recover the same from the vendor as money paid to his use.—GREAVES v. HEPKE (1818), 2 B. & Ald. 131; 106 E. R. 315.

1115. ——— Buyer's servant.—Where a contract was made between A. & B., whereby A., having a quantity of apples, agreed to sell his cyder to B. at a certain price per hogshead, to be delivered at T. at a future time, & to lend such pipes as he had for the use of the cyder, to be manufactured on his, A.'s premises, & to be paid for before it was removed, & A., in pursuance, delivered a quantity of juice expressed from the apples to a servant hired by B. to manufacture the cyder on A.'s premises, & before the cyder was completely manufactured, it was seized by the excise-officers because the place where it was deposited had not been entered, & was condemned in the Exchequer as B.'s property, together with the casks, & in assumpsit for goods sold & delivered, brought by A. against B., it appeared that the word cyder, at the place where the contract was made, meant the juice of the apples as soon as it was expressed:—Held: the contract must be construed to have been for the sale of cyder in that sense of the word, & the property passed to B. as soon as the apple juice was delivered to his servant.—STUDDY v. SANDERS (1826), 5 B. & C. 628; 8 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 403; 4 L. J. O. S. K. B. 290; 108 E. R. 234.

1117. ——— Master of canal boat.—T., a corn merchant at Longford, who had been in the habit of consigning cargoes of corn to pltf.s, as his factors for sale at Liverpool, & obtaining from them acceptances on the faith of such consignments, on Jan. 31, obtained from the masters of two canal boats, No. 604 & No. 54, receipts signed by them for full cargoes of oats therein stated to be shipped on board the boats, deliverable to the agent of T. in Dublin, in care for & to be shipped to pltf.s at Liverpool. At that time boat 604 was loaded, but no oats were then actually shipped on board boat 54. On Feb. 2, T. inclosed these receipts to pltf.s, & drew a bill on them against the value of the cargoes, which pltf.s accepted on Feb. 7, & paid when due. On Feb. 6, W., an agent of deft., who was T.'s factor for sale in London, arrived at Longford & pressed T. for security for previous advances. T., on that day, gave W. an order on T.'s agent in Dublin, to deliver to W. the cargoes of boats 604 & 54, on their arrival there. Boat 604 had then sailed from Longford, but boat 54 was only partially loaded. The loading was completed on Feb. 9, & T. then transmitted to W. in Dublin a receipt signed by the master of the boat, in the same form as those sent to pltf.s, making the cargo deliverable to W. W. received this on Feb. 10. On their arrival in Dublin, W. took possession of both cargoes for deft.:—Held: the property in the cargo of boat 604 vested in pltf.s, on their acceptance of the bill, & they were entitled to maintain trover for it; but they could not maintain trover for the cargo of boat 54, since none of it was on board, or otherwise specifically appropriated to pltf.s, when the receipt for that boat was given by the master. Qu.: whether a document, similar in form to a bill of lading, but given by the master of a boat navigating an inland canal, has the effect of such an instrument in transferring the property in the goods.—BRYANS v.

1120. — Goods addressed to wrong consignee.—Pltf., the owner of goods in bulk, sold a portion of them to F. The goods were ascertained & forwarded by defts.' line, but addressed in error to "the order of Jeeves." Jeeves refused to take the goods, Jarvis applied to defts. for goods similar in quantity & kind to pltf.'s goods & consigned by a person of a like surname. Defts. without inquiry delivered the goods to Jarvis. The consignment note signed by pltf.'s agent relieved defts. from liability "except upon proof that such loss, detention, or injury arose from wilful misconduct." In an action for the price of the goods:—Held: the property in the goods had not passed from pltf., & he was the proper person to bring the action; the condition in the consignment note extended to defts. as involuntary bailees, under the circumstances; & the delivery of the goods to Jarvis amounted to "wilful misconduct."—HOARE v. 1121. — Foreign parcel post office.—A trader in England ordered goods from a foreign manufacturer in Switzerland to be sent by post to England. The manufacturer addressed the goods to the trader in England & delivered them to the Swiss Post Office, by whom they were forwarded to England. The goods were manufactured according to an invention protected by an English patent:—Held: since the contract of sale was completed by delivery to the Post Office in Switzerland, & since the Post Office was the agent of the buyer & not of the vendor, the vendor had not made, used, exercised or vended the invention within the ambit of the patent, & the patentee had no right of action against the vendor for an infringement of the patent.—BADISCHE ANILIN UND SODA FABRIK v. 1125. ——A., resident at Naples, sent an order to M. & co., hardwarer at Birmingham, "to dispatch to him certain goods on insurance being effected. Terms, three months' credit from the time of arrival." M. & co. having marked the package with A.'s initials, dispatched the goods by the canal to Liverpool, & effected an insurance, declaring the interest to be in A. At Liverpool, the goods were delivered by the agent of M. & co. to the owner of a vessel bound to Naples, through whose negligence they were damaged:—Held: the property in the goods vested in A. as soon as they were dispatched from Birmingham, & the terms of the order did not make the arrival of the goods at Naples a condition precedent to A.'s liability to pay for them, & he might therefore maintain an action for the injury done to the goods through the negligence of the ship owner.

It was next contended that Fragano was not liable to the vendor unless the goods arrived, but the order for insurance is decisive as to that. The policy was to protect Fragano & shows that he considered he should be the sufferer if the goods were lost on the voyage (HOLROYD, J.).—FRAGANO v. LONG (1825), 4 B. & C. 219; 6 Dow. & Ry. K. 1128. ———.]—In Jan. 1858, C. agreed to sell to pltf. all the crop of oil of peppermint grown on his farm in that year at 21s. per pound. In Sept. C. wrote to pltf. for bottles to put the oil in. Pltf. sent the bottles, & C. having weighed the oil put it in pltf.'s bottles, labelled them with the weight, & made out invoices. Before, however, he had completed the filling of the bottles he sold & delivered several of them to deft. Pltf. had for many years past bought of C. his crop of oil of peppermint, & it was usual for C., when the bottles were filled, to deliver them to a carrier to take to a railway station. In detinue, by pltf. against deft. for the bottles of oil of peppermint delivered to him:—Held: the putting the oil in pltf.'s bottles was an act of appropriation which vested the property in pltf.—*LANGTON v. “sold” within Mercantile Law Amendment Act (Scotland), 1856 (c. 60), s. 1, until the purchaser has acquired a jus ad rem enforceable in respect of such goods. The bill was not drawn specifically for the price of these goods, & although it was accepted in the confidence that the order given for the goods would be executed, yet so long as that order was not executed but only in course of execution, no property in the goods passed to defts. Resps., a Glasgow firm of shipbuilders, agreed to build two ships for an Italian firm, according to certain specifications & under the superintendence of an agent appointed by the Italian firm, for a certain amount payable by instalments at specified stages of construction; but delivery of the ships was not to be considered to be completed till they had passed trials at Greenock & off the Italian coast. Before the ships were fully constructed, but after several instalments had been paid, applts., an English firm of shipbuilders, arrested the ships in Scotland for a debt alleged to be due to them by the Italian co., but on a petition to the First Division of the Ct. of Session the arrestments were recalled:—Held: no intention was shown in the contract to make delivery of or to pass the property in the ships before they were completed, & the arrestments were properly recalled.—SIR JAMES LAING & SONS, LTD. v. Pltf. being afterwards dissatisfied, ordered the chariot to be sold, & while it was, according to the custom of the trade, standing in the builder's warehouse for that purpose, the front seat not having been added, the builder became bkpt., & his assignee seized the chariot; more than three months afterwards pltf. commenced his action:—Held: (1) pltf. had sufficient property to maintain trover; (2) the chariot did not pass to the assignee as being in the order a disposition of bkpt. with the consent of the owner.—*CARRUTHERS v. B. Property in Uncompleted Article.

(a) In General.

1156. Intention of parties.]—Although, in general, when any chattel, as a ship or other vessel, is ordered to be made, the property does not vest in the employer or proposed purchaser until it is completed, appropriated, & accepted, there may be a contract for its purchase when it is partly made, which may not only be a contract for it in its present & incomplete, but also in its future & finished condition; & if it provide, in such case, for its completion, while it is a sale of the incomplete chattel, the property in the chattel will vest in the purchaser in its present state; the materials added or appropriated to it will also vest in him; & when it is completed, the entire property will be in him.

If there be a bill of sale of a vessel in an unfinished state, & all materials, etc., as a security for past & further advances, with a contract on the part of the builder to complete it for the purchaser,

& on the part of the latter to pay the remainder of the price by stipulated instalments, the property passes to the purchaser in its present state, & upon completion, the whole vests in him.

Pltfs., in 1848, took an assignment to them of a vessel, then in an unfinished state, from the builder, as a security for past & future advances upon it, he contracting to complete it by May 1, 1852, & they to pay a certain sum by instalments at successive stages of its progress; & the assignment included all materials, etc., then provided or to be provided for the vessel. The builder had it registered in their names as owners. On Mar. 29, 1849, the builder assigned it to defts., still incomplete, cancelled the registration, & had it registered in their names as owners. They completed & launched it, & loaded it to this country, where it was demanded by pltfs., & refused. In an action of trover, pleas, not guilty, & not possessed:—Held: the property passed to pltfs. by the bill of sale & the contract, & was theirs at the time of the assignment to defts.—*REID v. 1158. When intention presumed—Payment by instalments—At particular stages of construction.]

—A., a shipbuilder, contracted with B. to build a ship for him, & to complete her in Apr. 1819. The latter was to pay for her by four instalments; the first when the keel was laid, the second when at the light plank, & the third & fourth when the ship was launched. Before June 25, 1819, the ship was measured with the builder's privity, to the intent that B. might get her registered in his name. On June 25, the shipbuilder signed the usual certificate of her building; & on June 26, the ship was registered in B.'s name; & on the same day the third instalment was paid. On June 30, A. committed an act of bkpcy., upon which a commission afterwards issued. On July 2, the ship not being then completed, or launched, deft., & a crew hired by him, took possession of her, & a rudder & cordage, the former of which was made by the shipbuilder, & the latter bought by him, for the express purpose of completing the ship:—

Held: (1) the legal effect of the shipbuilder's having signed the certificate to enable B. to have the ship registered in his name, was to vest the general property in the ship in B. from the time the registry was completed; (2) as the rudder & cordage were made & bought by the shipbuilder specifically for the ship, they were to be considered as parts of the ship, & the property in them also vested in B.; (3) although the general property in the ship was vested in B., yet as A. had not parted with the possession, & as he would have had a lien upon the ship for the amount of the fourth instalment, if he had completed it; the taking possession of the ship by B. without tendering the amount of the fourth instalment, or so much thereof as was due, provided any thing was due, was wrongful.—*WOODS v. She was to be constructed under the inspection of the purchaser's surveyor, to whose approval the quality of the material used & the workmanship were to be subject. Clause 6 provided that "from & after payment by the purchasers to the builders of the first instalment on account of the purchase price the vessel & all materials & things appropriated for her should thenceforth, subject to the lien of the builders for unpaid purchase-money including extras, become & remain the absolute property of the purchasers."

After the first two instalments of the purchase-money had been paid & the vessel had been partly constructed, a receiver was appointed in an action commenced by debenture holders of the shipbuilding co. for enforcing their security. Upon a summons in that action to determine the respective rights of pltf.s. & the purchasers:—Held: the property in the uncompleted vessel had passed to the purchasers, & certain worked material lying in the yard ready to be incorporated into the hull of the vessel & approved by the purchasers' surveyor, had not been "appropriated for her" within the meaning of clause 6 so as to become the property of the purchasers.—*Re BLYTH SHIPBUILDING & DRY DOCKS CO., FORSTER v. By reference to these terms it appeared that the price was to be £16,000, payable by instalments, the first instalment to be £1,000 payable immediately. The second, third & fourth, of £1,000 each, to be payable at the end of two, three & four months respectively from the date of the order; the remaining £12,000 to be payable by instalments of £3,000 each, the first £3,000 at the end of six months, provided the vessel was plated & decks laid; the second £3,000 at the end of eight months, provided the vessel was ready for trial; the third £3,000 at the end of eleven months, provided the vessel was according to contract & perfectly completed; the last instalment of £3,000 at the end of thirteen months; the vessel to be built under the superintendence of H., appointed for that purpose by pltf., & according to his specifications. The building commenced under the superintendence of H. Pltf. advanced money to J. in anticipation of the instalments. In the tenth month J. became bkpt.; the vessel was at that time unfinished in J.'s yard; & engines & parts of the framework of the vessel, adapted for the unfinished ship, but not yet fixed into her framework, were there also. Pltf. claimed the unfinished vessel & these engines & parts of the framework. The assignees of J. kept them as part of the estate of J. The amount paid in advance by pltf. exceeded the value of this property. In an action against the assignees, a case was stated for the opinion of this Ct., giving power to draw inferences of fact, & setting forth the above facts, & also that the unfinished ship was known at J.'s yard as pltf.'s ship, & that H. had, with J.'s consent, before the bkpcy., stamped pltf.'s name on the keel of the vessel, for the express purpose of indicating that she was the property of pltf. The questions were, whether the property belonged to pltf. or the assignees. The Ct. of Q. B. decided that pltf. was entitled to recover in respect both of the ship & of the loose engines & materials. On error to the Ct. of Exch. Ch., that Ct. concurred with the Ct. of Q. B. as to the ship, but held that pltf. was not entitled to recover in respect of the loose engines & materials.—WOOD v. BELL (1856), 6 E. & B. 355; 25 L. J. Q. B. 321; 2 Jur. N. S. 664; 4 W. Pltf. proved payment for his share by bills before the bkpcy. of J. L. The T. C. co. signed the agreement for one-fourth, of which co. expressly agreed between the said parties, their exors., etc., that, in case A. should fail to complete the said ship according to the covenants & stipulations hereinbefore contained to be performed on his part, then it shall be lawful for B. to enter upon & take possession of the said ship or vessel, which from & after the payment of the first instalment shall be & be deemed & continue to be as soon as the said ship or vessel shall be commenced, in every respect & for every purpose the property of B., & to cause the works hereby agreed to be done to be completed by any person whom he shall see fit to employ therein, using such of the materials of A. as shall be applicable to the purpose," etc., A. to repay to B. so much as he should expend thereon in excess of the contract price. A. having failed to complete the ship by the stipulated time, B. took possession of her, & after an act of bkpcy. committed by A., proceeded to finish her, using therein certain materials which were in the yard, & were suitable but had not been specifically appropriated by A. to the ship. Some of these materials had been selected by B. before A.'s bkpcy., & some were placed within the carcase of the ship, the remainder in a shed alongside, but none of them had actually been used by B. before A.'s bkpcy. :—Held: the assignees were entitled to recover against B. the whole value of these materials.—*BAKER v. B. was let into possession of the greenhouse & its contents, but, owing to a difficulty in obtaining the lessor's consent, no assignment of the lease was made to him:—Held: the contract was an entire one for the assignment of the lease & the sale of the greenhouse, & until the lease was assigned B. could not be sued by A. for the price of the greenhouse.—*SLEDDON v. He was afterwards let into possession of the fixtures, & the crops were valued to him; but the lease was never assigned:—Held: indebitatus assumpsit would not lie for the price of the fixtures & crops, & pltf.'s only remedy was by a special action on the agreement.—*NEAL v. C. To be Put into Deliverable State.

1206. General rule.]—The principles applicable to the sale of part of a ship are equally applicable to the sale of part of any corpus manufactum in course of construction. It is competent for parties to agree for a valuable consideration that a specific article shall be sold & become the property of the purchaser as soon as it has reached a certain stage; but it is a question of construction in each case at what stage the property shall pass; & a question of fact whether that stage has been reached. On the other hand, materials provided by the builders as portions of the fabrics, whether wholly or partially finished, cannot be regarded as appropriated to the contract, or as "sold," unless they have been "affixed," or in a reasonable sense made part of the corpus.

Where it appears to be the intention, or in other words the agreement, of the parties to a contract for building a ship, that at a particular stage of its construction, the vessel, so far as then finished, shall be appropriated to the contract of sale, the property of the vessel as soon as it has reached that stage of completion will pass to the purchaser, & subsequent additions made to the chattel thus vested in the purchaser will, accessione, become his property. It also appears to me . . . that such an intention or agreement ought . . . to be inferred from a provision in the contract to the effect that an instalment of the price shall be paid at a particular stage, coupled with the fact that the instalment has been duly paid, & that until the vessel reached that stage the execution of the work was regularly inspected by the purchaser, or some one on his behalf . . . in order to pass the property as sold, there must always be facts proved or admitted sufficient to warrant the inference that the purchaser has agreed to accept the corpus so far as completed as in part implement of the contract of sale (LORD WATSON).

A contract for a valuable consideration by which it is agreed that the property in a specific ascertained article shall pass from one to another is effectual according to the law of England to change the property. It may be that the party who has sold the article is entitled to retain possession till the price is paid if that was by the contract to precede delivery, but still the property is changed (LORD BLACKBURN).

In general, if there are things remaining to be done by the seller to the article before it is in the state in which it is to be finally delivered to the purchaser, the contract will not be construed to be one to pass the property till those things are done (LORD BLACKBURN).—SEATH v. MOORE (1886), 11 App. Cas. 350; 55 L. J. P. C. 54; 54 L. T. 690; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 586, II. L.

1207. Whether passing of property suspended—Intention of parties.]—It depends on the intention of the parties whether the property in goods, to which something remains to be done before they are ready to be delivered, passes to a buyer at the time of the sale or on the completion of the goods. A., a brickmaker, who was in embarrassed circumstances, sold to B., to whom he was largely indebted, a large quantity of bricks. B. sent an agent to the brickfield with an order for the delivery of the bricks, & A.'s foreman told him he was ready to commence delivering them if a man who was in possession under a distress put in by the landlord was paid out, & he pointed out three clamps, one consisting of finished bricks, a second of bricks still burning, & a third of bricks moulded but not burnt, as those from which he should make the delivery. A. having become bkpt. the landlord sold some of the bricks, & B. sold the remainder to C., who removed them. In an action of trover by the assignees of A. against C. for the bricks:—Held: the conduct of A.'s foreman was a sufficient appropriation of the bricks, & the property in the whole of them, though unfinished, passed to B. at the time, such having been apparently the intention of the parties.—*YOUNG v. Before it could be delivered on rail it had to be detached & dismantled. The sellers detached it, but in loading it on a truck they damaged it by accident, so that the buyers refused to accept it. In an action by the sellers for goods bargained & sold:—Held: the property in the engine had not passed to defendants on the ground that the circumstances showed an intention that the property should not pass until the engine was placed in safety on rail in London.—*UNDERWOOD, LTD. v. at whose risk they continued.—RUGG v. MINETT (1809), 11 East, 210; 103 E. R. 985.

1221. Meaning of "other act or thing"—Sale of timber at "per cube foot"—Length & girth of timber taken—Total cubic contents not calculated.]—Where pltf. sold timber felled on land occupied by A., to B. at per cube foot, & the length & girth of the timber was taken, but the total cubic contents of all the trees were not calculated, & B. fetched away part of the trees & marked the remainder:—Held: (1) the delivery was complete, & nothing remained to be done on the part of the vendor; (2) the timber being on the land of A., the vendor had no right of lien upon that which remained for the price of the whole.—TANSLEY v. TURNER (1835), 2 Bing. N. C. 151; 1 Hodg. 267; 2 Scott, 238; 4 L. J. C. P. 272; 132 E. R. 60.

1222. — Sale of whole flock of sheep at so much per head—Flock not counted.]—... Suppose the owner of a flock of sheep were to offer to sell, & a purchaser agreed to buy, the whole flock at so much a head, the owner leaving it to his bailiff to count the sheep & ascertain the exact number of the flock... the property would have passed to the purchaser (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).—R. v. TIDESWELL, [1905] 2 K. B. 273; 74 L. J. K. B. 725; 93 L. T. 111; 69 J. P. 318; 21 T. L. R. 531; 21 Cox, C. C. 10, C. C. R.

1223. Act remaining to be done must be done by seller—Not by buyer with seller's authority.]—The rule "that where anything remains to be done to goods for the purpose of ascertaining the price, as by weighing, measuring, or testing the goods, where the price is to depend on the quantity or quality of the goods, the performance of these things shall be a condition precedent to the transfer of the property, although the individual goods be ascertained, & they are in the state in which they ought to be accepted," is not to be understood to include cases where all that remains to be done is to be done by the buyer with full authority from the seller, but only cases where something remains to be done by the seller.

The intention of the parties is to be looked at in every case, & the above rule does not apply where they have sufficiently shown whether they intended the property to pass or not.

Therefore, where A. agreed to sell & B. to buy a quantity of fire clay, at a certain price per ton, then stacked in a heap adjoining a pit belonging to A., & B. was to load the clay in his own carts, & weigh each load at a certain weighing-machine which his carts would pass on their way from A.'s pit to B.'s place of deposit, & B. having only carted away & paid for a portion of the clay, refused to take the remainder, in an action brought by A. to recover the price of the remainder of the heap not removed, the jury having found that the contract between the parties was for the sale of the whole heap:—Held: on this finding it was to be presumed to have been the intention of the parties that the property in the whole heap should pass, notwithstanding something remained to be done by the buyer, namely, the weighing of the clay by B., & A., the seller, was therefore entitled to recover the contract price of the whole heap.—TURLEY v. BATES (1863), 2 H. & C. 200; 3 New Rep. 478; 10 L. T. 35; 10 Jur. N. S. 368; 12 W. R. 438; 159 E. R. 83; sub nom. FURLEY v. BATES, 33 L. J. Ex. 43.

1224. Whether passing of property suspended—Omission to weigh—Weighing necessary to ascertain price.]—Under a contract of sale, whereby the vendee agreed to purchase all the starch of the vendor, then lying at the warehouse of a third person, at so much per cwt. by bill at two months, which starch was in papers, but the exact weight not then ascertained, but was to be ascertained afterwards; & fourteen days were to be allowed for the delivery; & the vendor gave a note to the vendee, addressed to the warehouse keeper, directing him to weigh & deliver to the vendee all his starch:—Held: under this contract the absolute property in the goods did not vest in the vendee before the weighing, which was to precede the delivery, & to ascertain the price, & that part of the starch having been weighed & delivered to the vendee by his direction, the vendor might, notwithstanding such part delivery, upon the bkpcy. of the vendee, retain the remainder, which still continued unweighed in the warehouse in the name & at the expense of the vendor.—HANSON v.

Measurement necessary to ascertain price.]—H. & co., of Montreal, entered into a written contract with L. & co., for the sale of a quantity of red pine timber, then lying above the Rapids, Ottawa River, stated to consist of 1,391 pieces, measuring 50,000 feet, more or less, to be deliverable at a certain boom at Quebec, on or before June 15, then next, & to be paid for by the purchasers' promissory notes of ninety days from that date, at the rate of 9½d. per foot, measured off: if the quantity turned out more than above stated, the surplus was to be paid for by the purchasers at 9½d. per foot, on delivery; & if it fell short, the difference was to be refunded by the sellers. The price of the 50,000 feet at the agreed rate, was paid by L. & co., according to the terms of the contract. The timber was not delivered on the day prescribed in the contract of sale, & when it arrived at Quebec, & before it was measured & delivered, the raft was broken up by a storm, whereby the greater part of the timber was dispersed & lost. L. & co., after the storm, collected such of the timber as could be saved, paid salvage for it, & applied the timber saved to their own use. In an action brought by L. & co. against H. & co., to recover the amount paid on their promissory notes, & for a breach of the contract, & for the difference between the contract price of 9½d. per foot & 10½d. per foot, the market price when the timber was to have been delivered:—Held: (1) the action was maintainable; (2) by the terms of the contract, until the measurement & delivery of the timber was made, the sale was not complete; & the transfer of the property was postponed until the measurement at the delivery; & the risk remained with the sellers; (3) the taking possession of a part of the timber by L. & co., after the day mentioned for the delivery thereof, in the contract, & not at the place, could not be considered as an acceptance of the whole; nor could it be considered as an admission, that the property in the timber passed to them before the storm which broke up the raft.—LOGAN v. Resp. entered into a contract in writing, for the sale to applt. of "a raft of timber now at Carouge, containing white & red pine, the quantity about 71,000 feet, to be delivered at Indian Cove Booms. Price for the whole 7½d. per foot. Payment, one-third cash, one-third sixty & ninety days after date." Shortly before the contract was signed, the raft had been measured by a public officer, called the Supervisor of Cullers, appointed under the Canadian Act, & the number of pieces of timber & the contents of each piece was set down in a specification thereof, which made a total of 71,455 feet, & this specification was delivered by resp. before the execution of the contract, to applt., & sent by him to the place where the raft was to be delivered. The raft was towed to the Indian Cove Booms, the appointed place for delivery, where it arrived in the afternoon, & notice of its arrival given to the servants of applt. who assisted in fastening the raft outside the Booms. This was done at the instance of applt.'s servant, as, from the state of the tide, the raft could not be placed inside the Booms. During the night a storm arose, by which the raft was carried away, broken to pieces, & dispersed, & a great portion of it lost. Applt. employed his servants in collecting as much of the wood as was saved, & that was put into applt.'s Booms:—Held: as resp. had ascertained the price of the raft by the measurement previously made, the specification of which was in applt.'s possession, & as the contract did not show that any future measurement of the raft was necessary, no act then remained to be done by resp. or by applt., & the raft, upon delivery at the Indian Cove Booms, had wholly passed to applt., & the loss incurred must be borne by him.—GILMOUR v. 1239. — ———.]—By a contract dated Sept. 10, 1920, the vendors agreed to sell & the purchasers to purchase all the merchantable timber growing on Aug. 20, 1920, in the forest of Lühde in the Republic of Latvia. Merchantable timber was therein defined to be "all trunks & branches of trees but not seedlings & young trees of less than 6 inches in diameter at a height of 4 feet from the ground." The timber was to be cut not more than 12 inches from the ground. The purchasers were to have fifteen years in which to cut the timber, & were to have the use of the vendors' saw mills, plant & huts, & the right to occupy every part of the forest. The price was £225,000 & the payments were to be made £15,000 on each of the three quarter days in the year, & for the fourth quarter a sum equal to £4 a standard of exportable timber cut in the forest during the year, less £45,000, the three previous instalments. The amount was to be certified by the authorised agents of the vendors & purchasers, the measurements having been agreed by them. The purchasers, unless prevented by some Act or enactment of the govt. of the country, or by force majeure, were to cut the timber at the rate of 15,000 standards per annum, & if they were so prevented, the fifteen years' period was to receive a corresponding extension of time. During the period of prevention the £15,000 instalments of price were to be reduced to £4 a standard of timber cut, carried away & sold or exported during the quarter. On Sept. 16 the Latvian Assembly passed an agrarian law, by which from Oct 1, 1920, the forest became the property of the Latvian State & the contract was annulled & all property & rights of vendors & purchasers in the forest were confiscated. For the last five & a half years, therefore, it had been illegal to perform the contract in the place where alone it could be performed & the obstacle to its performance was continuing. The purchasers had paid £30,000 to the vendors covering the first six months, & no question, therefore, arose that a default of payment of sums due had made the whole price payable:—Held: the contract was not a contract for the sale of specific goods in a deliverable state within the meaning of Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 18, r. 1; the goods in question were neither identified nor agreed upon; it was not every tree in the forest which passed, but only those complying with certain measurements not then made; the timber was not in a deliverable state until the purchasers had severed it & they could not under the definition in the rule be bound to take delivery of an undetermined part of a tree not yet identified, & accordingly the property in the timber had not passed under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 18, r. 1, & therefore the timber was not at the risk of the purchasers.—KURSELL v. TIMBER OPERATORS & CONTRACTORS, [1927] 1 K. B. 298; 95 L. J. K. B. 569; 135 L. T. 223; 42 T. L. R. 435, C. A.

I am of opinion that the instrument in question does not come within the clause in the Stamp Act that has been referred to, inasmuch as it passed no interest in the coals (PARKE, B.).—PHILLIPS v. 1243. ———.]—In a counterclaim by purchasers against a vendor it appeared that the vendor was the lessee of certain land part of which was composed of slag & cinders. On adjoining lands occupied by other persons were two disused cinder tips. The vendor had obtained from these persons licences to remove from the tips slag & cinders adhering to & forming part of their lands. He then agreed with the purchasers to sell to them all the slag on the demised premises & from the tips on the land adjoining, or so much thereof as the purchasers should desire to remove, & for that purpose to give the purchasers access to the demised premises & the cinder tips on the adjoining lands. After certain slag had been removed by the purchasers & sold at a profit the lessor & licensors of the vendor intervened & prevented the further removal of slag by the purchasers:—Held: the agreement was a contract to grant an interest in land, & as the vendor's failure to perform his contract was due solely to a defect in his title, the purchasers could not recover any damages for the loss of their bargain.—*MORGAN v. 1252. Position of party sending goods "on sale or return"—Irrevocable offer to sell.—Where a person who has received goods on sale or return pledges them he thereby does an act adopting the transaction within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 18, r. 4 (a), so that the property in the goods passes to him, & the original vendor cannot recover them from the person with whom they have been pledged.

In the absence of other terms the contract does not pass the property in the goods directly it is made. The person who has received them may return them, but the person who has entrusted them to another cannot demand their return, & his only remedy is to sue for their price or value. . .

There must be some act which shows that he [the purchaser] adopts the transaction; but any act which is consistent only with his being the purchaser is sufficient. The act done by W., who was a possible purchaser under this contract, was that he pawned the goods. . . He ought not to have done this unless he meant to treat himself as purchaser, & by so doing it he made himself purchaser (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—KIRKHAM v. ATTENBOROUGH, KIRKHAM v. GILL, [1897] 1 Q. 1256. — To reject goods if not approved.—Pltf., on Monday, Mar. 13, 1871, bought a horse of deft., warranted to have been hunted with the Bicester hounds. By a condition of the contract he was to be at liberty to return the horse if it did not answer its description up to the Wednesday evening following the sale. Previous to removing it from deft.'s premises he was told by the groom who had charge of it, but who was not in deft.'s employment, that it had not, nor had it, in fact, been hunted with the Bicester hounds. Pltf., nevertheless, took the horse away. Whilst it was in his possession, though not through any neglect or default on his part, it met with an accident which depreciated its value. He returned it before the Wednesday evening, & brought an action to recover the price he had paid for it:—Held: (1) pltf.'s conduct in removing the horse after the information given him by the groom did not deprive him of his right under the contract to return the horse; (2) his right to return it was unaffected by an accident having happened to it whilst it was in his possession, without neglect or default on his part.—HEAD v. took the diamonds on the same day as he received them & sold two parcels of them to defts. R. was subsequently prosecuted for the theft of these diamonds & other frauds. He pleaded guilty & was sentenced to penal servitude. On the day after R. received the diamonds pltf. asked him for the return of the diamonds or his money, & pltf. afterwards wrote to R. demanding the return of the diamonds:—Held: in the present case the property in the diamonds did not pass to defts., & pltf. was entitled to recover the diamonds or their value.—*KEMPLER v. 1260. Consignment to agent.—T. & co. were in the habit of sending goods for sale to N., who was a partner in the firm of N. & co., but received these goods on his private account. The course of dealing between T. & co. & N. was that the goods were accompanied by a price list. N. sold the goods on what terms he pleased, & each month sent to T. & co. an account of the goods he had sold, debiting himself with the prices named for them in the price list, & at the expiration of another month he paid the amount in cash, without any regard to the prices at which he had sold the goods, or the length of credit he had given. He paid the moneys which he had received from the sales into the general account of his firm, & made his payments to T. & co. through his firm, with whom he kept an account of moneys paid in & drawn out by him in respect of moneys unconnected with the partnership, which account included many items wholly unconnected with the goods of T. & co. N. & co. having executed a deed of arrangement with their creditors, T. & co. sought to prove against the joint estate for the amount standing to N.'s credit with his firm, on the ground that the same arose from moneys belonging to T. & co., & improperly placed by N. in the hands of his firm:—Held: such proof could not be admitted, for the course of dealing showed that although both parties might look upon the business as an agency, N. did not in fact sell the goods as agent of T. & co., but on his own account, upon the terms of his paying T. & co. for them at a fixed rate if he sold them, & the moneys he received for them were therefore his own moneys, which T. & co. had no right to follow.—*Re NEVILL, Ex p. 1261. —[—]—Goods were consigned by manufacturers under an agreement which, in the opinion of the ct., made the consignees, not purchasers of the goods, but agents of the manufacturers for their sale. The agents described themselves, upon a brass plate which was affixed at their place of business, & also upon the invoices which they used, as "merchants & manufacturers' agents." They acted as agents in the same way for several other manufacturers:—Held: the creditors of the agents had notice of the agency sufficient to exclude the operation of the reputed ownership clause, & the trustee in their liquidation was ordered to deliver up to the manufacturers goods of theirs which were in the possession of the agents, in specie, at the commencement of their liquidation, & to pay over to the manufacturers the proceeds of the sale of their goods which had been sold.—Re SMITH, Ex p. BRIGHT (1879), 10 Ch. D. 566; 48 L. J. Bcy. 81; 39 L. T. 649; 27 W. R. 385, C. A.

1262. —[—]—Pltf., a manufacturing jeweller, was accustomed to send articles of jewellery to F., a retail jeweller, for sale on the terms of a letter written by F. to pltf., in which F., after acknowledging that he had had from pltf. "on sale or return" the goods entered up to date in a book in the possession of pltf., & that he was liable to account to pltf. for such goods, continued: "The goods referred to in that book mentioned are your property, & to remain so until sold or paid for, they being only left with me for the purpose of sale or return, & not be kept as my own stock. The goods I receive from you are to be entered at cost price, & my remuneration for selling them is agreed at one half the profit":—Held: upon the construction of the letter as a whole F. was employed as agent for sale; that he was a mercantile agent within Factors Act, 1889 (c. 45), & as such had implied authority to pledge the goods entrusted to him, consequently pltf. could not recover goods pledged by F. with deft. without express authority from pltf.—*WEINER v. 1263. Sale "for cash only"—Or on debit by bailor.—Pltf., a manufacturing jeweller, delivered jewellery to H., a retail jeweller, on the terms of a memorandum headed "On approbation. On sale for cash only or return. Goods had on approbation or on sale or return remain the property of W. (pltf.), until such goods are settled for or charged." H., being informed by L. that he had a customer who might buy the goods, delivered them to L. upon the terms of his paying cash or returning them in a few days. L. had no customer, & fraudulently pledged the goods with deft., a pawnbroker. In an action to recover the goods from deft.:—Held: the goods were not delivered to H. "on approval, or on sale or return or other similar terms" within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 18, r. 4; the terms of the memorandum showed that the intention of pltf. & H. was that the property in the goods should not pass to H. until he paid for them or was debited with the price by pltf.; consequently the property in the goods had not passed out of pltf., & he was entitled to recover from deft.

If he deals with the goods in a way which in ordinary circumstances & apart from any special terms in the contract is inconsistent with his right to return them, as, for example, by selling or pledging them, he loses the right to return them & the property in the goods passes to him (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).—*WEINER v. 1265. Sale on "invoice."—On Nov. 18, 1909, pltf's., manufacturing jewellers, delivered a pearl necklace to B., a pearl & diamond dealer, on the terms of a memorandum which recited that he received the article "on appro" & that "these goods remain the property of W. Truman, Ltd. (ptf's.) until invoiced by them." It was verbally arranged between pltf's. & B. that the necklace should be paid for in cash, & that no credit should be given. On the same day B. fraudulently pawned the necklace with deft., who acted in good faith, & without notice of any fraud on the part of B. On Dec. 17, B. falsely represented to pltf's. that he had obtained a customer for the necklace, who would only pay on terms of credit, & pltf's., agreeing to accept payment by bills, thereupon invoiced the necklace to B. On Jan. 17, 1910, pltf's. delivered a diamond necklace to B. on the terms of a note similar to that given on the previous occasion, & on the same day B. pawned it, with other articles on the terms of a deposit note which provided that the necklace, & other articles, should be held by deft. as security for the payment of £550, "to be also a further charge on all securities now held or which may be held" by deft. In an action to recover the goods from deft. :—Held : on Jan. 17 deft. acquired a valid charge on the pearl necklace, as the property had passed to B. when it was invoiced to him on Dec. 18 & the contract had not been avoided by pltf's.—*TRUMAN v. 1268. — Payment.—Let us consider . . . what is the position of a man who has goods sent to him on sale or return. He receives the goods from the true owner with an option of becoming the owner, which can be exercised in one of three ways—by buying the goods at the price named by the vendor; by selling the goods to some one else, which is taken to be a declaration of his option; or by keeping them so long that it would be unreasonable that he should return them. 1296. ————]—Allowing judgment by consent.—Pltfs. received from a firm abroad a parcel of precious stones to be placed on view at a certain exhibition. The owners instructed pltfs. to sell the stones if not less than the sum of £750 could be obtained for them, but otherwise the same were to be returned to the owners. While at the exhibition the stones were not sold, & therefore were restored to pltfs. Shortly afterwards pltfs. were prevailed upon to allow B., who was a jeweller, to have the stones on approval. B. offered £300 for the stones, but declined to give £750 for them. That offer was communicated to the owners, B. retaining the stones pending the receipt of the owners’ instructions concerning them. B.’s offer was refused by the owners, but before their instructions were received B. had sold the stones to defts., who acted bonâ fide in the transaction, for the sum of £300.

On pltfs. demanding an immediate return of the stones they discovered that B. had parted with them. Thereupon pltfs. brought an action against B. for £750 or alternatively for the return of the stones & damages. Ultimately judgment for £750 & costs against B. was consented to, but subsequently B. was adjudicated bkpt. Pltfs. consequently brought an action against defts. to recover possession of the stones or £750 their value, or damages £750 for their detention:—Held: whether or not the contract of sale or return was put an end to, the judgment by consent in the action against B. amounted to an affirmation of his property in the goods; & therefore pltfs.’ subsequent action against defts. was not maintainable.—*BRADLEY & COHN, LTD. v. Pltfs. dispatched the machine on these terms, & defts. wrote within twenty-one days rejecting the machine on the ground that though it was satisfactory they anticipated trouble with their hands in working it. (2) The position of a person receiving goods on sale or return, I think, is this, that if there is a time fixed for the return of the goods, or if not, so long as a reasonable time for the return of the

S. & co., the correspondents at Rio of B. & co., merchants at Liverpool, purchased a quantity of coffee, on their own credit principally, but in part with funds supplied by B. & co. For the amount of the purchase on their credit L. S. & co. drew bills on B. & co., & the coffee they shipped on board a vessel of B. & co., bound for "Cork & a market." An invoice was made out, stating the coffee to be shipped by order on account & risk of B. & co. ; but L. S. & co. procured the captain to sign bills of lading, making the coffee deliverable to their order or assigns, "freight free." One of these bills they indorsed in blank, & transmitted by post to B. & co., on Sept. 21. At the end of Sept., A., the agent in England of L. S. & co., asked the principal partner in the firm of B. & co. to cause the bill of lading to be placed in third hands, to secure the bills drawn on account of the purchase, to which he agreed, & on Oct. 16 gave a written order to that effect. On Nov. 12, which was after B. & co. had committed an act of bkpey., the bill of lading arrived, & was, in pursuance of the above-mentioned agreement, delivered to A. for the above-mentioned purpose, who, after the fiat, pledged it for a large advance with pltfs., merchants at Rotterdam. 1306. —[—]—Defts., merchants at Bristol, through a broker contracted to buy of pltf's., merchants at Rotterdam, ten tons of the best refined rape oil, to be shipped "free on board" at Rotterdam in Sept. 1857, at £48 15s. per ton, to be paid for on delivery to defts. of the bills of lading, by bill of exchange to be accepted by defts. payable three months after date, & to be dated on the day of shipment of the oil. On Sept. 8, pltf's., having on the previous day advised that the shipment would be made, shipped on board a general ship, trading between Rotterdam & Bristol, five tons of the oil, & the master signed a bill of lading by which the oil was deliverable "unto shipper's order" & pltf's. indorsed it specially to defts. On the same day pltf's. inclosed in a letter to the broker the bill of lading, invoice & bill of exchange drawn on defts. in accordance with the contract. On the night of Sept. 9 the ship with the oil on board was run down in the Bristol Channel & the oil totally lost. Pltf's. letter of Sept. 8 arrived at Bristol on the afternoon of Sept. 10 in due course of post, but after business hours. On the morning of Sept. 11 the broker left with defts. the bill of lading, invoice, & bill of exchange for their acceptance. At that time he knew of the loss of the ship. In about two hours afterwards defts. returned to the broker the documents left with them, on the ground that, under the circumstances, they were not liable to pay for the oil. In an action for not accepting the bill of exchange, & for goods sold & delivered, the jury stated that in their opinion, according to mercantile usage, the risk of the loss of the oil was on defts. —Held: (1) the property in the oil passed to defts. when it was placed "free on board" in performance of the contract; (2) it was a question for the jury whether pltf's. so shipped the oil in performance of their contract to place it "free on board," or for the purpose of retaining a control over it & continuing to be owners contrary to the contract.—*BROWNE v. 1307. —[—]—D., a merchant in London, was in the habit of shipping salt for exportation at the port of Liverpool. He usually employed pltf. to purchase the salt, & pltf. shipped it, taking receipts in his own name from the mate for each delivery, & when the cargo was complete, taking bills of lading in his own name, which he remitted to D., in exchange for D.'s acceptances for the price of the salt. Pltf. was paid no commission, but he charged D. an advance on the price of the salt. On the present occasion D. had chartered a ship to load a full cargo of salt for Calcutta, & pltf. had placed on board her, in accordance with instructions from D., 1,000 tons of salt which he had purchased for that purpose, & for which he had taken the mate's receipts in the usual course. When this quantity had been placed on board D. stopped payment, & pltf. then ceased loading, & demanded bills of lading for the salt already on board in his own name. Dft., the ship owner, refused to allow them to be given & filled up the ship, & sent her with the salt to Calcutta. The jury found that when pltf. put the salt on board he did not intend to pass the property therein to D., but to retain it in himself: —Held: this was the proper question for the jury, & on this finding & these facts there was a conversion of the salt by dft. at Liverpool.—*FALK v. 1308. —[—]—Where goods are shipped by the vendors to persons, described as "selling agents," who are paid by commission & to whom the bills of lading are indorsed, & the vendors do not reserve any right of disposal of the goods after shipment, the question whether the property in the goods has passed to the "selling agents" depends upon intention & is a question of fact. An American co. shipped in July, 1914, at New York for Hamburg on a German steamer a consignment of pig lead under bills of lading which were made out to the order of the shippers at Hamburg & were indorsed to a German co. or order & were sent forward to the German co. The goods were shipped under an arrangement between the American co. & the German co. which secured to the former the benefit of a previous agreement in which the German co. were described as "selling agents," & a draft on demand for the provisional price, as arranged, was sent to an English co., which was connected with the arrangement. On Aug. 5, 1914, the goods were seized as prize, & on presentation of the draft on Aug. 8, 1914, the English co. refused, owing to the war, to pay it. The German co. were not accountable to the American co. as principals for the sum actually received by them as agents from the purchasers to whom they sold the goods, but only for a sum to be fixed by a computation of sales of pig lead supplied by other producers:—

Sub-sect. 6, B. (a).]

Held: on the facts the property in the goods had passed to the German co. & therefore they were enemy goods.—THE KRONPRINZESSIN CECILIE (1917), 33 T. L. R. 292, P. C.

1310. ——— Passing of property suspended.—(1) K. purchased corn at New Orleans for pltf., a London merchant, whose agent K. was. The purchase was made with K.'s money; & K. drew for the amount upon pltf., the bill being, in its body, expressed to be on account of the corn. K. sold the bill to deft. at New Orleans, &, at the same time, handed to deft. a bill of lading of the corn, which had been drawn for delivery to K.'s order & indorsed by K. K. at the same time empowered deft. to sell the corn if the bill of exchange should not be paid. Afterwards K. advised pltf. of the transaction, forwarded to him the invoice, which stated the corn to be shipped at the risk & on the account of pltf., & requested pltf. to accept the bill of exchange:—Held: the inference from these facts was that K. did not transfer the property in the corn to pltf., subject to a lien, but only transferred the property to pltf. on the condition of his paying the bill of exchange, &, in the mean time, the corn was the property of deft.

(2) The corn having arrived in England, & the bills of exchange & lading having been forwarded to England by deft., the bill of exchange was accepted by pltf. On its maturity, he offered to take it up: but it was not produced, owing to a mistake of deft.'s agent in England as to its place of deposit. On a later day the bill of exchange was presented to pltf., who did not pay it:—Held: deft. under these circumstances, was entitled to retain the corn.—JENKYNs v. BROWN (1849), 14 Q. 1314. ——— Though payment on general account made by buyer.—Pltf. a merchant at Leeds, contracted with the London partner of a firm carrying on business as merchants at London & Odessa, for the purchase of a quantity of linseed, to be paid for, half by drafts on the buyer at three months from the time of advice of the sale reaching Odessa, & the remainder at three months from the date of shipment. The London partner forwarded the contract to the Odessa partner, & the latter drew upon pltf. two bills of exchange on account of linseed, which were duly accepted, & paid when due. In order to fetch the linseed, pltf. chartered a vessel, which was to proceed with an outward cargo to Odessa, & there take on board "from the agents of the freighter," the linseed, &, being so loaded, proceed to Hull, " & deliver the same to the order of the freighter, on being paid freight." The vessel having arrived at Odessa, the master applied for the linseed, & produced a copy of the charter-party, when he was informed that the cargo should be shipped in due time. A letter was also sent by the Odessa partner to the London partner, informing him of the arrival of the vessel, & stating that a portion of the linseed was ready for her. The Odessa house commenced loading the vessel; but, not being able to procure the entire quantity of linseed, the master consented to receive wheat in substitution thereof, which was accordingly shipped. When the loading of the linseed was completed, the Odessa partner wrote to the London partner stating that he should have the bill of lading by the next post. The Odessa partner afterwards procured the master to sign the bills of lading, making the goods deliverable "unto order or assigns" & indorsed the bills of lading for value to a third person, who transferred them to defts.:—Held: under the above circumstances, there was no such delivery of the goods as to vest the right of property or possession in pltf.—*ELLERSHAW v. M. & co., accordingly made considerable purchases of cotton, & shipped it on board the vessel of B. & co. The master signed a bill of lading of the cotton, to be delivered at Liverpool, "to order or to our assigns, paying for freight for the cotton nothing, being owners' property"; & M. & co. indorsed the bill of lading—"Deliver the within to the Bank of Liverpool, or order." M. & co. informed B. & co. that they had drawn bills upon them for the cargo on their account by the "Charlotte," & desired them to insure the cotton. M. & co. also sent to B. & co. an abstract invoice, which stated that the cotton was shipped by M. & co., on board the "Charlotte" for Liverpool, by order, & for account & risk of B. & co., there, & addressed to order." M. & co. afterwards sent a full invoice, stating that the cotton was shipped for Liverpool, "by order & for account of B. & co., there, & to them consigned." M. & co., not having sufficient funds of B. & co. to pay for the cotton, sold the bills to a bank at Charleston, & delivered to the bank the bill of lading so indorsed as a security for payment of the bills; which were dishonoured, & taken up by M. & co. B. & co. became bkpt. before the arrival of the vessel; & on its arrival M. & co., by their agent, claimed to stop the cargo in transitu, & it was afterwards stowed in the warehouse of deffs. The assignees of B. & co. having brought detinue, deffs. traversed the possession of the assignees, & also set up the right of M. & co. as against them:—Held: (1) the property in the cotton did not vest absolutely in B. & co., notwithstanding the delivery on board their ship; for, by the terms of the bill of lading, M. & co. reserved to themselves a jus disponendi of the goods, which the master acknowledged by signing the bill of lading, making the cotton deliverable to their order or assigns, although by so doing the master might have exceeded his authority; (2) M. & co. did not, by their indorsement & delivery of the bill of lading to the bank, divest themselves of their property in or possession of the goods; (3) the right of M. & co., as against plffs., need not be specially pleaded; & the objection to the title of the latter was properly raised under the plea of not possessed.—TURNER v. 1318. — Passing of property not suspended.—Bill of lading taken to order by seller as buyer's agent.—There may be a complete contract so as to pass the property in goods from the seller to the buyer, although the price has not been definitively agreed on between them. Where from all the facts it may fairly be inferred that it was the intention of the seller to pass the property in goods shipped to order, the mere circumstances of the bill of lading being taken in the name of the seller, & remaining undorsed, will not prevent its passing. A., who had been in the habit of buying largely of guano from B. & co., of Liverpool, at prices which were settled at the beginning of each year, wrote to them on Feb. 14 ordering a shipment of 100 tons, provided freight did not exceed 6s. 6d. On Feb. 26 B. & co. wrote in answer, "We have succeeded in fixing the schooner 'Anne & Isabella' to carry about 115 tons at your limit of 6s. 6d. per ton. We presume we may value upon you at six months from the date of shipment at £10 per ton," etc.; adding in a postscript, "Please say if you purpose effecting insurance at your end." On Mar. 3, A. wrote, "I am favoured with yours of Mar. 26. You say we presume we charge you £10 per ton net cash, etc. I really cannot understand this, when I know that Mr. L. supplies your guano in Scotland at £9 15s. net there to dealers. Besides, I look, as heretofore, for the special allowance made to me at the origin of our transactions; & now that you are making some changes, it may be as well that I should know how we are to get on for the future," & he concluded with a request that some flowering shrubs should be sent to him "in charge of the captain." On the same day, A. effected an insurance on the guano per "Anne & Isabella." The guano was shipped at Liverpool on Mar. 4, under a bill of lading making it deliverable to B. & co. or their assigns. The bill of lading, undorsed, was sent from Liverpool to one of the members of the firm of B. & co., then at Belfast, who was about to pay A. a friendly visit at Londonderry. That gentleman arrived at A.'s house on the evening of Saturday Mar. 7, when he told A. that he had received the bill of lading & invoice of the guano & a draft for A.'s acceptance for the amount; & on the morning of Mar. 9 they went together to A.'s office, & there the bill of lading was indorsed & handed over with the invoice to A., who thereupon accepted the bill. In the course of the same day they heard for the first time that the "Anne & Isabella" with the guano on board had been wrecked on the coast near Londonderry:—Held: the property in the guano passed to A. by the contract from the time of its shipment. A.'s letter of Mar. 3 not being a repudiation, though expressing some dissatisfaction at the price.—JOYCE v. SWANN (1864), 17 C. B. N. S. 84; 144 E. R. 34.

1319. Bill of lading sent to buyer & goods shipped f.o.b.—In June, 1914, pursuant to a contract of Dec. 1913, entered into between a British co. as sellers & a German co. as buyers a cargo of chrome ore was loaded in a Norwegian sailing ship at a port in New Caledonia for delivery at Rotterdam. In accordance with the terms of the contract, which provided a fixed price per ton f.o.b. 50 per cent. to be paid on shipment the German co. paid half the purchase price, effected the insurance, & sent the policy to the sellers before loading. The bills of lading, made out in favour of the sellers or order, for delivery at Rotterdam, were also sent to & retained by them. The ship sailed on June 9. On Sept. 6, when she put into Pernambuco, her master heard of the outbreak of war, & instructions were cabled to him by the German co. who were the charterers that the ship was to proceed to Gothenburg instead of to Rotterdam. By an Order in Council of Oct. 29, 1914, chrome ore was declared absolute contraband. On Nov. 2 the ship was captured at sea & taken into a British port & a writ in prize was issued against the cargo. Claims were entered by the British co. who claimed that the property in the cargo remained in them, & by a Swedish co. who claimed the German co. as their agents, had bought the cargo for them:—Held: the sellers had not reserved the right of disposal, & the property in the goods passed to the German co. on shipment & part payment.—THE SORFAREREN (1915), 85 L. 1323. —.]—Pltfs., merchants in London, purchased for C., but on their own credit, goods abroad, debiting C. with the price & a commission. The goods were warehoused in London in pltfs.' name. C. in his own name engaged room for the goods in the ship E., which had been put up as a general ship for Calcutta. Pltfs., at C.'s request, delivered the goods to a lighterman, but, with a view to preserve their lien, took the lighterman's engagement to give them the mate's receipt. The goods were shipped on the E.; the mate's receipt in blank was handed to the lighterman, who gave it to pltfs. C. promised pltfs. to redeem the mate's receipt, but never did so, & fraudulently induced the shipbrokers to get bills of lading to C.'s order, to be signed by the master, though the mate's receipt was not produced. C. fraudulently indorsed these bills of lading for value to a bonâ fide indorsee. Pltfs. had no communication with the shipbrokers or captain till after the ship had sailed, when, the facts being discovered, they demanded the goods both in this country & on the arrival of the ship at Calcutta. The goods were delivered by the captain at Calcutta to the holders of the bills of lading. An action was brought for this conversion against the shipowner & the captain.

The only question left to the jury was, whether, under the circumstances, the master was justified in signing the bills of lading without the production of the mate's receipt. The jury finding in the negative, pltfs. had the verdict against both defts. on the pleas of not guilty & not possessed:—Held: the property in the goods remained the property of pltfs., there never having been any delivery animo transferendi to C.—SCHUSTER v.  C., a merchant at Waterford, had been in the habit of consigning cargoes of grain to B., a corn factor in Bristol, who had been accustomed to accept bills on the faith of such consignments. C. wrote to B., stating that he was about to ship him a cargo of oats, & that he had drawn on him for £550 in anticipation of it, & desiring him to effect an insurance on the cargo. C. remitted the bill to B., & he accepted it. Before the vessel sailed, C. stopped payment, & he then sent the bill of lading, indorsed in blank, to F., another factor at Bristol, not informing him of his engagement with B. When the vessel arrived, F., for his own convenience, transmitted the bill of lading to B., desiring him to act for him. B. paid the freight, & took possession of the cargo, as a security for his own claim on C., & it was afterwards taken out of his possession by defts., who also were creditors of C., under a foreign attachment against C. out of the Tolzey ct. of Bristol:—Held: B. had not such a property in the goods as to enable him to maintain trover against defts.—BRUCE v. M. afterwards executed a deed of composition under Bkpcy. Act, 1861 (c. 134), s. 192; & in the schedule filed in pursuance of the General Order of May, 1862, the debt set opposite the names of H. & B., who were assenting creditors, included the price of the wine which was not yet delivered:—Held: if the right to retain the wine was to be regarded as a security, it was a security for the payment of the bill & not for the price of the wine, & consequently H. & B. were entitled to sign the deed as creditors for the full amount of the unpaid purchase-money.—Re MIDDLETON, Ex p. He procures the master to sign bills of lading to the order of blank, assuring him 't is immaterial. He then draws on pltf., & transmits the bills & bill of lading to an agent in this country, with instructions, that if pltf. does not accept the bills, the agent should indorse over the bill of lading to the payee of the bills, which is accordingly done:—Held: the property in the goods was changed by the delivery on board pltf.'s ship & the subsequent indorsement of the bill of lading was inoperative.—*OGLE v. 1343. —.]—Where in a c.i.f. contract provision is made for payment of cash against documents the presumption is that the retention of the documents until payment imports that the right of disposal of the goods is reserved by the seller, & the property in the goods does not pass until payment is made.—EASTWOOD & HOLT v. STUDER (1926), 31 Com. Cas. 251.

In a case in which it appeared from the facts that the intention of the parties to the contract was that the property in the cargo should pass to the purchaser on shipment & be at his risk but that he was not intended to have possession of it, or of the bills of lading, until actual payment of the purchase price at the expiration of an agreed period of credit, which did not expire till after the ship had been captured:—Held: the inference that the property in the cargo had passed to the purchaser before the capture was not displaced by the form of the bills of lading, which was ambiguous.

If the seller deal with the bill of lading only to secure the contract price . . . the prima facie presumption in such a case appears to be that the property is to pass only on the performance by the buyer of his part of the contract, & not forthwith subject to the seller's lien. Inasmuch, however, as the object to be attained, namely, securing the contract price, may be attained by the seller merely reserving a lien, the inference that the property is to pass on the performance of a condition only is necessarily somewhat weak, & may be rebutted by the other circumstances of the case (LORD PARKER).—THE PARCHIM, [1918] A. (b) Delivery of Bill of Exchange and Bill of Lading.

1345. Whether passing of property suspended—Delivery of bill of lading to buyer—With advice of bill of exchange.—Where the consignor of goods abroad advised the consignee by letter that he had chartered a certain ship on his account & inclosed him an invoice of the goods laden on board, which were therein expressed to be for account & risk of the consignee & also a bill of lading in the usual form, expressing the delivery to be made to order, etc., he paying freight for the said goods according to charter party; & the letter of advice also informed the consignee that the consignor had drawn bills on him at three months for the value of the cargo:—Held: the invoice & bill of lading sent to the consignee & the delivery of the goods to the captain vested the property in the consignee, subject only to be divested by the consignor's right to stop the goods in transitu in case of the insolvency of the other.—*WALLEY v. 1346. —In 1845, defts., commission agents in London, wrote to plffs., merchants at Madras, as follows:—"at the request of Messrs. K. & L. of Glasgow, we beg to open a credit in your favour to the extent of £1,500, to be applied to the execution of an order they have given you for Madras handkerchiefs & for cost of which, as produced, you draw on us at the customary date, on forwarding bills of lading to our order." In consequence of this letter, two orders given by K. & L. were executed by plffs., who forwarded the goods & bills of lading to defts., & they accepted & paid bills drawn on them in accordance with the letter. In Feb. 1847, K. & L. wrote to plffs., inclosing patterns for a third order, & saying "you will draw for cost, & consign goods as before." Plffs. executed this order, & on Aug. 21 shipped the goods on account of K. & L. & sent to defts. the invoice & bill of lading inclosed in a letter, saying, "we have as usual drawn upon you at six months for the equivalent of the amount of invoice." The bill of lading stated the goods to have been "shipped by plffs., & to be deliverable to defts. or their assigns, on payment of freight." The invoice stated, that the goods were "consigned to defts. on account & risk of K. & L." The letter containing the bill of lading & invoice was received by defts. on Aug. 26, and the goods arrived in London on Oct. 21. On the same day, plffs.' agent received a bill drawn against the goods & caused it to be presented to defts. for acceptance, but they refused to accept it. On Oct. 27, K. & L. stopped payment. The goods were received by defts. under the bill of lading, & sold, & the proceeds retained by them. On Mar. 4, 1848, plffs. gave defts. notice that they claimed to stop the goods in transitu, defts. having refused to accept the bills; & plffs. subsequently brought an action to recover the proceeds of the sale as money received for their use:—Held: (1) it was a question for the judge, & not for the jury, to decide whether, under the circumstances, the property in the goods vested absolutely in K. & L. or merely conditionally on the acceptance of the bill by defts.; (2) the contract was not subject to the condition, either precedent or subsequent, that defts. should accept the bill, but that the property in the goods vested absolutely in K. & L. upon the delivery on board the ship & transmission of the bill of lading to defts.; (3) if plffs. had intended to preserve their right of property in the goods until the bill was accepted, they should have transmitted the bill of lading indorsed in blank to an agent, to be delivered over only in case the bill was accepted.—*KEY v. 1347. —[A firm of merchants in England employed a firm of merchants in South America as their agents to purchase goods & send them to England. The foreign firm drew bills on the English firm & sold them in South America, & with the proceeds purchased goods which they shipped to England, sending the bills of lading directly to the English firm, & at the same time advising them of the drawing of the bills, by means of which they had purchased the goods, & requesting them to carry the invoice price of the goods to their account. The English firm went into liquidation & the foreign firm also became bkpt. When the English firm stopped payment, a cargo of goods was in transitu, & some of the bills drawn for purchasing them had been accepted by the English firm, but not paid, & others had not been accepted. The trustee in the liquidation took possession of the cargo on its arrival. The creditors of the foreign firm claimed to have the goods appropriated to meet the bills drawn in respect of them:—Held: the foreign firm, whether regarded as the agents of the English firm or as vendors, had parted with all property in the goods, & had no power to direct the appropriation of the proceeds.—*Re TAPPENBECK, Ex p. 1348. —[Defts. carried on business in London, & their practice was to sell in their own names goods shipped to them by P. & co. who carried on business abroad. P. & co. used to specify in advising drafts against what particular shipments same were drawn, so as to enable defts. to tell whether the particular shipments consigned to them did in fact cover the then outstanding drafts, but not to affect their right to treat all shipping documents as cover for the whole account between them & P. & co. P. & co. used likewise to draw upon plffs., who also carried on business in London, against shipments of goods, bills which plffs. accepted, P. & co. afterwards forwarding to them, as security, before the bills reached maturity, bills drawn by P. & co. on first class firms, among them being defts., accompanied by the shipping documents of the goods shipped by them to such firms, & on such firms accepting the bills plffs. would hand over to them the shipping documents which otherwise would have been retained. Defts. having received instructions from P. & co. to sell certain goods at a specified price, entered into contracts for the sale thereof. Subsequently P. & co. wrote to the defts. that they had drawn upon them against the goods & the bills were specified. The bills were drawn to the order of pltf's. by P. & co. upon defts. for various sums, & were together intended to provide for part of the credit or advances made by pltf's. to P. & co. Bills of lading for the goods, indorsed in favour of defts., were afterwards forwarded to them by P. & co. Defts. took possession of the bills of lading & applied them in satisfying, so far as they would go, the contracts into which they had entered; but, becoming doubtful as to the financial position of P. & co.'s firm, they declined to accept the bills of exchange, & claimed to treat the proceeds of sale of the goods as available for payment of the general balance of account between themselves & P. & co.:—Held: there was no specific appropriation of the goods in favour of pltf's.; defts. were not compellable to accept the bills; & nothing had been done to defeat the primary right of defts., in whose custody the goods were, to deal with them for their own purposes & irrespective of any rights of pltf's.—KÖNIG v. 1352. ———.]—In fulfilment of a contract for the sale of a certain quantity of copper the sellers forwarded to the buyer a bill of lading indorsed in blank for copper shipped on defts.' ship, together with a draft for the price of the copper for acceptance. The buyer, who was insolvent, did not accept the draft, & delivered the bill of lading to pltf's. in fulfilment of a contract which he had, previously to obtaining possession of the bill of lading, made for the sale to them of copper, & they thereupon paid him the price of the copper. Pltf's. took the bill of lading in good faith, & without notice of the rights of the original sellers in respect of the copper. The sellers stopped the copper in transitu. In an action by pltf's. against defts. for non-delivery of the copper:—Held: the buyer having obtained possession of the bill of lading with the consent of the sellers, the transfer of it by him to pltf's. gave them a good title to the copper under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 25 (2), & the sellers had no right to stop it in transitu.

However fraudulent the person in actual custody may have been in obtaining the possession, provided it did not amount to larceny by a trick, & however grossly he may abuse confidence reposed in him, or violate the mandate under which he got possession, he can by his disposition give a good title to the purchaser (COLLINS, L.J.).—CAHN v. 1353. ———.]—In pursuance of a contract note, providing for cost, insurance & freight of a parcel of wood goods, the sellers in Christiania shipped the goods under a bill of lading to the order of their London agents, who forwarded it to the buyers at Exeter, & authorised them to retain it against their acceptance at four months, or cash less discount. The buyers elected to pay in cash; but their country cheque posted to London was not credited as paid until three days after the carrying vessel had been in collision with another vessel & the goods had been damaged. The carrying vessel put into a port of distress, where the goods were sold on behalf of underwriters, with whom the sellers' agents had effected a policy for the benefit of whom it might concern. The underwriters subsequently paid the buyers as for a total loss, & the sellers retained the proceeds of the cheque representing the invoice price of the goods. In an action of damage by collision brought against the other vessel by the owners of the goods in the carrying ship, the names of the buyers were given as pltf's., but the ct. held that the buyers had no right of action, as the property in the goods was not vested in them at the time of the collision. By leave the names of the sellers were added as pltf's., & the other vessel having been found alone to blame, the amount of the damage was referred to the registrar, who rejected the claim of the sellers suing on behalf of the underwriters on the ground that, as the sellers had been paid by the buyers the sound value of the goods they had not sustained any loss in respect of which subrogation could arise. This report was confirmed by the judge sitting in Admty.:—Held: the passing of the cheque from buyers to sellers did not deprive the underwriters of their right to recover the loss from the wrongdoer in the name of the sellers, who were the owners of the goods at the time of the collision.—THE CHARLOTTE, [1908] P. 206; 77 L. B. accordingly shipped the bark, to be delivered at Liverpool to defts., who were wharfingers & carriers there, to be by them forwarded to A. at Manchester. The bark was to be paid for in cash; & B. sent a bill of lading, making it deliverable to "A. or his assigns," together with a bill of exchange payable on demand, through his bankers, to the Manchester & Salford Bank, with instructions to present the bill for acceptance. The bank at Manchester were unable to find A., & accordingly they returned the bill of lading & draft to B. Before the bill of lading had been so returned, B., who was at Liverpool when the bark arrived there, believing from the representations of an agent of pltf., who had bought the bark of A., that the bill of lading had been duly handed over to A., assented to the bark being delivered to defts. for the purpose of its 1355. ————]—(1) In taking a bill of lading, the vendor of the goods who ships them controls the possession of the captain, & makes him accountable to deliver the cargo according to its terms. It is the symbol of property, & the holder of it retains the property in himself. It is not inconsistent with a statement in the invoice that the goods are “ shipped on account & at the risk ” of the consignee. The jus disponendi is still reserved to the shipper through the medium of the bill of lading.

(2) The burden of showing the existence of a different state of things lies on the person who contradicts what would be the ordinary legal conclusion from the transaction.

(3) Where a bill of lading & a bill of exchange to cover the goods included in the bill of lading, are sent in a letter to a vendee of the goods, it is a well understood rule that the bill of exchange must be accepted, or the bill of lading cannot be retained. Where a bill of exchange is not accepted, but the bill of lading is retained, the bill of lading acquired in that manner gives no right of property to the person so acquiring it.

S., who was in good credit with P. & N., at Brazil, desired them to purchase cotton for him. Their agent in England was G. They did purchase the cotton, & sent it, the invoice described it as shipped on account & at the risk of S. The invoice & two bills of lading were enclosed in a letter to G., who forwarded the invoice & one of the bills of lading, together with a bill of exchange for the price of the cotton to S. in a letter in which they said : “ We enclose bill of lading, etc., shipped by P. & N. on your account. We hand also the draft on your good selves for costs of the cotton, to which we beg your protection.” S. wrote an answer making some complaints about the quality & price of the cotton, & after referring to some previous transaction, said that these circumstances stood in the way of his accepting the bill. He handed over the bill of lading to his brokers, who paid the freight, & obtained from the shipowners a delivery order ; but before the cotton was actually delivered to the brokers of S., G. interposed, & on the authority of a duplicate bill of lading obtained delivery of the cotton :—Held : the property in the cotton had not, under these circumstances, passed to S., but remained with P. & N., whose agent was lawfully justified in taking possession of the cotton.—SHEPHERD v. 1357. ————]*—P. shipped 600 tons of umber upon a vessel chartered for pltf. The bills of lading made the umber deliverable to the order of P. or assigns. Pltf. insured the umber. A bill of exchange drawn by P. on pltf., which had been discounted by deft.'s bank, to whom the bills of lading had been transferred, having been refused acceptance, a second bill was drawn by P. to the order of C. on pltf., & was given to defts. in exchange for the first bill, upon the terms that pltf. should accept & pay the second bill against the delivery of the bill of lading. The umber & the bill of exchange reached their destination at the same time, but pltf. declined to accept the bill. The umber was, therefore, entered at the custom house in deft.'s name. Subsequently pltf. tendered the amount of the bill of exchange & demanded the bill of lading, but defts. refused to give up the bill of lading ; pltf. offered a guarantee for the freight, which offer was not accepted by defts., & they sold the cargo :—Held : the property in the umber passed to pltf., & pltf. was entitled to recover.

If, however, the vendor, when shipping the articles which he intends to deliver under the contract, takes the bill of lading to his own order & does so, not as agent or on behalf of the purchaser, but on his own behalf, it is held that he thereby reserves to himself a power of disposing of the property & that consequently there is no final appropriation & the property does not on shipment pass to the purchasers. When the vendor on shipment takes the bill of lading to his own order he has the power of absolutely disposing of the cargo (COTTON, L.J.).

If the vendor deals with or claims to retain the bill of lading in order to secure the contract price, as when he sends forward the bill of lading with a bill of exchange attached, with directions that the bill of lading is not to be delivered to the purchaser till acceptance or payment of the bill of exchange, the appropriation is not absolute . . . & until such acceptance or payment or tender, the property in the goods does not pass to the purchaser. . . . But if the bill of lading has been dealt with only to secure the contract price, there is neither principle nor authority for holding that in such a case the goods shipped for the purpose of completing the contract do not, on payment or tender by the purchaser of the contract price, rest in him (COTTON, L.J.).—*MIRABITA v. 1358. —[—]—A shipload of timber having been consigned to defts., the consignor sent the bill of lading, & other shipping documents, & also a bill of exchange, to pltf., in pursuance of the usual course of business between him & them, to cover certain advances which they from time to time made to him. Pltf. placed the shipping documents & bill of exchange relating to the cargo of timber in the hands of agents, who acted between pltf. & defts. The agents at the request of pltf. forwarded the documents to defts., in order to have the bill of exchange accepted by them. Shortly afterwards defts. informed the agents that the cargo was thoroughly out of condition, & that they could not take it in its then state. The agents replied that, unless defts. returned the bill of exchange accepted, they ought to send back the shipping documents. This defts. declined to do, as they had paid part of the freight, & intended to take possession of the cargo. Later on they stated that they had been compelled to remove the cargo under the rules of the dock co., but that, if the agents would repay them the freight & certain charges, & their profits on a portion of the cargo which they had sold, they would return the documents. The agents replied that the matter must be left in the hands of pltf., the owners of the cargo. Defts. then returned to the agents the bill of exchange unaccepted, but retained the bill of lading as security against freight & charges. They offered to yield up the bill of lading on the freight & charges being refunded. Thereupon pltf. commenced an action against defts., asking that they might be ordered to accept & deliver up the bill of exchange; & that it might be declared that, until such acceptance & delivery, defts. were not entitled to retain the bill of lading. They also asked for an injunction, receiver & damages. Owing to delay, caused by the fault of both parties, the action did not come on for hearing until about four years after its commencement:—Held: defts., having refused to accept the bill of exchange, were bound to have returned the shipping documents, which were only at their disposal on the condition that they should so accept the bill; & they wrongfully took possession of the cargo, & dealt with as its owners, although they had repudiated the contract, & refused to accept the bill of exchange, availing themselves of the bill of lading, which they had no right whatever to retain or make use of, to get that possession.—*REW v. 1362. — — — — —[—]—A contract was entered into by K., who carried on business at Riga, & deft., through the agency of J. & co., for the sale of certain timber to defts. c.i.f. London.

The contract was signed by J. & co. as agents for K., & provided (inter alia) for payment "by approved acceptances to seller's or authorised agent's draft." The bill of lading for the timber was sent by K. to J. & co., upon whom K. drew for the price. The draft was accepted & paid by J. & co., who sent the draft & shipping documents to defts., who kept the shipping documents & took delivery of the goods, but refused to accept the draft on the ground that the goods which they claimed to reject were not in accordance with the contract. The goods were subsequently sold by order of the ct. for about one-third of their invoice price, & it was admitted that they were not in accordance with the contract. In an action by K. to recover the price of the goods & by J. & co. to recover the amount of the draft:—Held: J. & co. were not entitled to maintain the action against defts. in the absence of any contract between themselves & defts. that the draft would be accepted the fact that they had paid K. making no difference, as it could not be relied upon by defts. in answer to an action against them by K. on the contract.—*JORDESON & Co. & KAHN v. On July 28, B. wrote a letter, cancelling the orders he had given. Upon Aug. 8, 1830, pltf. informed B. that they had purchased a cargo for the ship, & should despatch it as soon as possible, addressed to H. & co., London, expressing a hope that he would approve of what they had done, notwithstanding his last-mentioned communication. The cargo was afterwards shipped, & pltf. by letter informed B. that they had shipped it on his account, & that they had forwarded an indorsed bill of lading to H. & co., drawing upon them for part of the price, & upon him, B., for the residue; & they inclosed an undorsed bill of lading to B. & an invoice of the wheat, in which it was stated to be bought for his order & on his account. The bills of exchange enclosed in this letter were dishonoured, whereupon pltf.'s agent in London delivered the indorsed bill of lading to H. & co. On Oct. 2, B. confirmed the revocation of his order, & on Nov. 24, the agent of pltf. in England gave notice to the agent of B. that he should retain the whole of the wheat for pltf. B. afterwards became desirous of having the wheat, & the master of the vessel in which the wheat was shipped delivered it to B.'s orders, & not to H. & co. pursuant to the bill of lading. In an action brought against the shipowners for not delivering pursuant to pltf.'s orders, it was contended, that pltf. were entitled to recover nominal damages only, because the property in the wheat had actually vested in B. by the shipment:—Held: the property did not vest in B. absolutely upon the shipment, but only subject to a condition, that the bills were accepted, & in default of acceptance, it never did vest in him; & consequently, pltf. were entitled to recover the value of the wheat at the time when it was delivered to B.'s order.—*BRANDT v. B. Delivery Orders.

1366. Whether passing property—General rule.]

—A consignee of goods delivering over to a third person the shipping note of such goods, & a delivery order on the wharfinger, to deliver such goods as soon as they arrive, does not pass the property in them so as to prevent a stoppage in transitu by the consignor.

I do not think that the giving the shipping note & delivery order to pltf., made a change of the property (BURROUGH, J.).—AKERMAN v. HUMPHREY (1823), 1 C. & P. 53; 171 E. R. 1099, N. P.

1367. ———.]—The giving of a delivery order does not, without some positive act done under it, operate as a constructive delivery of the goods to which it relates, nor deprive the owner of the goods, who gave it, of his right of lien for their price, even as against the claims of a third person who has bonâ fide purchased them from the original vendee.

S., the owner of sugars, sold them to B., to whom he gave a delivery order addressed to his agent A., & took a bill of exchange in payment of the price. B. sold the sugars to M., & transferred to him the delivery order. The sugars were in the warehouse of L., in whose books they were entered as received by him from A., on account of S." The sugars were weighed & invoiced by A. upon the order of S. Neither B. nor M. took any steps to act on the delivery order, till a rumour arose of B.'s insolvency, when M. presented the order to A., & received from him a fresh order, addressed to L., the warehouse keeper. Before the sugars could be actually delivered under this order, A. removed them, under the direction of S.:—Held: the possession of the goods had never been changed, & S. might still enforce upon them his lien as vendor.

A delivery order alone does not change the possession (LORD CAMPBELL).—M'EWAN v. SMITH (1849), 2 H. L. Cas. 309; 13 Jur. 265; 9 E. R. 1109, H. L.

He thereupon obtained from defts. a delivery order, which was marked with a reference to the contract of Feb. 6, & obtained payment from pltfs., upon giving them that order, under the contract of Mar. 22. He absconded with the money, & defts. refused to deliver the goods to pltfs. without payment under the contract of Feb. 6. Shortly afterwards, before any appropriation of the 200 quarters had taken place, A., as unpaid vendor, put a stop on delivery. warehouseman is sold at so much per hundred-weight, the weight of the whole being uncertain, to be paid by a bill of exchange. The vendor gives the purchaser an order to the warehouseman to weigh, & deliver the goods, which is lodged with the warehouseman; but before the goods are weighed the purchaser becomes insolvent. The vendor has a right to stop them in transitu.

The principle, I take to be, that while anything remains to be done to ascertain the price, the possession is not considered as transferred to the purchaser. Had the rosin been burnt in debts' warehouse without being weighed how could payment have been made according to the terms of the contract? If nothing remains to be done to ascertain the price, I allow that a delivery order lodged with the warehouseman is a sufficient transfer of the possession, although no entry for that purpose be made in his books (GIBBS, C.J.). —WITHERS v. LYSS (1815), 4 Camp. 237; Holt, N. On Mar. 4, M. committed an act of bkpcy., the mats being still in his warehouse; but on Feb. 19, & on several occasions between that date & Mar. 4, pltf. had demanded possession of them, which M. had refused to give. On Mar. 16, M. was adjudicated a bkpt., & debt., who was appointed assignee, claimed the goods in question, on the ground that no property in them passed to pltf., & that, there having been no change in the possession, there could be no lien, & that, if the property had been changed, the goods were nevertheless in the bkpt.'s order & disposition at the date of the bkpcy. —Held: there had been a complete transfer of the property to pltf., & after pltf.'s demand on Feb. 19, there had been no consent on his part to the goods remaining in the bkpt.'s possession, & pltf. therefore was entitled to judgment.—HORNCASTLE v. THOMPSON (1867), 16 L. used in small quantities, without any restriction on its disposal, must be taken to authorise the dealer to sell the article in small quantities as being the manufacture of the person selling to him.—CONDY & MITCHELL v. TAYLOR & Co. (1887), 56 L. T. 891; 3 T. L. R. 665.

1393. ——— At any price.]—As a general rule a trader may sell at any price whatsoever any goods, including goods of another's manufacture, which he either has in stock or expects to acquire, & may offer the same for sale by advertisement, although he thereby damages the trade of the manufacturer; & his motives for so doing cannot be inquired into.

Deft., a retail dealer, advertised for sale in a newspaper a new piano of pltfs.' manufacture of a specified character at the price at which pltfs. supplied the same to the trade, & thereby caused other dealers to give up dealing with pltfs., & he continued the advertisement after he ceased to have in stock any pianos of pltfs.' manufacture, & after pltfs. had refused to supply him, in the expectation of being able to acquire pianos of pltfs. from other dealers:—Held: (1) apart from any question of misrepresentation, deft. had a legal right to issue the advertisement; (2) though the advertisement amounted to an implied representation that deft. had in his possession a piano of the advertised description, such misrepresentation was not the cause of the damage to pltfs.' trade, & consequently gave no right of action.—AJELLO v. WORSLEY, [1898] 1 Ch. 274; 67 L. J. Ch. 172; 77 L. T. 783; 46 W. R. 245; 14 T. L. R. 168; 42 Sol. Jo. 212.

1394. Right to benefits.]—Deft., an auctioneer, sold certain goods for pltf., the owner, on premises occupied by pltf. & another, & in respect of which the latter owed the landlord rent. By the conditions of sale each lot was to be taken to be delivered at the fall of the hammer, after which time it was to remain at the exclusive risk of the purchaser. After the sale, & before the goods were removed, the landlord threatened to distrain on the goods, whereupon the auctioneer paid the rent, & deducted it from the amount the goods had realised, & paid over the balance to pltf.:—Held: the auctioneer was not justified, as against pltf., in paying the rent, as, on the sale of each lot, the property passed to the purchaser, who would have had to bear the loss if the landlord had distrained.

Where a bargain & sale is completed with respect to goods, & everything to be done on the part of the vendor before the property should pass has been performed, then the property vests in the purchaser, although the vendor still retains his lien, the price of the goods not having been paid; & any accident happening to the things subsequently, unless it is caused by default of the vendor—any calamity befalling them after the sale is completed—must be borne by the purchaser, & by parity of reasoning, any benefit to them is his benefit, & not that of the vendor (BLACKBURN, J.).—SWEETING v. TURNER (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 310; 41 L. J. Q. B. 58; 25 L. T. 790; 36 J. P. 597; 20 W. R. 185.

1395. ———.]—A purchaser of shares in a ship, which at the time of the sale is on a voyage, is liable for the expenses of this voyage, & of the vessel's outfit for it, & is entitled to a share of the freight.

Part owners who do not dissent from the employment of a ship, & are aware that other part owners have dissented, are liable to bear the expenses, & are entitled to receive the profits of the ship in the proportion which their shares bear to the number of shares in the ship, after the deduction of the shares of the dissentient part owners.—THE VINDOBALA (1888), 13 P. 1396. Fixtures—Right of purchaser to remove.—A trustee in liquidation of the affairs of the tenant for years of leasehold premises upon which were certain fixtures, sold the fixtures by auction, & subsequently, without any formal disclaimer, surrendered the premises to the landlord prior to the expiration of the term & before the purchaser of the fixtures had removed them. The landlord having let the premises with the fixtures thereon to an incoming tenant:—Held: the purchaser was nevertheless entitled to the fixtures, as the trustee, having sold them to him, could not deprive him of his right by afterwards surrendering the lease.—*SAINT v. 1397. Patented articles.—The right which the owner of a patented chattel has under his letters patent of making & using the patented chattel & licensing others to use the same, is a right of an incorporeal nature. It is a chose in action, at any rate not in possession, distinct from the right of property in the chattel itself, & incapable of seizure under a distress for rent.

Where, therefore, a patented chattel on the premises of a licensee was seized by the landlord of the licensee under a distress for rent, & sold under 2 Will. & Mar. Sess. 1, c. 5, to a purchaser who bought it with notice of the conditions on which the licensee had it, an injunction was granted at the instance of the patentee restraining the purchaser from using the chattel.—BRITISH MUTOSCOPE & BIOGRAPH CO., LTD. v. HOMER, [1901] 1 Ch. 671; 70 L. J. Ch. 279; 84 L. T. 26; 49 W. R. 277; 17 T. L. R. 213; 18 R. P. C. 177.

1398.—[If a patentee sells the patented article & the purchaser uses it he does not infringe, because the law implies a licence by the patentee to the purchaser to sell or deal with the article as he pleases, unless at the time of the purchase the patentee imposed a condition. If a purchaser buys from a licensee to whose licence the patentee has attached conditions, nothing turns, so far as licence as distinguished from estoppel is concerned, on the question whether the purchaser knew of the conditions or not. If a person innocently uses a patented invention, not knowing that there is a patent, he is none the less an infringer; & if he buys from a licensee, not knowing that there are limits to the licence, he is equally an infringer. In this case, however, the patentee may be estopped from suing in certain circumstances, as, for instance, if he has acted in such a way as to lead the purchaser to suppose that the licence is not limited.—*BADISCHE ANILIN UND SODA FABRIK v. 1399. Right to monopoly of supply.—Pltf. co. was a combination of salt manufacturers formed for the purpose of regulating supply & keeping up prices, & it had the practical control of the inland salt market. The members of the co. were entitled to be appointed as its distributors, i.e. agents to sell on behalf of the co. the salt which it had purchased from them. Defts., who had not joined the combination, agreed to sell to the co. for four years 18,000 tons of salt per annum, of which a certain proportion was to be table salt, at a fixed uniform price per ton, & undertook not to make any other salt for sale. They were to have the option of buying back the whole or a part of their table salt in each year at pltf. co.'s current selling price & were to be appointed distributors on the same terms as the co.'s other distributors. Defts. having sold salt in violation of this agreement, pltf. co. sued them for breach of contract. Defts. did not by their defence raise the issue of illegality, but they sought to rely on certain facts & documents admitted in evidence at the trial upon other issues as showing that the agreement was illegal as against public policy:—Held: having regard to the form of the pleadings, the surrounding circumstances could not be looked at for the purpose of determining the illegality of the agreement, & the agreement was not ex facie illegal.—NORTH WESTERN SALT CO., LTD. v. ELECTROLYTIC ALKALI CO., LTD., [1914] A. C. 461; 83 L. J. K. B. 530; 110 L. T. 852; 30 T. L. R. 313; 58 Sol. Jo. 338, H. L.; reusd., [1913] 3 K. B. 422, C. A.

1400. Trust to account for proceeds—Contract of sale by way of security.—Pltf. executed a written contract of absolute sale of some goods to deft.; he afterwards sued deft. for a sum which he contended was due to him out of the proceeds of the goods as a balance after repaying the amount advanced by deft. on their security. Pltf. gave evidence that on the sum being demanded by pltf.'s agent as the balance out of the proceeds, deft. admitted the correctness of the amount, & said he would pay it over:—Held: though the sale was absolute in law, there was evidence that it was accompanied by a trust that deft. should account for the proceeds, & the facts showed a sufficient consideration for the account stated by deft. to entitle pltf. to recover the balance on the count for money due upon an account stated.—HOWARD v. BROWNHILL (1853), 2 C. L. R. 125; 23 L. J. Q. B. 23; 2 W. R. 701.

1401. Conditional sale—Right to resell subject to condition.—Where there is a conditional sale of a chattel, & it is delivered to the vendee, he may dispose of it to a third person on the same terms as those upon which he obtained it: but he may not sell it out & out until he acquires the absolute property in it by performance of the condition.—*CRAMER & CO. v. in bkpey. or liquidation under Bkpey. Act, 1869 (c. 71).

A lessee was bound by the covenants in his lease not to sell the hay, straw, etc., grown on his farm without the consent of the landlord. The lessee became a liquidating debtor under Bkpey. Act, 1869 (c. 71), s. 125, & the trustee in the liquidation disclaimed the lease:—Held: the trustee was bound by Sale of Farming Stock Act, 1816 (c. 50), s. 11, notwithstanding the disclaimer & an injunction was granted to restrain him from selling the hay; straw, etc., grown on the farm.

(2) Such a covenant is a personal covenant & does not run with the land . . . nor does it run at common law with the chattels so as to bind the assignee of the chattels (CHITTY, J.).—LYBBE v. HART (1885), 29 Ch. D. 8; 54 L. J. Ch. 800; 52 L. T. 634; 1 T. L. R. 235, C. A.

Contract not to resell below certain price—Validity.]—Pltfs., who were manufacturers of goods, sold them to wholesale traders under a contract whereby the purchasers bound themselves not to sell the goods for less than certain specified prices, & if they sold to the trade to procure a similar signed agreement from every retailer whom they supplied. The purchasers sold some of the goods to retail traders without procuring from them any such agreement as provided by the contract:—Held: the contract was not in restraint of trade, & the vendors could maintain an action in respect of the breach of it.—ELLIMAN SONS & Co. v. CARRINGTON & SON, LTD., [1901] 2 Ch. 275; 70 L. J. Ch. 577; 84 L. T. 858; 49 W. R. 532; 45 Sol. Jo. 536.

1404. —.]—In an action by manufacturers of toilet soap & similar articles to prevent a retailer selling their articles at less than a certain figure, in breach of a signed agreement:—Held: the agreement was not against public policy, & therefore illegal or void, merely because it sought to raise or maintain prices. An agreement having that result might yet be shown to be reasonable & fair, & not against public interest.—PALMOLIVE CO. (OF ENGLAND), LTD. v. FREEDMAN (1927), 97 L. J. Ch. 40; 44 T. L. R. 86; 71 Sol. Jo. 927, C. A.

1405. — Effect of fraud.]—Pltfs., who were manufacturers, sold their goods wholesale to factors upon the terms of an agreement which provided that factors should only sell pltfs.' goods to dealers who had signed a retailer's agreement in a form provided by pltfs. Both the factor's agreement & the retailer's agreement provided that pltfs.' goods should not be sold at less than the specified current list prices applicable respectively to factors & retailers, or to dealers on pltfs.' suspended list. Deft. co., who dealt in goods of the kind manufactured by pltfs., & who had been placed on pltfs.' suspended list, obtained pltfs.' goods from a dealer, who had signed the retailer's agreement, at less than the prescribed retail price. Deft. co. also employed H. & L., other defts., to obtain pltfs.' goods from certain factors, who had signed pltfs.' factor's agreement, by falsely representing themselves as independent dealers & dealing in fictitious names. Deft. co. paid the prescribed price to the factors through H. & L. & in their assumed names. In consequence of deft.

co. having obtained pltfs.' goods, pltfs. suffered damage in their business. In respect of both transactions pltfs. claimed against deft. co. for an injunction & damages:—Held: (1) the transaction between deft. co. & the retail dealer did not give pltfs. any cause of action against deft. co.; but (2) pltfs. were entitled to an injunction & damages in respect of the transactions between deft. co. & the factors on the ground that deft. co., in having by fraud induced the factors to sell to them pltfs.' goods contrary to the duty owed by the factors to pltfs., had interfered without justification with the contractual relations existing between pltfs. & the factors, thereby causing damage to pltfs.—NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH CO., LTD. v. 1406. — Whether binding on sub-purchaser—With notice.]—T. & co., manufacturers of tobacco, sold packet tobaccos subject to printed terms & conditions fixing a minimum price below which they were not to be sold, & containing the following proviso: "Acceptance of the goods will be deemed a contract between the purchaser & T. & co. that he will observe these stipulations. In the case of a purchase by a retail dealer through a wholesale dealer, the latter shall be deemed to be the agent of T. & co." T. & co. sold to N., who resold for his own profit to S. & co. S. & co. had notice of the conditions, but sold to the public at a price below the stipulated minimum:—Held: (1) there was no contract between T. & co. & S. & co. which T. & co. could enforce; & (2) conditions cannot be attached to goods so as to bind all purchasers with notice.—TADDY & Co. v. STERIOUS & Co., [1904] 1 Ch. 354; 73 L. J. Ch. 191; 89 L. T. 628; 52 W. R. 152; 20 T. L. R. 102; 48 Sol. Jo. 117.

1407. — — — —.]—Conditions cannot be imposed on a sale of goods so as to run with the goods & be enforceable against subsequent purchasers by the original vendor, even though the subsequent purchasers had notice of them at the time of their purchase.

Pltfs., who were manufacturers of rubber heel pads, sold them in boxes inside the lids of which were fixed certain printed conditions providing that the pads were not to be retailed at less than certain minimum prices, or resold except subject to the conditions as a term of the sale; & that the acceptance of the goods by any purchaser would be deemed to be an acknowledgment that they were sold to him on those conditions, & that he agreed with the vendors as agents of pltfs. in that respect to be bound by them. Deft. bought some of these pads from H., one of pltf.'s factors, & was reselling them, as pltfs. alleged, at less than the minimum prices:—Held: deft. had entered into no contract with pltfs., & pltfs. had no cause of action against him.—MCGRUTHER v. 1409. — Buyer acting as seller's agent.—By a contract made between D. & Co. & applt., in consideration of applt. allowing them certain discounts off their list prices for their goods, D. & co. agreed to purchase goods to a certain amount from applt., & undertook not to resell such goods to private customers at less than the list prices of applt., & to pay a penalty for any breach of such undertaking; but they were at liberty to sell such goods to persons in the trade at less than the list prices, on obtaining from them a similar undertaking as to resales. D. & co. sold some of the goods to resps., who were in the trade, at discounts less than they had themselves obtained from applt., & obtained a similar undertaking from them as to resales. Resps. afterwards in breach of their undertaking sold some of the goods to a private customer at less than applt.' list prices, & applt. brought an action against them for penalties:—Held: assuming that the undertaking of resps. as to resales was given to D. & co., not as principals, but on behalf of applt. as undisclosed principals, there was no consideration moving from applt. to resps. to support that undertaking, & the action could not be maintained.—DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO., LTD. v. These teas had been deposited in bond by the importer with the wharfinger; the assured had purchased them from the importer, & the warrants had been indorsed in blank by him to the assured. Before the fire occurred the assured had resold the teas in specified chests to customers, & had been paid for them; they held, however, the warrants on behalf of the customers, but merely for the convenience of paying, if required, the charges necessary for clearing the teas payable by such customers:—Held: the policy applied only to goods belonging to the assured, or for which they were responsible, & the property in the teas having, at the time of the fire, passed to the purchasers, they were then at the purchasers’ risk, & were consequently not covered by the policy.—*NORTH BRITISH INSURANCE CO. v. 1415. — Payment & delivery of warrants.]—On May 14, 1861, pltf., a broker, bought for deft. at a public sale three lots of sugar in bags, the lots being respectively numbered 67, 68, & 69, the prompt day being July 20. By the terms of sale, payment was to be made either by cash on July 20, by acceptance at seventy days from the day of sale, or on delivery of the warrants, interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum being allowed to the expiration of seventy-three days from the day of sale if payment were made within twenty-one days. On May 25 pltf., according to the usage of the trade, at the request of deft., paid the price of lot 67, & obtained a warrant for it, & cleared it at the custom house. He at the same time, but without any special instructions from deft., paid the price of lots 68 & 69, & obtained the warrants for the same. The effect of this payment was, that the risk of loss by fire was transferred from the seller to the buyer. It was proved to be the common course for brokers, when so employed to clear before prompt one of several lots of sugar in bags bought under one contract, to pay the price & obtain warrants for all the lots, the broker taking the discount under the conditions of sale. Deft. not only knew that this was the common course among brokers, & that it had been pursued in former instances in relation to sugars bought for him by pltf.; but he w. s informed by a clerk of pltf. shortly after May 25, that pltf. had so paid the price of lots 67 & 68, & obtained the warrants. On June 22 deft. sent instructions to pltf. to clear lot 68. On the same day, & before those instructions could in the usual course of business be acted upon, a fire broke out at the bonded warehouse where the sugars were deposited, & they were destroyed:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover from deft. the money so paid by him in respect of lot 68 on May 25 as money paid to his use.—*SENTANCE v. 1416. — Buyer accepting risk on receipt of bills of lading.]—By an agreement in writing between pltf.s., therein described as “vendors,” & deft. therein described as “purchaser,” the vendors agreed to ship on board a vessel a cargo of fresh water ice, “to be dispatched with all speed to any ordered port in the United Kingdom, the vendors forwarding bills of lading to the purchaser; & upon receipt thereof, the purchaser takes upon himself all the risks & dangers of the seas, etc., & deft. agrees to buy & receive the said ice on its arrival at ordered port, & to pay for it in cash on delivery at the rate of 20s. per ton, weighed on board during delivery.” The ice having been duly shipped & dispatched, & the bill of lading forwarded to, & received by deft., the vessel & cargo were subsequently lost on the voyage by risks & dangers of the seas within the meaning of the above agreement. Pltf.s. having, therefore, brought an action against deft. to recover the value of the cargo:—Held: whether or not the property in the cargo passed to deft. on the receipt of the bills of lading, which the ct. said it was not necessary to decide, though they strongly inclined to hold that it did pass with all its risks, yet deft., the purchaser, having agreed to “take upon himself all the risks & dangers of the seas,” etc., from the time he received the bills of lading, was liable to pay for the cargo according to a certain rate; & if, meantime, it perished through the perils of the seas, to pay for it according to a fair estimate of its value at the time it went down.—CASTLE v. PLAYFORD (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 98; 41 L. J. Ex. 44; 26 L. T. 315; 20 W. R. 440; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 255, Ex. Ch.

1417. — Goods stored on premises of seller—At seller's risk for two months—Destruction by fire after two months.]—Pltf.s. sugar refiners, were in the habit of selling to brokers the whole of each filling of sugar, consisting of from 200 to 300 loaves or “titlers” each, the terms always being, “Prompt at one month; goods at seller's risk for two months,” the “prompt” day being the Saturday next after the expiration of one month from the sale. The titlers in each filling were stored on pltf.'s premises, & were from time to time fetched away by the purchasers or their sub-vendees, being weighed on their removal, each titler weighing from 38 to 42 lbs. If the whole of the lots contained in one sale note had not, which was frequently the case, been taken away on the “prompt” day payment was made by the purchaser, by bill or cash, at an approximate sum calculated on the probable weight, the actual price being afterwards adjusted on the whole filling being cleared. Deft., who was an old customer of pltf.s., had bought four fillings, consisting of specific titlers, each marked, on the above terms, & had paid the approximate price of the four lots, & had fetched some of each lot away. A fire occurred on pltf.'s premises after the expiration of the two months from the dates of sale to deft., destroying the whole contents of the warehouses. At the time of the fire pltf.s. had floating policies of insurance which covered goods on the premises “sold & paid for, but not removed”; but they had no agreement or understanding with their customers as to any insurance, & the amount insured, which pltf.s. received from the underwriters, was not sufficient to cover the loss of their own goods, exclusive of the titlers undelivered which they had sold to deft.:—Held: by the terms of the contract of sale, after the lapse of the two months, was in the buyer, & the loss was, therefore, his.

There is nothing to prevent the parties from agreeing that the property shall pass, & that the price shall afterwards be ascertained . . . the real question in all these cases is, whether the parties did intend that the property should pass (COCKBURN, C.J.).—*MARTINEAU v. (1) Where the consignor of goods under a c.i.f. contract executes an order received by him from another, he is, though a vendor, at the same time an agent, bound, for reward, to obtain the goods at the best price he reasonably can, & have them insured, carried, & delivered to his principal on the best terms he reasonably can. But where no commission is charged, the vendor takes upon himself the risk of a rise or fall in the price of the goods, or of freight for their carriage or of the rate of insurance, & there is not, as to either cost or freight or insurance, any trust or contract of agency between them (LORD ATKINSON).

(2) The fact that one-third of the price is not to be paid till the cargo has been delivered, though according to the authorities it does not prevent the property in the goods from vesting in the consignee, yet gives the consignor a direct interest in the safe carriage & delivery of the goods (LORD ATKINSON).—HOULDER BROTHERS & CO., LTD. v. 1431. —.]—Deft. contracted to sell to pltf. certain wood goods, c.f.i. & ship them at a port in Sweden for an English port. The ships were to be addressed to pltf. at the English port & on their arrival he was to adopt their charterparties & bills of lading & pay the price. Deft. failed to perform the mass portion of his contract & pltf. commenced an action for damages in England & applied for leave to serve notice of the writ of summons upon deft. out of the jurisdiction under R. S. C., Ord. 1, r. 1 (e). The question then arose as to whether the breach had occurred within or outside the jurisdiction:—Held: upon the true construction of the contract all deft. had to do was to ship the goods on board at the Swedish port. Accordingly the breach occurred there & not at the English port & as no cause of action arose within the jurisdiction no leave to serve notice of writ of summons under R. S. C., Ord. 11, r. 1 (e), could be granted.

It is urged by pltf. that the price included not only the price of the goods, but covered also insurance & freight. No doubt the price set down does include these payments. But the seller here charges them as part of the price & arranges with the buyer that, if he will pay the captain his freight on arrival, credit shall be given for the amount (DAY, J.).—*WANCKE v. B. resold to resp. the same quantity at an increased price, but otherwise upon similar terms. D. also sold to resp. 200 tons upon similar terms. To fulfil these contracts 390 tons, being 10 tons short, were shipped in bags on one vessel at Hamburg for Bristol, no bags being set apart for one contract more than the other. Each bag was marked with its percentage of saccharine matter, & bills of lading with marks corresponding to the bags were sent to D. to be retained till payment in accordance with the contracts. Resp. was insured in floating policies upon "any kind of goods & merchandises" between Hamburg & Bristol, & duly declared in respect of this cargo. The ship sailed from Hamburg for Bristol & was lost. After receiving news of the loss D. allocated 2,000 bags or 200 tons to B.'s contract, & 1,900 bags or 190 tons to the other contract. The sellers were obliged to take the bran from their sellers early in Oct. & they sent it to Rotterdam so that it arrived there on Oct. 14. The buyers were unable to find freight room until Oct. 28, on which date loading began on their nominated steamer & until loading began the bran remained lying in the barges in which it had been sent to Rotterdam. When loading began it was found that the bran had heated & the buyers refused to accept any more than 384 bags which had already been put on board. The sellers contended that the buyers had no right to reject & that the bran remained at the risk of the buyers from Oct. 14, the date of its arrival at Rotterdam. Arb'n. took place between the parties & the arbitrators now stated a case for the opinion of the Ct. under Arbitration Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 19:—Held: in answer to specific questions put to the Ct., that the buyers were not bound to take delivery under the contract before Oct. 28, the day on which they began to load; until that date the goods were at the risk of the sellers & the sellers were not entitled to charge the buyers with any expenses connected with them; on the evidence the buyers had not in fact accepted more than the 384 bags which had been put on board & they were entitled in law to reject the remainder.—*CUNNINGHAM, LTD. v. SECT. 2.—TRANSFER OF TITLE.

See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 21.

1436. Effect of estoppel—Sale by pawnor—Entrusted with dock warrants by pawnee.]—The pawnee of coffees, lodged in the West India Docks, & entered there in the pawnee's name, gave up to the pawnor certain delivery notes thereof called dock warrants, having indorsed them with an order for the delivery of the goods to —, in exchange, not for cash, which he might have had, but for a cheque for the debt on pawnor's banker, which cheque was dishonoured; the pawnor having contracted to sell the goods to pltf., received payment for them, & gave to pltf. the delivery notes, with the blank above deft.'s signature for the name of the person to whom they were to be delivered:—Held: (1) deft. having entrusted the pawnor with his signature to a blank, purporting to authorise the delivery of the goods, & enabled him thereby to induce faith to a contract for the sale of the goods, & to obtain payment for them from pltf., it must be considered that the contract of sale was deft.'s contract, & the payment, a payment to deft. (2) The ct. guarded against any inference that, according to a practice which has obtained since the erection of the West India Docks, an indorsement on these delivery notes or dock warrants was, of itself, & without making the wharfingers parties to the order, capable of transferring any property in the goods therein described.—ZWINGER v. SAMUDA (1817), 7 Taunt. 265; 1 Moore, C. P. 12; Holt, N. P. 395; 129 E. R. 106.

1437. — Sale by mortgagor—Mortgagee concealing charge.]—An American ship, subject to a mtge. made in America, which vested the legal title to the ship in an American citizen, was sold in England. The evidence proved that the American law did not require notice of an incumbrance upon an American ship to be indorsed upon her register. There was conflicting evidence as to whether it was customary to make such indorsement, or whether purchasers in England were accustomed, from a clean register, to presume the non-existence of incumbrances. Notice of the incumbrance in question was, with the privity of the mtgee., intentionally kept of the ship's register, in order to facilitate her sale, from the proceeds of which the mtgee. was to be paid off:—Held: by intentionally concealing his charge, the mtgee. had disabled himself from setting up his legal title as against the purchaser for valuable consideration with no direct notice of the incumbrance.

A ship is not like an ordinary personal chattel, it does not pass by delivery, nor does the possession of it prove the title to it (TURNER, L.J.).—HOOPER v. GUMM, McLELLAN v. GUMM (1867), 2 Ch. App. 282; 36 L. J. Ch. 605; 16 L. T. 107; 15 W. R. 464; 2 Mar. L. C. 481, L. C. & L. J.

1438. Contract cancelled—Goods remaining in possession of intended purchaser—Right of owner to sue in trover.]—A contract for goods was put an end to by both parties, but the goods were in the possession of the intended purchaser. The value rising, he converted them to his own use, & offered the former price. The owner demanded the increased price; & on non-payment held deft. to bail "for goods sold & delivered." This does not prevent him from suing in trover.—PARRY v. DAWSON (1796), 3 Anst. 710; 145 E. R. 1015.

1439. Sale to so called secretary of non-existent company—In belief of company's existence—Subsequent sale by secretary.]—Pltfs. having received an order for goods purporting to be signed by the secretary of a co. which really had no existence at the time, forwarded the goods to the order of the so called secretary in the belief that the co. existed. He sold the goods to defts. from whom pltfs. sought to recover them:—Held: as there had been but one side to the contract into which pltfs. had intended to enter there had in fact been no sale, & the property in the goods remained in pltfs.—STAR CORN MILLERS SOCIETY v. MOORE & Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 751, C. A.

There was no such person as H., & N. represented that there was with the intention of obtaining the car for his own benefit. N. afterwards through an intermediary sold the car to defts. for £110. Before N. got possession of the car he had been convicted of theft & other offences, but that was not known to any of the parties. While N. was in possession of the car he obtained an appointment as car salesman to a firm of motor engineers. In an action by pltf. against defts. for the return of the car or its value & damages for its detention:—Held: (1) N. had obtained the car from pltf. by larceny by a trick, pltf. never having given any real consent to his having or passing the property therein, & pltf. should succeed in the action unless defts. had some valid defence thereto; (2) defts. could not set up the defence that under above Act they had acquired

The logs being in custody of a boom co., orders were given to deliver them as agreed. E., a dealer in lumber, telephoned the owner asking if he had them for sale & was answered "No, I have sold them to K." E. then purchased a portion of them from K. who did not pay the owner therefor & he brought an action of trover against E.:—Held: the owner having induced E. to believe that he could safely purchase from K. could not afterwards deny the authority of the latter to sell.—*PEOPLES BANK OF HALIFAX v. 1443. Title of innocent transferee or pledgee—Innocence of transferee question for jury.]—A., an agent for the sale of manures on commission, had been employed in that capacity by deft., a manure dealer, & being indebted to deft. on balance of account in a sum which he was unable to pay, it was arranged that he should obtain manures from other persons & send them to deft. in discharge of his debt. He accordingly purchased of pltf. a quantity of manure “at three months’ credit to sell again,” which by A.’s direction was sent by pltf. to A. at the F. station, where they were received & taken away by deft., to whom A. had forwarded the delivery note. On the trial of an action by pltf. against deft. to recover the value of the goods, the judge stopped deft.’s counsel from calling deft. as a witness, & told the jury that, if they thought A. represented himself to pltf. as an ordinary buyer on sale for profit, & that he was not so, but that he procured the goods for the purpose of handing them over to deft., that would be a fraud upon pltf., & he would be entitled to the verdict, even though deft. were no party to the fraud:—Held: that was a misdirection on the part of the judge, & the question of deft.’s bona fides in the matter ought to have been left to the jury.—*DANTEC v. 1450. ———.—]—S. was the agent of L., a wine merchant in Spain, & was induced by the fraudulent representations of three persons acting in collusion to enter into separate contracts with them for the sale of wine. S. transmitted the orders for the wine to L., who shipped the wines, & sent the bills of lading to S.; the bills of lading were handed by S. to the three persons respectively on account of the contracts entered into with them. The wine so obtained was deposited with debts., a dock co., who issued warrants for the same; some of the wine therein mentioned was made deliverable to the order of one of the three persons, & the rest to the order of another of them. The warrants were then pledged with pltf.s. to secure advances. L. afterwards served notice upon debts. not to part with the wine; thereupon debts. refused to give up the wine when it was demanded of them by pltf.s. who commenced actions claiming damages in addition to the value of the wines:—Held: as the wine had been obtained by fraud from S., the agent of L., with a power to sell, the property in it passed to the three persons, who before the fraudulent contract was annulled could confer a title upon pltf.s., & L. must be barred upon pltf.s. undertaking to account to him for the value of the wine after deducting their advances.—ATTENBOROUGH v. 1453. ————.]—Pltf., having had no previous dealings with the firm, & knowing them only by reputation, applied at the place of business of "Gandell & co." for orders for goods; the firm then consisting of Thomas Gandell only, & being managed by Edward Gandell, a clerk. On pltf. asking to see Messrs. Gandell, Edward Gandell presented himself & so conducted himself as to lead the pltf. to suppose that he was one of the firm of Gandell & co., & had authority to order goods on their behalf, which was not the fact. Pltf. sent goods, according to Edward Gandell's order, to the place of business of Gandell & co., an invoice being made out by Edward Gandell's direction, to the name of "Edward Gandell & co." Edward Gandell unknown to pltf. carried on business with Todd at another place; & the goods were, within three or four days of their delivery, pledged with deft., with a power of sale, to secure advances bond fide made by him to Gandell & Todd, & he sold them under the power without notice from pltf.:—Held: there was no contract of sale, inasmuch as pltf. intended to contract with Gandell & co. & not with Edward Gandell personally, & Gandell & co. were not contracting parties; no property therefore passed, & pltf. was entitled to recover the value of the goods from deft.—*HARDMAN v. 1454. ————.]—The purchaser of a chattel takes it, as a general rule, subject to what may turn out to be informalities in the title. By a purchase in market overt the title obtained is good against all the world. If not so purchased, though purchased bond fide, the title obtained may not be good against the real owner. Where the original owner has parted with the chattel to A. upon a de facto contract, though there may be circumstances which enable that owner to set aside that contract, the bond fide purchaser from A. will obtain an indefeasible title. The question, therefore, in many such cases will be, was there a contract between the original owner & the intermediate person. L. was a manufacturer in Ireland; Alfred Blenkarn, who occupied a room in a house looking into Wood Street, Cheapside, wrote to L., proposing a considerable purchase of L.'s goods, & in his letter used this address—"37, Wood Street, Cheapside," & signed the letters, without any initial for a Christian name, with a name so written that it appeared to be "Blenkiron & co." There was a respectable firm of that name, "W. Blenkiron & co.," carrying on business at 123, Wood Street. L. sent letters, & afterwards supplied goods, the letters, the goods, & the invoices accompanying the goods, being all addressed to "Messrs. Blenkiron & co., 37, Wood Street." The goods were received by Blenkarn at that place, & disposed of to defts., who were entirely ignorant of the fraud:—Held: no contract was made with Blenkarn, even a temporary property in the goods never passed to him, so that he never had a possessory title which he could transfer to defts., who were consequently liable to pltf. for the value of the goods.

If it turns out that the chattel has come into the hands of the person who professed to sell it, by a de facto contract, that is to say, a contract which has purported to pass the property to him from the owner of the property, there the purchaser will obtain a good title, even although afterwards it should appear that there were circumstances connected with that contract, which would enable the original owner of the goods to reduce it, & to set it aside, because these circumstances so enabling the original owner of the goods, or of the chattel, to reduce the contract & to set it aside, will not be allowed to interfere with a title for valuable consideration obtained by some third party during the interval while the contract remained unreduced (LORD CAIRNS, C.).—*CUNDY v. amount sold to them, the remaining 860 quarters being left in the warehouse unseparated from the bulk, & they pledged the 850 quarters to the M. Payment for the first 250 quarters was duly made by R. to claimants, but their subsequent bills were dishonoured, & claimants instructed the Dock Authority not to allow any of the remaining 850 quarters to leave the warehouse. R. then became insolvent. Claimants had by sales to various other purchasers disposed of the whole of their wheat in the warehouse except the 850 quarters which had been sold to R.'s claimants, as unpaid vendors, & the M. Bank as pledgees, both claimed the 850 quarters, & at the instance of the Dock Authority an interpleader issue was ordered to be tried to decide which of them was entitled. than that sold to R. had been delivered to the other purchasers, & that sold to R. remained alone in the warehouse, that sold to R. became by the process of exhaustion ascertained goods within Sale of Goods Act, s. 16, & the property in the wheat passed to R. & their pledge to the bank became effective.—*WAIT & JAMES v. Pltfs. made no delivery on Apr. 17, & defts. on the following day rescinded the contract, & refused subsequent tenders of the goods. Pltfs. having brought an action for non-acceptance:—Held: (1) if on the true construction of the contract pltfs. were bound to commence the delivery on Apr. 17, defts. were entitled to rescind for the failure to deliver on that day.

(2) The rule of construction applicable in general to all written contracts is, that they are to be construed according to the real intention of the parties, to be collected from the language they have used; that effect is to be given, if possible, to every word used, & that every word is to be interpreted according to its natural & ordinary meaning, unless such construction would be contrary to the manifest intention of the parties, or would necessarily lead to some contradiction or absurdity. But this rule, though applicable to contracts in general, must be received with some qualification, when the contract or a portion of the contract in question consists of an incomplete sentence, ambiguous in its terms, & upon which a literal construction of every word would either be impracticable, or would leave the contract indeterminate & uncertain. Such is the case with the contract in question, which I think is to be construed according to what we can collect to have been the substantial intention of the parties, applying our common sense, & such knowledge as we may possess, to the language in which they have expressed themselves (KELLY, C.B.).—*CODDINGTON v. SECT. 1.—GENERAL DUTIES OF SELLER AND BUYER.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 27.

1471. Duty of seller to deliver—Seller leaving premises on which goods are lying—Goods left behind.—A tenant was bound either to consume the hay on the demised premises, or for every load of hay removed to bring two loads of manure. On quitting possession of the premises, he sold part of a rick of hay then left standing to a purchaser, without mentioning his liability to bring manure. The incoming tenant refused to allow the purchaser to take away the hay until the manure was brought. After an interval of a month, during which time the hay had been considerably damaged, the latter consented that it should be removed; the purchaser, however, then refused to accept or pay for the same:—Held: although the bringing on the manure was not a condition precedent to the carrying off the hay, as between the landlord & tenant, still, that after the tenant had a right to refuse to permit the hay to be removed till after the manure was brought on, & as the vendor had not enabled the purchaser to remove the hay in the first instance, he was not entitled to recover the price.—SMITH v. CHANCE (1819), 2 B. & Ald. 753; 106 E. R. 540.

1472. —.]—(1) On a contract for the manufacturing & supply of goods from time to time, to be paid for after delivery, if the purchaser, having accepted & paid for a portion of the goods, gives notice to the vendor not to manufacture any more as the purchaser has no occasion for them & will not accept or pay for them, the vendor having been desirous & able to complete the supply, such vendor may, without manufacturing & tendering the rest of the goods, maintain an action against the purchaser for breach of the contract. Proof of such notice by the purchaser will entitle pltf. to recover, on a count alleging that he was ready & willing to perform the contract, & that deft. refused to accept the residue of the goods, & prevented & discharged pltf. from supplying them, & from further executing the contract. Such notice is a prevention, though there be no other act of obstruction.

(2) Where, by the terms of such a contract, the goods were to be delivered at stated periods, but they were not all delivered at the respective times, the purchasers not countermanding them, but requesting, from time to time, that the supply might be delayed, & finally the purchasers refused to accept any more:—Held: damages might be given for the whole quantity remaining on hand, though consisting in part of quantities which, without being actually countermanded, had, by desire of the purchasers, been kept back at the times appointed for delivery; & the jury were properly directed to give such damages as would leave pltf. in the same situation as if defts. had fulfilled their contract.—CORT v. AMBERGATE, ETC., Ry. Co. (1851), 17 Q. B. 127; 20 L. J. Q. B. 460; 17 L. T. O. S. 179; 15 Jur. 877; 117 E. R. 1229.

Pltf. shipped on board one steamer 4,511 quarters to answer the first contract, & 1,139 quarters to answer in part the second contract. Pltf. also shipped on board another steamer a sufficient quantity of oats to complete the second contract. In an action by A. against B. for not accepting & paying for the casks & bags, the declaration averred that A. duly paid B. for the said cement, & for the casks & bags; & that, although A. was ready & willing, & tendered & offered, to return the casks & bags, B. refused to accept or pay for them. B. pleaded that A. did not duly pay B. for the said cement, casks, & bags, & that A. was not ready & willing to return the casks & bags to B. within a reasonable time:—Held: (1) a payment of the price of the cement by A. after an action brought against him, was a payment according to the contract, so as to entitle him to complain of a breach of the contract on the part of B.; (2) A. was not bound to prove that he was ready to return all the casks & bags, the allegation being in this respect divisible.—NELSON v. After the meal he said that he was unable to pay, & that he had, as was the fact, only one halfpenny in his possession:—Held: he could not be convicted of the offence of obtaining goods by false pretences, but he was liable to be convicted of obtaining credit by means of fraud.

No one can doubt that deft. did incur a debt or liability; he ordered goods under circumstances which implied a promise to pay for them. Then did he obtain credit? We are of opinion that he did. The prosecutor might have said that he would not furnish him with the goods until he paid the price, or he might have insisted on payment in actual exchange for each article as it was supplied, but he did neither; he furnished the goods under circumstances which passed the possession & property in them, relying on the readiness & ability of deft. to pay. It does not seem to matter that the period of credit was a short period; he trusted deft. & parted with his goods without insisting on prepayment or upon interchangeable payment. We think therefore that credit was obtained (LORD RUSSELL, C.J.).—R. v. JONES, [1898] 1 Q. B. 119; 67 L. J. Q. B. 41; 77 L. T. 503; 46 W. R. 191; 14 T. L. R. 79; 42 Sol. Jo. 82; 19 Cox, C. C. 87, C. The true construction of such a contract is, that the goods should be delivered to the purchasers at the quay, & that the cash should not be paid till after the completion of the delivery of the goods, by their having been weighed & the invoice made out. Therefore, no action lies by the seller against the broker for a breach of duty in delivering the goods to a purchaser, who became bkpt., without receiving payment of the cash at the time of the delivery.—GOWER v. declaration stated a contract to purchase 40 tons of oil the last 10 tons whereof, "to be delivered in all Dec., to be paid for on delivery"; with an averment of readiness to deliver "in the month of Dec.," & a traverse of that averment. It appeared that the contract was not for any specific oil, that no particular oil had been appropriated, & that the brokers on each side had arranged for the previous deliveries. On Dec. 11, deft.'s brokers wrote to him to know when he would receive the last 10 tons; he directed a delivery to certain parties; but this was not communicated to pltf. & on Dec. 22, deft. stopped payment, towards the end of the month, upon which deft.'s brokers wrote to pltf. to the effect that the oil would not be received; & he then, before the end of the month, resold at a loss, & wrote to deft., demanding the difference:—Held: he was entitled to recover, the jury finding that he would have been ready to deliver the oil contracted for if deft., or his brokers, had required it & offered the money.—*BAKER v. "Payment to be made in cash, before delivery if required, in fourteen days, less 2½ per cent., from dates of notices of readiness to deliver." Declaration, setting out the contract, & averring that pltf. in pursuance thereof, delivered in Mar., & defts. accepted about one-half of the lard in part fulfillment, & afterwards that pltf. gave due & proper notice that they were ready to deliver the remainder yet defts. did not accept the other half, or any part thereof. Pleas, traversing the averment of due & proper notice, & of readiness & willingness to deliver the remainder of the lard. At the trial, there being no evidence that pltf. delivered the remainder of the lard, or gave notice of readiness & willingness to deliver it during Apr., the judge directed a nonsuit:—Held: the nonsuit was right.—*DAVIES v. 1515. Effect of declaration of insolvency of one party.—A mere declaration of insolvency by one party to a contract does not entitle the other party to put an end to the contract; but if the declaration is made in such circumstances as to show that the insolvent either cannot, or does not intend to carry out the contract, it is open to the solvent contractor to rescind the contract.—MESS v. DUFFUS & CO. (1901), 6 Com. Cas. 165.

1516. Repudiation of contract by purchaser.—By three contracts in writing dated in Sept., July, & Sept., 1919, applts. agreed to buy from the several resps., who were three firms of tea growers in India, their 1919-1920 crops of tea at prices to be regarded by the rate of exchange, delivery to be made in bonded warehouses in London, but the contracts did not bind the sellers to deliver by any particular date; any dispute under the contracts to be settled by arbn. Early in 1920 several ships carrying consignments of tea under these contracts arrived in London, but, owing to the congestion at that port, were diverted by the Shipping Controller to various out ports in England & Scotland, where a further delay occurred owing to the congestion, & consequently, the sellers, at the date of the repudiation hereinafter mentioned, were not ready to deliver the teas in London. In May, 1920, the parties verbally agreed that the buyers would accept delivery of the diverted consignments at the out ports instead of London with an allowance of 3d. per lb., but this agreement was unenforceable by reason of its non-compliance with Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4. In July, 1920, the buyers repudiated their liability to accept the tea discharged at out ports under any of the three contracts on the ground that a reasonable time for delivery under those contracts had expired, & the sellers accepted this repudiation by asking for an arbitrator. The arbitrator found that a reasonable time for delivery of the tea under the said contracts had not expired, & awarded damages against the buyers for breach of contract:—Held: (1) the parol contract of May did not operate as an implied rescission of the original contracts, there being no evidence of any intention to rescind; (2) the buyers having wrongfully repudiated the contracts, the sellers were not bound to prove that they were ready & willing at the date of the repudiation to deliver the teas in London, & the awards ought to stand.—*BRITISH & BENINGTONS, LTD. v. The price, which was above £10, was then specified, & B. warranted the horse to be sound. It was not delivered, however, until the following Tuesday, when the money was paid:—Held: there was not any complete contract until the delivery of the horse, & consequently the contract was not void within Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7), s. 2, but assuming it to be void, the purchaser having no knowledge of the fact that the vendor was exercising his ordinary calling on the Sunday, had not been guilty of any breach of the law, & therefore was entitled to recover back the price of the horse.—BLOXSOME v. 1526. Bankruptcy of seller before delivery—Contract of sale bona fide—Buyer's right to delivery.]—B. & C. by verbal communing, agreed to make advances to A. on the security of a ship he had nearly completed building on his own account, provided A. entered into an absolute contract of sale of the vessel. An unqualified contract of sale was completed by which A. agreed to complete & deliver to B. & C. the vessel for a price to be paid in two instalments, with power to B. & C. in the event of A. failing to complete the contract to enter into possession of the vessel & complete it, or sell it. In a correspondence between A. & B. & C. & a shipbroker & others subsequent to the contract & for the purpose of getting a purchaser for the vessel, the ship was called A.'s ship; but no letters were written to any persons who were induced by their means to deal with the ship upon the footing of its being the property of A. From the date of the contract B. & C. gave, by cheques at various dates, advances to A., taking a receipt on account of the purchase of the ship; at the same time bills for like amounts were accepted by A. The advances equalled the full price of the ship. Before it was completed or delivered A.'s estate was sequestrated. The bills accepted by A. were paid by B. & C. In a question between A.'s trustee & B. & C.:—Held: where there was an absolute bona fide contract of sale of an article which was not delivered before the bkpcy. of the seller, the right of the buyer under the contract to have delivery could not be defeated by proof that the character of buyer had been conferred on him merely for the purpose of his having a security for money intended to be advanced to him.—M'BAIN v. Bills of lading were sent to A. & bills for the value of the goods were forwarded by the consignor to D. the same being drawn in D.'s favour upon A. & professing to be on account of the goods consigned. After the bills of lading arrived, but before the bills of exchange were accepted or the cargo reached England, A. became bkpt. The assignees of A. took possession of the cargo; & D. petitioned to establish a specific lien upon the cargo in respect of the bills, but, two actions at law having been previously tried between the parties, in both of which the assignees were successful, the ct. ordered the petition to stand over, petitioners being at liberty to institute proceedings at law or in equity within six weeks, otherwise the petition to be dismissed.

The shipment of the coffee . . . was as completely a delivery to bkpts. as if it had been placed in their own hands. He could not hold that any contract of lien could be taken to have existed, or that if any such contract had been shown, the coffee could be held to be otherwise than in the reputed ownership of bkpts. Still there was enough to induce him to say that he would not preclude petitioners from attempting to establish their title at law or in equity (KNIGHT-BRUCE, V.-C.).—*Re HIGGINSON, Ex p. A. being indebted, received an advance of money

1544. ———.—[—Deft., an innkeeper, ordered of the traveller of pltfs., who were wine & spirit merchants at Bristol, two puncheons of rum & one hoghead of brandy, at six months' credit; they were to lie in bond in pltfs.' warehouse till wanted. Pltfs. thereupon sent deft. an invoice, specifying particular casks of brandy & rum as sold to him, stating that they were free from warehouse rent for six months. Pltfs. kept a warehouse for their own & other people's goods, & they transferred the particular casks to deft.'s name in their warehouse books, as sold to him. After that entry pltfs. could not get the casks out of the bonded cellar in which they were. Deft. did not pay the price when the credit had expired, but asked pltfs. to take the goods back or to sell them for him. This pltfs. refused to do. Deft. never had the casks out of pltfs.' cellar. In an action, by pltfs., for the price:—Held: there was some evidence of a receipt & acceptance of the casks by deft. so as to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17, for there was ground for saying that the character in which pltfs. held the casks had changed from that of mere vendors to that of warehousemen & agents of deft. —*CASTLE v. Before the hemp was weighed off, or bill accepted or drawn, the purchaser stopped payment:—Held: the weighing being a term precedent to the delivery, the sale was incomplete, & the vendor might recover back the hemp.—*SHEPLEY v. The dock co. refused to deliver the timber except upon an order from A. C. became bkpt. without having obtained such an order; & the bill was dishonoured:—Held: (1) there had been no constructive delivery to C., so as to put an end to B.'s lien on the timber for the price; (2) B. was not estopped, by having given a delivery order, from disputing the operation of such order as a constructive delivery of the timber.—*LACKINGTON v. h. Condition of putting goods

1555. — Order for "about" quantity required—Trade usage.]—Under a contract to sell & deliver goods in a warehouse in Liverpool, the giving a delivery order of "about" the quantity is a sufficient delivery, evidence of a known usage of warehouse keepers not accepting delivery orders in any other form being admissible.—MOORE v. 1557. Demand of freight on arrival—No stipulation in contract.]—A. contracted to supply to B. 1,000 tons of coals, delivered at Rangoon, at 45s. per ton, alongside craft, etc., as might be directed by B.; payment, one-half of invoice value by bill at three months, on handing bills of lading & policy of insurance to cover the amount, or in cash at 5 per cent. discount, at A.'s option, & the balance in cash on right delivery at Rangoon. A. chartered a ship, & in pursuance of his contract shipped on board 1,166 tons of coals, & delivered to B. the bill of lading & a policy of insurance covering half the invoice price, & B. paid to A. the half invoice price. On the voyage the ship became disabled, & part of the coals were obliged to be thrown overboard; & the master chartered another vessel, & transhipped the residue, 850 tons, on board of her, at 45s. per ton freight to Rangoon. On arrival at Rangoon the master of the latter vessel offered the coals to B.'s agent on payment of the 45s. per ton freight. This offer being refused, the master put up the coals for auction, & B.'s agent bond fide bought them at a price of £1 5s. a ton:—Held: (1) the property in the coals passed to B. on A.'s shipping the coals on board & delivering to B. the bills of lading & policy of insurance; & A. having done this was entitled to retain the half of the invoice price that had been paid to him; (2) A. was bound to have delivered to B. at Rangoon so much of the coals as had escaped the sea risk & arrived there; (3) the offer of the coals at Rangoon on the terms of paying 45s. per ton freight was not a delivery by A. according to his contract, consequently A. was not entitled to demand from B. any part of the residue of the invoice price; (4) semble, B. might sue A. for the non-delivery at Rangoon, & recover as damages the difference between £1 5s. per ton, which B. actually paid to get the coals, & the £1 2s. 6d. which B. was to have paid under the contract.—BRITISH & INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION Co. v. 1558. Carriage by specified routes—Variation of routes—Validity of tender of goods—Effect of custom.]—By a contract dated Mar. 27, 1916, in the printed form of contract for cost, freight, & insurance issued by the Rubber Trade Assocn. of London, Apr. 1913, with the necessary additions thereto written in, appts. agreed to sell to resps. 25 tons of plantation rubber, c.i.f., "to be shipped during the months of Mar./Apr. 1916, by vessel or vessels, steam or motor, from the East to New York direct &/or indirect, with liberty to call &/or tranship at other ports"; any question regarding quality to be settled by arbn., which was to be demanded & held within a certain time "after the arrival of the vessel"; samples to be taken in the presence of representatives of buyers & sellers, & "failing sellers naming their representatives on or before arrival of vessel," the buyers' samples to be accepted; & payment to be by "cash against documents in London on or, at buyers' option, before arrival of vessel or vessels at port of discharge."

The sellers made a declaration under the contract of 15 tons as having been shipped per steamship via Seattle under a through bill of lading, which stated that the goods were shipped at Singapore for New York via Seattle, a port on the Pacific coast of the United States, whence they would be sent by rail to New York.

The buyers objected to this declaration as irregular, upon the ground that the rubber was to be conveyed by sea to New York. The dispute was referred to arbn. under a clause in the contract, & the arbitrators found that after the outbreak of war great difficulty was experienced in obtaining space for shipments from the East, & in consequence in Oct. 1915, shipments to the eastern States of the United States, which had before gone the whole distance to New York by water, began to be made by steamer to a port on the western seaboard of the United States, whence they were transmitted by rail to destination; that at the date of the contract this route from the East by sea & rail from the Pacific seaboard was well known to those engaged in the trade as one of the usual routes for rubber sold on contracts in the form of the one in question; that there was, at the date of the contract, such a course of business established as would make it within the contemplation of the parties that the rubber might come by this route; & that goods forwarded by such a route would be a good tender under the contract. They accordingly awarded that the tender was good, & that the buyers were bound to accept the same:—Held: the contract provided for a sea carriage from the port of loading to New York; the usage, assuming it was a usage, found by the arbitrators was inconsistent with the terms of the contract, & therefore was not applicable thereto; & the tender was not a good tender & the buyers were not bound to accept the same.—Re SUTRO (L.) & Co. & HEILBUT, SYMONS & Co., [1917] 2 K. G. W. & co. sold to P. B. & co. in London a quantity of Coromandel nigerseed "shipment from Bombay &/or a port or ports on the Coromandel coast during Feb. &/or Mar. 1925, by a steamer or steamers direct or indirect with or without transhipment via Suez Canal." The steamer by which sellers intended to ship the seed was delayed, & in order to effect shipment within the contract period the sellers dispatched the seed on a steamer which was on an outward voyage from London to Calcutta & which would in due course return from Calcutta to London. The buyers refused to accept the seed when tendered, on the ground that shipment had not been made in accordance with the contract; & the dispute was referred to arb'n. The Committee of Appeal of the Incorporated Oil Seed Assoc. now stated a case under s. 19, Arbitration Act, 1889 (c. 49), for the opinion of the ct. on the question whether the tender of the sellers was a good tender or not:—Held: the tender was a valid tender if in the opinion of the Committee of Appeal the steamer was on a voyage to London at the time when the seed was loaded on board.—WOODROFFE (GORDON) & Co., LTD. v. 1562. Condition to load f.o.b. at a certain port—

Right of parties to waive.]—An English firm sold a quantity of wool to buyers in the United States by a written contract under which delivery was to be f.o.b. Liverpool. The buyers claimed to be entitled to waive the condition in the contract as to delivery & to take delivery of the wool before it was put on board ship:—Held: a term of a contract as to the mode of delivery is not a condition entirely for the benefit of either party to the contract, & neither party can waive such term without the consent of the other party, & therefore the buyers were not entitled to demand delivery of the wool otherwise than on board ship at Liverpool.—MAINE SPINNING CO. v. 1563. Direction to carrier to deliver at certain place—Delivery at place agreed between carrier & consignee.]—Although the consignor of goods directs a carrier to deliver them to the consignee at a particular place, the carrier may deliver them wherever he & the consignee agree.

Pltf. having sold corn by sample, to be delivered to the purchaser at his mill, at B., sent the corn by defts., railway carriers, paying the freight to B. station, & an extra sum for cartage from B. to the mill. In pursuance of general orders previously given by the consignee to defts., but not communicated to pltf., defts. left the wheat at their station at B., & advised the consignee of its arrival, who examined it, but left it there for two months, & afterwards refused to take it. The wheat was deteriorated in quality during that time:—Held: defts. were not liable to an action by pltf. for not delivering at the mill, as the non-delivery there was pursuant to the orders of the consignee, & it made no difference in this respect that pltf. could not recover the price of the wheat from the purchaser in consequence of there being no acceptance of the wheat within the meaning of Stat. Frauds.

Semble: the rights of pltf. & the purchaser were not affected by the non-delivery at the mill.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. v. BARTLETT (1861), 7 H. & N. 400; 31 L. J. Ex. 92; 5 L. T. 399; 26 J. Averment, that defts. duly delivered divers portions of the goods according to agreement, & that pltf. was not required by defts. to accept delivery of the residue. Breach, non-delivery of the residue. Plea, that defts. were ready & willing to deliver the said residue according to the agreement, whereof pltf. had notice, & that pltf. was not ready & willing to accept, & would not accept, & did not require delivery of the same:—Held: before defts. were bound to deliver the goods, pltf. was bound to name the ship or the place where he desired the goods to be delivered, & a tender of the goods by defts. was not a condition precedent to their delivery, or to the ship or place being named by pltf.—*SUTHERLAND v. The launch was not in fact ready to be delivered until three months after the agreed date, but defts. did not during that time notify to pltfs. that there was any vessel at the port of London on board of which they required the launch to be delivered:—Held: as defts. were not ready & willing to take delivery before pltfs. were ready & willing to deliver, defts. were not entitled to deduct from the price the agreed damages for delay in delivery.

Before they [defts.] can claim these damages they must show that they were ready & willing to take delivery, & that they gave notice to pltfs. of the name of the vessel (WILLIAMS, L.J.).—FORREST & SON, LTD. v. ARAMAYO (1900), 83 L. T. 335; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 134, C. A.

The seller sent them to the port of shipment, but, owing to the failure of the buyer to name an effective ship, he was prevented from putting them on board:—Held: this default of the buyer did not have the effect of placing the seller in the same position as if he had put the goods on board, & in the absence of an agreement that the price should be payable on a day certain irrespective of delivery he could not sue for the price.—*COLLEY v. C. Shipment to Named Port.

1570. Delivery refused at named port—Ship proceeding to another port—Conditions providing for carriage beyond destination—Vessel touching at named port.—Pltfs. bought from defts. under a c.i.f.

contract, for delivery in London, 100 tons of block gambier, which defts. declared per their steamship Selandia sailing from Singapore. The block gambier had been shipped under a bill of lading making it deliverable in Copenhagen. On the arrival of the vessel in London defts., not having received the bill of lading, gave pltfs. delivery orders against payment, but when these were presented delivery was refused, & the vessel took the goods on to Copenhagen. More than a month later the goods were delivered to pltfs. in London. Meanwhile, pltfs. had suffered loss by a fall in the market. Pltfs. also bought under a c.i.f. contract, for delivery in London, a parcel of pepper from G. M. & co., who had bought it from defts. & who declared it per the same vessel sailing on the same voyage. The bill of lading provided for delivery at Copenhagen, & it was indorsed by defts. "To be delivered in London" & was then handed to pltfs. against payment. Delivery in London was refused, & the pepper was carried on to Copenhagen & thence back to London. Meantime, there had been a fall in the market, with a resulting loss to pltfs. The conditions in both bills of lading provided that the ship might carry the goods beyond their destination, & that the shipowners were not to be responsible for loss arising from late or wrong delivery or overcarriage. In an action by pltfs. to recover from defts. the amount of the loss:—Held: as in the case of the block gambier defts. did not deliver a bill of lading answering the requirements of the contract they could not in that case rely upon the conditions in the bill of lading, & as in the case of both the block gambier & the pepper the conditions did not apply where the vessel had actually been in the port of destination of the goods for the purpose of delivering cargo, defts. were liable for the loss.—*SARGANT & SONS v. 1571. War declared by country in which port lies—Port not yet in hands of enemy.—By a contract of sale made in June, 1914, the sellers sold to the buyers about 10,000 cases of bean oil shipped afloat from an Oriental port by steamer or steamers, direct or indirect, & with or without transshipment, at the price therein named, cost, freight, & insurance to Antwerp. The buyers were to pay the full amount of provisional invoice made out on net shipping weights by cash without discount against shipping documents on or before arrival of steamer or steamers in Antwerp or three months after notice of arrival of documents in London, whichever might happen first. In July, 1914, the sellers declared to the buyers in part fulfilment of the contract 3,000 cases of bean oil which had been shipped on the Glencarn, a British vessel, for Antwerp, & rendered to the buyers provisional invoices showing the amount due computed in accordance with the contract. Early on Aug. 4, 1914, war broke out between Belgium & Germany, & the following midnight between Great Britain & Germany. On Aug. 5, 1914, the sellers notified the buyers in writing that the documents relating to the 3,000 cases had arrived in London & asked for payment on Aug. 27 in accordance with the contract. On Aug. 18, 1914, the sellers tendered the shipping documents to the buyers. At that date Antwerp was still in possession of the Belgians. The ship had since war broke out been seized by the Germans & detained at Hamburg. The buyers did not take up the documents & contended that they were discharged from their obligation to do so by reason of the seizure of the ship by the Germans:—Held: as between the buyers & sellers there was no illegality in tendering documents calling for delivery at Antwerp, which at the time had not fallen. Nor was there any illegality in calling upon the shipowner to deliver at Antwerp, for if he could have got his ship there it would have been perfectly legal to do so, & the fact that it had become impossible did not prevent the tender of the documents from being valid: therefore, the buyers were not discharged from their obligations to take up the documents.—Re WEIS & Co., LTD. & CREDIT COLONIAL ET COMMERCIAL, ANTWERP, [1916] 1 K. Pltf. replied, that deft. agreed to sell, & sold to pltf., & pltf. agreed to buy, & then bought of deft. the grass in the said close, with liberty to enter with his horse & cart & to take away the same:—Held: (1) pltf. was bound to prove a valid contract binding in law; & as the contract in question was not in writing, it was not available in support of the replication; (2) this contract might have been pleaded as a licence.—*CARRINGTON v. tract to be void on non-arrival—Whether non-arrival amounts to breach of contract.]—Contract in London for the sale of tallow from a particular ship, on arrival, to be taken from the King's landing scale; if it should not arrive on or before a given day, the bargain to be void.

The ship was wrecked off the coast of Scotland, but the cargo was saved, & might have been forwarded to the port of London by the given day: the vendors resold the tallow in Scotland; the purchasers did not offer them any indemnity if they would bring the tallow to London:—Held: under these circumstances, the vendors were not answerable for the non-delivery of the tallow.—*IDLE v. 1580. Extension of time—New agreement.]—The declaration alleged that pltf. was lawfully possessed of a house for the residue of a term of six years, & of certain goods, furniture, etc. therein, & that pltf. agreed to assign the lease of the house to deft. at a certain price, & the furniture, etc. at a valuation, possession to be delivered on a certain day; & averred that she was, from the time of making the agreement, ready & willing to assign her interest in the house, & to deliver up possession of the goods at a fair appraisement. Deft. pleaded pleas traversing the readiness & willingness to assign the interest in the house, & to deliver up the furniture. It was proved at the trial that the greater part of the house & furniture were destroyed by fire shortly after the agreement, & before the time for its completion. The agreement provided that either party making default should pay to the other £500 as liquidated damages. After the making of the agreement, but before the day for its completion arrived, the parties agreed, by an indorsement on the former agreement, to enlarge the time for its performance for a few days:—Held: this amounted to a fresh agreement.—BACON v. SIMPSON (1837), 3 M. & W. 78; Murp. & H. 309; 7 L. J. Ex. 34; 150 E. R. 1064.

1581. ——— Implied from subsequent events.]—On June 15, 1874, deft. bought of pltf. 100 tons of pig iron, to be delivered, "25 tons at once, & 75 tons in July next." By the end of July, 75 tons in all had been delivered. There was no evidence of any request by deft. to pltf. before the end of July to delay the delivery of the last 25 tons; but it was proved that in Oct. deft. verbally requested pltf.'s manager to deliver them, in consequence of which they were forwarded in the course of the same month to deft., but he declined to receive them. In an action against deft. for refusing to accept the 25 tons, deft. pleaded, amongst other pleas, that pltf. were not ready & willing to deliver the iron according to the contract:—Held: inasmuch as the vendors were not shown to have withheld the delivery of the 25 tons in consequence of a request by the vendee before the expiration of the agreed time, viz., in July, the action was not maintainable upon the original contract; & that the subsequent conversation with the vendors' manager could not be relied upon either as a new contract or as an arrangement for an altered time of delivery.—

1582. ——— Implied from conduct of buyer.]—On Apr. 27, A., who sold flour on commission for deft., a miller, verbally contracted to sell pltf. 150 sacks at 29s. per sack, no time being named for delivery. Deft. repudiating A.'s authority, on the ground that his instructions to him limited him to 30s. per sack, disputes arose between the parties; & eventually, on June 8, deft. agreed to deliver the flour, which he accordingly did, & sued for & recovered the price. Pltf. then commenced an action against deft. in the county ct. to recover the difference between the contract price & the price at which he had been obliged to purchase other flour, on deft.'s default. The judge found that the flour had not been delivered within a reasonable time; but he held that either pltf. must be considered to have allowed deft. an extension of time for the performance of the original contract, or that the delivery of the flour had relation to a new contract taking effect from the time when deft. signified his intention to execute the order; & that deft. was entitled to judgment:—Held: the decision of the county ct. judge was correct.—WILLIAMS v. WHEELER (1860), 8 C. B. N. S. 299; 141 E. R. 1181.

1583. ——— After expiry of time fixed for delivery.]—Under a contract for the sale of goods to be delivered within a certain period of time the buyer's right to require delivery within that period may be waived even after that period has expired; but it would seem that, where the contract is within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, the waiver must be evidenced by writing. Where, after the expiration of the period of delivery fixed by a contract for the sale of goods, the buyer by his letters & conduct leads the seller to entertain the belief that the contract still subsists & to act upon that belief at serious expense to himself, a new agreement may be implied that the period for delivery is extended & that delivery may take place within a reasonable time of which notice is to be given by the buyer to the seller. By a contract coming within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, & duly made in writing, pltf. agreed to sell to deft. 11,000 lb. of cotton yarn, delivery to begin in Sept. 1918, & to be at the rate of 1,100 lb. per week, failure to deliver within the stipulated time to render the contract liable to cancellation by deft., & incomplete deliveries not to be taken into account. Delivery should have been completed by Nov. 15, 1918. Pltf. delivered no yarn till Oct. 26, 1918, when he delivered 550 lb., & thereafter on various dates from the end of Nov. 1918, to the end of Feb. 1919, he delivered seven further quantities averaging upward of 500 lb. each. During all this period & the early part of Mar. 1919, deft. by his letters complained of the delay & asked for better deliveries, but thereby led pltf. to entertain the belief that the contract still subsisted, & to act upon that belief at expense to himself. On Mar. 13, 1919, deft., having given no previous notice requiring delivery in any reasonable time, wrote to pltf. cancelling the order, & he thereupon refused to take any further quantity of the yarn. Pltff. brought an action against deft. for damages for refusing to take the remainder of the yarn:—Held: although time was of the essence of the contract with respect to delivery which should, primâ facie, have been completed by Nov. 15, 1918, yet deft. by his letters, though written after that date, had waived his right to insist that the period for delivery terminated on that date; deft. was also thereby estopped from alleging that that period terminated on that date; the letters between the parties implied a new agreement that delivery might be made within an extended & reasonable period, of which notice was to be given by deft. to pltff., & as deft. had given no such notice, no period had been fixed within which pltff. should make delivery; & in these circumstances deft. had no right to cancel on Mar. 13, 1919, & pltff. was entitled to damages to be assessed as at that date.—*HARTLEY v. The colliery guarantee provided that the vessel in this case should be loaded in sixteen days; demurrage to be at the rate of £13 per day. The sixteen days expired on Mar. 31, 1898; on Apr. 9 a strike occurred at the colliery & on May 24 the colliery co. wrote to say they could not load the vessel:—Held: there had been a breach of contract on May 24 & not before; & the purchasers were not bound to exercise their option for the benefit of the vendors.—*UNION S.S. 1585. — Failure to deliver within extended time.]—Where, in a contract for the sale of goods which are to be delivered by a specific date, time is of the essence of the contract, & the vendor fails to deliver by that date, & the purchaser after such failure elects not to avoid the contract but agrees with the vendor to substitute a later date, the failure to deliver by such later date constitutes a breach of the contract. If the purchaser, having already resold the goods before delivery to himself, has to fulfil such contract of resale by means of other goods, & thereby makes a greater profit than if there had been no breach, this fact does not reduce the damages which he is entitled to recover from his vendor.—*MOHAMMAD HABIB ULLAH (SHEIK) v. 1. Delivery on Sunday.]—Where unforeseen circumstances be prevented from delivering the whole of the cargo originally shipped this contract to be void as regards the undelivered portion." The cargo was loaded in the Giovanni Albanese in Sept. 1905, but in the course of the voyage the vessel became a total loss, & the sellers gave pl'tfs. notice that the cargo would not come forward as it has been abandoned to the underwriters. Part of the cargo was, however, reshipped, brought by another vessel to this country, where it arrived in Mar. 1906, but pl'tfs. declined to accept it. In an action on the policy:—Held: (1) the parties had elected to choose one of the two forms in which an insurance on profits is effected, the form chosen did not require that the goods should be brought to their destination in the ship in which they were loaded, & consequently there had been no loss of that portion of the cargo which was tendered to pl'tfs., as it had arrived at its destination within the attached clause, although it did not arrive in the original ship; (2) further, the delay that occurred in not delivering the cargo till Mar. 1906, was not such a delay as frustrated the adventure.—WYLLIE v. POVAH (1907), 23 T. L. R. 687; 12 Com. Cas. 317.

1596. General rule.—Delivery must be within reasonable time.]—A., the proprietor of a lead mine, called the Bog Mine, situate near Shrewsbury, sold to B., a lead merchant in London, by a written contract, "200 tons of Bog Mine lead, at £22 per ton, deliverable in the river Thames." The broker who made the contract stated at the time, in answer to a question by B., that the lead was ready for shipment. A few days afterwards B. applied to the broker to know whether A. would agree to allow the freight or insurance from Gloucester or Liverpool, to which A. agreed, but B. subsequently required the lead to be delivered in London. It appeared that Gloucester & Liverpool were the usual ports of shipment for London; but the Bog Mine lead was first brought by barges down the Severn from Shrewsbury to Gloucester. The lead was delayed a considerable time in this part of its transit by the lowness of the water, & when it arrived in London, B. refused to receive it, the price having fallen considerably. In an action by A. against B. for not accepting the lead, B. pleaded that pl'tf. was not ready to deliver it within a reasonable time, on which issue was joined. The broker stated, in addition to the above facts, that he had understood from A. that the lead was at Shrewsbury. The judge stated to the jury that it might be taken for granted that the understanding of the parties was, that the lead was ready for shipment at Gloucester or Liverpool; that this was confirmed by def't.'s application as to the freight & insurance; & if they thought it ought to have arrived in a shorter time, if ready for shipment at Gloucester or Liverpool, def't. was entitled to a verdict:—Held: (1) the parol representation of the broker, that the lead was ready for shipment, was admissible in evidence, not to vary the written contract, but as one of the data from which the reasonableness of the time was to be determined; (2) the direction of the judge was warranted by the evidence.—*ELLIS v. 1597. ————.]—A sale of 12 puncheons of spirits distilled from molasses was bargained for, & 4 puncheons delivered. The buyer continued urging the delivery of the remainder, but the sellers delayed, until after an Act of Parliament was passed on Dec. 18, 1795, prohibiting distillation of spirits from molasses, & annulling all bargains or contracts for the delivery of such. The sellers refused to furnish the spirits, & in action, stated this defence, that having had three months to deliver, & the Act of Parliament having been passed in the interval, they were not bound:—Held: from the correspondence adduced, the sellers were bound to deliver the remaining puncheons within reasonable time, & therefore before Dec. 18, 1795, the date of the passing of the Act.—PHILIPS v. BLAIR & MARTIN (1801), 4 Pat. App. 256, H. L.

Defts. on its arrival warehoused the cotton, & sent pl'tfs. a delivery order. They refused to accept:—Held: this was a stipulation introduced in favour of the seller, & not a condition precedent, upon the performance of which the vendee could insist; & the contract amounted to a contract to deliver at a reasonable time & circumstances, the article to be at the buyer's charge from the time of its landing on the quay.—*NEILL v. 1604. Misquotation in invoice.]—Deft., a Liverpool cotton merchant, on Apr. 2, 1872, authorised plffs., merchants at Liverpool & Bombay, to purchase 100 bales Salem's cotton at 8d. per lb., to be shipped by sailing vessel, & to draw for invoice amount at six months' sight; which drafts deft. engaged to accept, with shipping documents attached, & to pay same. On Apr. 22, plffs. wrote from Bombay that the Salem's cotton would be shipped as soon as it arrived there. On June 14, plffs. wrote again from Bombay, inclosing invoice of 100 bales Salem's cotton, at 8½d. per lb., & informing deft. that they had drawn upon him at six months' sight for the amount. On July 2, before receiving plffs.' letter & invoice of June 14, deft. wrote to plffs.' Liverpool house that he had waited more than a reasonable time, & that he declined to have anything more to do with the cotton. On July 10, deft. received plffs.' letter & invoice of June 14, & wrote again to plffs.' Liverpool house, calling attention to the price charged in the invoice, & refusing acceptance of their draft. The following day plffs. apologised for what they called the clerical error in the price, said they were prepared to rectify the mistake, & also tendered other cotton shipped at the time deft. wished. Deft. refused to have anything more to do with the matter. In an action for payment for this cotton:—Held: under the circumstances plffs. could not recover.—JEFFERSON v. QUERNER (1874), 30 L. F. Delay Caused by Purchaser.

1605. Failure to supply plans as required.]—On Nov. 28, 1844, deft. contracted to supply pltf. with 150 tons of cast iron girders, according to drawings to be provided by pltf.'s architect, 50 tons to be delivered on or before Dec. 31, 1844; 50 tons, on or before Jan. 28, 1845; & 50 tons, on or before Mar. 31, 1845, provided the drawings for the first 50 tons were delivered within three days, & the drawings for the remainder, within three weeks. Some plans were sent to deft. on Dec. 5, & on Dec. 16, an order was given to him for girders, amounting to about 14 tons. On Mar. 13, after deft. had declined to perform the contract, by reason of the delay, further plans were furnished, & a further order given for girders, amounting to about 50 tons, & the girders ordered on Dec. 16 were demanded. The jury found that the drawings were not delivered within a reasonable time:—Held: the contract was entire; & as pltf. had failed to furnish drawings for the whole 150 tons, within a reasonable time, he could not maintain an action for any non-delivery of girders.—KINGDOM v. COX (1848), 5 C. B. 522; 17 L. J. C. P. 155; 10 L. T. O. S. 328; 12 Jur. 336; 136 E. R. 982.

1606. Ships sent out by purchaser—One ship not having sufficient capacity.]—In assumpsit by the sellers against the buyers for the breach of two contracts for the shipment, at a foreign port, of two several quantities of rye meal, the declaration stated, that, "after the making of the contracts, & before the performance of them, or of any part thereof it was agreed between plffs. & defts. that the two contracts should be deemed & taken to be, & to operate as, one contract & should be performed as if same had been one contract for the amount of the two quantities of meal":—Held: this allegation was not sustained by proof that the buyers had sent out three vessels to receive the meal, the first of which was not of capacity sufficient to take on board the quantity mentioned in the first contract. & they had received a separate bill of lading of the cargo brought home by that vessel, & accepted a bill drawn on them for the stipulated proportion of that particular cargo. By two contracts, entered into at different times, defts. engaged to ship at Cronstadt, for plffs., 250 tons & 350 tons respectively of rye meal—each contract stipulating that the shipment should be made at the first open water, allowing a fair & reasonable time for the arrival out of the vessel & getting the goods down to Cronstadt; that payment should be made one-third at three months from the date of bill of lading; but that, should the vessel not arrive in time for the goods to be shipped before June 30, or the sellers not be able to procure a ship by that date, the sellers should draw for the remainder as specified. In an action by the buyers against the sellers for the breach of these two contracts, defts. pleaded, amongst other pleas, that plffs. were not, at & after the arrival of the vessels at Cronstadt, & from thence at & until a fair & reasonable time had elapsed for getting the goods down to Cronstadt, ready & willing to buy & accept & pay for the meal, in manner & form as alleged; & that plffs. had not performed the contracts & promises in all things on their part to be performed, in manner & form as alleged:—Held: the circumstance of the buyers having sent out three vessels, neither of which was of capacity sufficient to take on board the quantity mentioned in either contract, & which arrived at the port of loading at different times, did not entitle defts. to a verdict upon these two issues; but the buyers were entitled to maintain an action against the sellers, although they had not sent out one vessel to receive the quantity mentioned in each contract.—MENIAEFF v. READE, READE v. MENIAEFF (1849), 7 C. B. 139; 18 L. J. C. P. 145; 12 L. T. O. S. 376; 137 E. R. 57.

1607. Order for goods "as required"—Failure to give notice of requirements.]—A contract under seal recited that defts., a railway co., were "desirous of being supplied with 350,000 sleepers of Dantzie or Memel timber." This contract was based upon a specification, prepared by the co., in which it was stated, that, "the number of sleepers required under this specification is 350,000; one-half will have to be delivered in 1847, & the remainder by Midsummer, 1848"; that, "the deliveries are to be made either by stacking the sleepers upon a wharf, or properly loading them into a boat or barge, or other vessel, as may be directed by the resident engineer"; & that the payments were to be made upon the engineer certifying the due delivery of each cargo. By the contract, plffs. covenanted to supply the co. with 350,000 sleepers of the quality & description mentioned, & to deliver them within the times mentioned in the specification, "as & when, & in such quantities, & in such manner, as the engineer of the co. should, by order or requisition in writing, from time to time, within the period limited by the specification, direct or require." The engineer was to be at liberty, at any time before the complete execution of the contract "by the delivery of the whole number of 350,000 sleepers," to alter their size, form, or construction, or to vary the times of delivery "of any of the sleepers which should not then have been delivered." Defts., in consideration of the premises, covenanted to pay to plffs., "for or in respect of the sleepers hereinbefore contracted to be supplied," a certain price, upon their engineer certifying the due delivery of each cargo. It was further agreed that £2,000 of the price should be retained by the co. until two months after their engineer should have certified that "the whole of the 350,000 sleepers hereinbefore agreed to be supplied by the contractors, shall have been supplied":—Held: this was a positive contract by plffs. to supply, & by defts. to take & to pay for, the whole number of 350,000 sleepers; & plffs. were entitled to notice of the times when the sleepers would be required.

The third plea traversed an averment in the declaration that defts. had notice that plffs. were ready & willing to supply the sleepers, & alleged that defts. had no notice of any sleepers being ready for them at the port of delivery:—Held: the allegation of readiness & willingness was unnecessary, for, plffs. were not bound to deliver until they received the orders or directions of the co.'s engineer.—GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. v. HARRISON (1852), 12 C. B. 576; 22 L. J. C. P. 49; 19 L. T. O. S. 259; 16 Jur. 565; 138 E. R. 1032, Ex. Ch.

1608. Request for postponement of shipment.]—Count on a contract by plff. to deliver to deft. at C. a cargo in Mar. Breach, that deft. would not accept, or pay for, the goods. Pleas: (a) Non assumpsit; (b) That plff. was not ready or willing to deliver at C. in Mar. Issue thereon. At the trial, it appeared that deft. had by letter requested plff. to postpone the shipment for deft.'s convenience; that the ship arrived in C. on the evening of Mar. 31, & consequently that the cargo was not ready for delivery till Apr. The judge, on plff.'s application, amended the count by inserting an averment that, at deft.'s request, plff. delayed the shipment, & deft. promised to accept a delivery of that shipment with reasonable speed, & exonerated plff. from delivering in Mar. Deft. objected to the amendment being made, & requested a postponement of the trial, which the judge refused. Thereupon deft. refused to alter his plea, or appear further; & the jury, under the judge's direction, assessed the damages. On a motion for a new trial:—Held: whether the discretion of a judge at nisi prius in making an amendment to raise the real point in controversy, & in imposing terms, be reviewable in banc or not, it was in this case properly exercised; no injustice being suggested to have been sustained by deft. in consequence of the refusal to postpone the trial, the discretion of the judge in that respect ought not to be reversed.—TENNYSON v. O'BRIEN (1855), 5 E. & B. 497; 26 L. T. O. S. 59; 119 E. R. 565.

1609. Demand for inspection—No expert sent to inspect goods.]—Resps. sold to applts. a quantity of iron. Before delivery was completed applts. informed resps. that they would require inspection before accepting delivery of the iron which was still undelivered; & it was agreed that applts. should send an expert to inspect the iron at the works of the manufacturer. Applts., though repeatedly requested by resps. to do so, failed to send an inspector as arranged, & the iron remained undelivered. Ultimately applt. repudiated the contract on the ground of delay & claimed damages for failure to deliver. The judge before whom the claim was tried, gave judgment for applts. On appeal, judgment was reversed & judgment was entered for resps., & applts. now appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: whether the contract was originally a contract to deliver within a fixed time or to deliver within a reasonable time, resps.' obligation to have the iron dispatched from the works was suspended until applts. had sent their inspector, an event which never happened; & by demanding inspection applts. had extended the time allowed for delivery, & such extended time had not expired when applts. repudiated the contract.—*POTTS (W.) & CO., LTD. v. Defts. were aware that the machine was wanted by J. at the end of Aug., but they did not finish the "gun" until the latter part of Sept. J. then refused to accept the machine from pltfs. The delay on the part of defts. was owing to the circumstance that at the time of undertaking to manufacture the "gun" they had not a foreman competent to prepare certain patterns, without which it could not be made:—Held: defts. had committed a breach of their contract, & pltfs. were entitled to recover damages for the loss of profit upon the contract with J., & for the expenditure uselessly incurred by them in making other parts of the machine.—

1617. "Not ready to sail."—In a contract for the sale of flour free on board the first class steamer T., from S. to C., it was stipulated that the vessel was "to sail from L. to S., on or before Dec. 1, 1855, accidents excepted; if such should happen; & the vessel not be ready to sail on Dec. 4, buyers to have the option of cancelling the contract." The vessel was prevented from sailing from L. on Dec. 1, by an accident, & she was not ready to sail until six o'clock in the evening of Dec. 4, when she was prevented by stress of weather, & did not sail till the following day:—Held: the meaning of the contract was, that if she were prevented sailing by an accident on Dec. 1, the buyers should not have the power to cancel the contract if she were "ready to sail" on Dec. 4, although she did not actually sail until after that day.—SMYTH v. SCHILIZZI (1856), 4 W. R. 460.

1618. "During the season."—Sale of coal, "cost, freight, and insurance to Cronstadt, including craft risk to St. Petersburg town . . . shipment to be made during the season":—Held: "during the season" referred not to the average or ordinary time during which the river was closed by ice, but to the actual time at which in that particular year it was closed.—LESSING v. HORSLEY (1891), 7 T. L. R. 352, C. A.

1619. "Expected ready to load."—A clause in a contract that a ship is "expected ready to load" at a given date does not mean that the ship must be in such a position, whether that position be known to the parties or not, that she will, according to all probable reckoning, be able to load by the date indicated. It means that there must be an honest belief, founded on reasonable grounds, in the minds of the sellers making the representation that she will be able to load at that date. Where such a representation was made, & there were no reasonable grounds for making it, & the ship was not ready to load until a long time afterwards, there was a breach of condition entitling the buyers to avoid the contract.—SANDAY & Co. v. KEIGHLEY, MAXTED & Co. (1922), 91 L. J. K. B. 624; 127 L. T. 327; 38 T. L. R. 561; 66 Sol. Jo. 437; 15 Asp. M. L. C. 596; 27 Com. Cas. 296, C. A.

SUB-SECT 5.—PROOF OF DELIVERY.

1620. Entries in books—By servants in usual course of business—Entry by deceased servant.—If a tradesman uniformly obliges his servants to subscribe in his books an account of the goods they deliver, proof of the subscription of a servant who is dead is evidence of the delivery of the goods contained in the account subscribed.—*PRICE v. 1621. — Witness having no clear recollection of actual event.—When a boy went to pltf.'s warehouse with a cart, & delivered a letter, containing an order for some wine, & a clerk swore that he had removed on the day in question from his master's cellar some wine corresponding in quantity & quality with that mentioned in the order, that he had made an entry of this in the day-book according to the usual course of the business, that he himself had superintended the packing of the wine, & that the word "nil" would have been entered in the day-book, if it had not been sent according to the order:—Held: sufficient evidence of a delivery to the boy, although the witness had no recollection of seeing the wine given to the boy, or put into the cart.—SHEPPARD v. RADFORD (1839), 3 J. P. 770.

1622. — By person other than witness.—To prove the delivery of goods in the shop of a trader, an entry made in his books, though not by the witness, under what circumstances it may be evidence.—DIGBY v. STEDMAN (1795), 1 Esp. 328; 170 E. R. 373, N. P.

1623. — Accounts of stock in excise books.—Qu: whether accounts of stock kept in the excise books are evidence between third parties, as to the delivery of goods?

Copies of such accounts may be given in evidence. Seem, on the ground that the originals are public books, but in such case, the copies produced must be proved by a witness, who has examined them with the originals, & can swear to their accuracy.—DUNBAR v. HARVIE (1820), 2 Bli. 351; 4 E. R. 356, H. L.

c. Burden of proof.—Where the delivery of goods after a sale is as consistent with deft.'s account of the transaction, delivery on approval, as it is with pltf.'s, the trial judge is in error in regarding the delivery as a fact which requires explanation & throws the burden on deft.—JOHNSON v. DURANT (1905), 37 N. S. R. 471.—CAN.

1627. Copies of accounts in excise books.—DUNBAR v. HARVIE, No. 1623, ante.

1628. Accounts specifying goods supplied—Passed by managing committee of company—Evidence of amount supplied.—Pltf. brought his action for goods supplied in 1866 to a mining co. conducted on the cost-book principle, of which co. deft. was a shareholder. The last change of partners was in Dec. 1865. To prove his claim, pltf. proved an order by the purser to supply goods, gave general evidence of supply, & put in evidence accounts specifying the amount supplied, submitted by the purser to & passed by the managing committee of the co. It appeared also that payments had been made in 1866, which pltf. had appropriated to a debt incurred before Dec. 1865:—Held: (1) there was evidence of the amount supplied; (2) pltf. was justified in his appropriation.—GEAKE v. JACKSON (1867), 36 L. J. C. P. 108; 15 L. T. 509; 15 W. R. 338.

The dock co. are liable to A., although he neglected to apply to B. till four months afterwards, when the supposed time of credit expired. & although A. might, after discovering the fraud, have recovered possession of his hides from another person.—*LUBBOCK v. 1634. ———— By giving delivery order.—Pltf. bought of deft., & paid for, hops which lay at the warehouse of F., having been placed there by a party who had sold them to deft. After the sale, pltf. was informed that the hops were at F.'s, had them weighed there, & took away part. Some days after, he applied for the residue; but they had been taken away in the meantime by a creditor of the first seller. Deft. had not given pltf. a delivery order, nor had he demanded one:—Held: F. had the residue of the hops in his possession as agent to pltf., & deft. was not liable to pltf. for the non-delivery of them; therefore, pltf. having brought assumpsit for the non-delivery, & deft. having pleaded that he did deliver; a misdirection to leave it to the jury whether deft. ought to have given pltf. a delivery order.—WOOD v. TASSELL (1844), 6 Q. B. 234; 115 E. R. 90.

1635. ———— Within reasonable time.—Where there is a contract for the sale of goods, although described as lying in the possession of wharfingers, carriers, etc., subject to their lien for charges, yet there is an implied undertaking on the part of the seller that they shall be delivered to the purchaser, on his application, within a reasonable time, & readiness to pay the charges thereon; & if, upon such application, the delivery is refused, the seller will be liable for damages to the purchaser.—*BUDDLE v. A delivery of goods to a carrier or wharfinger with due care & diligence is sufficient to charge the purchaser; but he has a right to require, that in making this delivery due care & diligence shall be exercised by the seller (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—*BUCKMAN v. 1640. ———— To sign delivery order—Regulation of dock company.—Wine was entered in the books of the London Dock co. in the name of S., who was clerk to pltf.s, a firm of wine merchants. The bills of lading for the same wine were in the hands of H., who was consignee of the wine from Spain. A request by H. for the return of part of the wine to him was refused by pltf.s. until H. returned to pltf.s. an acceptance of theirs which had been given for part of the wine in question. H. then exhibited the bills of lading to the dock co., & the solrs. of the latter wrote to pltf.'s solrs., intimating that they must deliver the wine to H., although entered in the name of S., unless an order were obtained by pltf.s. restraining such delivery. By the printed regulations of the dock co. it is provided that orders for delivery cannot be acted upon unless signed by the party in whose name the goods stand in the co.'s books. Pltf.s. filed a bill for an injunction against the co. & H.; & praying for costs against both defts. An injunction was granted; & afterwards by arrangement, upon the bill of exchange being returned, the wine was ordered to be delivered up to deft.—WRIGHT v. LONDON DOCK CO. (1858), 32 L. T. O. 1641. Duties of buyer—To pay duties.—WINKS v. HASSALL, No. 2062, post.

1642. ———— To present warrant—Meaning of "presentation."—A. contracted to sell 1,000 tons of iron to B., & indorsed & delivered to him a document in the following form, addressed to A., & signed by certain ironmasters: "We hold at your disposal 1,000 tons of grey forge pig iron, of 2,240 lb. to the ton, which we engage to deliver to your order, free of all charge, into boats, on the presentation of this document, duly indorsed by you":—Held: "presentation" meant "delivering up" the document to the ironmasters; & consequently, that a plea that deft. could not & did not procure the iron according to the tenor & effect thereof, was not sustained by proof that the document had been shown to the ironmasters, & they refused to deliver the iron unless the document was previously left with them.—BARTLETT v. HOLMES (1853), 13 C. B. 630; 1 C. L. R. 159; 22 L. J. C. P. 182; 21 L. T. O. S. 104; 17 Jur. 858; 1 W. R. 334; 138 E. R. 1347.

C. Attornment by Third Person.

1643. Position pending attornment.—Goods were shipped by pltf. from abroad to this country, on the verbal order of deft., at a price exceeding £10. They were sent to a shipping agent of pltf.'s in London, who received them & warehoused them with a wharfinger, informing deft. of their arrival. The wharfinger handed to the shipping agent a delivery warrant, whereby the goods were made deliverable to him or his assignees by indorsement, on payment of rent & charges. The agent indorsed & delivered this warrant to deft., who kept it for several months, & notwithstanding repeated applications, did not pay the price of or charges upon the goods, nor return the warrant, but said he had sent it to his solr., & that he intended to resist payment, for that he had never ordered the goods; & that they would remain for the present in bond:—Held: there was no such delivery to & acceptance by deft. of the goods, as to satisfy Stat. Frauds, s. 17.

This warrant is no more than an engagement by the wharfinger to deliver to the consignee, or anyone he may appoint; & the wharfinger holds the goods as the agent of the consignor, who is the vendor's agent, & his possession is that of the consignee, until an assignment has taken place, & the wharfinger has attorned, so to speak, to the assignee, & agreed with him to hold for him. Then, & not till then, the wharfinger is the agent or bailee of the assignee, & his possession that of the assignee, & then only is there a constructive delivery to him (PARKE, B.).—*FARINA v. 1650. Expenses borne by both parties—Customary commission of agent—Sale of colonial produce.]—Where colonial produce is sold, through the intervention of a broker; by the usage of trade in London, which was held to be valid, he is entitled in all instances, if there be no express stipulation to the contrary, to $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. commission from the purchaser as well as from the seller.—EICKE v. MEYER (1813), 3 Camp. 412; 170 E. R. 1429, N. P.

1651. Expenses borne by purchaser—River dues—Ship provided by purchaser.]—A special Act imposes certain river dues in respect of goods carried on the river Ribble, for every time of passing certain lines, without saying by whom they are to be paid. Harbours, Docks & Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), which is incorporated with the special Act, provides, by sect. 42, that rates in respect of goods shipped or unshipped within the limits of the harbour, dock or pier shall be paid, in case the goods are to be shipped, before shipment, or in case they are to be unshipped, before removal from the premises of the undertakers. In the case of coals which A. had sold to B. & contracted to deliver on board a ship to be provided by B. :—Held : even if sect. 42 of the general Act be applicable to dues under sect. 71 of the special Act, A. was not liable to the co. for such dues; & A. was not the shipper of coals so as to be "owner" within the interpretation clause of the general Act.—RIBBLE NAVIGATION CO. v. 1652. — Cost of dredging—To enable ship to come alongside wharf.]—Applts. purchased from resps. a cargo of oil in bulk to be shipped by a named steamer & to be delivered by the steamer into buyers' storage tanks, & the buyers undertook to receive the oil from the steamer through their pipe lines at the discharging berth. By a contract between the buyers & a dock co. the preferential use of a certain wharf in the Thames was granted to the buyers, & facilities for pipe lines to the storage tanks were also given to them, & the dock co. agreed to clear out a berth to enable a steamer

m. Expenses borne by purchaser—Customs duty.]—Plffs. bought from deft. certain coal, shipped to deft. at Toronto from a foreign port, & then lying on board the vessel in the Welland Canal. A sale note was given, stating only the quantity & price, & the time by which it was to be taken out of the vessel :—Held : deft. was not obliged 350 feet long to lie safely alongside, but the purchasers had no right as between themselves & the dock co. to have vessels of greater length than 350 feet at the wharf. The sellers knew that the buyers' pipe lines were at that wharf, & they contracted with reference to that place of discharge. The steamer named in the contract of sale was 471 feet long & could not, therefore, lie at the berth. Dredging operations had accordingly to be undertaken, & then the steamer came alongside & delivered her cargo. The sellers did not know that the berth was too short for the steamer, & the buyers did not know the length of the steamer, though both parties might by inquiry have ascertained these facts:—Held: on the true construction of the contract the buyers undertook to procure for the sellers the right to have the steamer at the berth for the purpose of discharging there, & if the dredging operations were necessary in order to get the consent of the dock co. to the steamer coming alongside, the expenses of dredging must be borne by the buyers as being an expense necessary to enable them to perform their contract.—*Re SHELL TRANSPORT & TRADING CO. & CONSOLIDATED PETROLEUM CO. 1653. — Cost of stevedoring.]—Where the consignees of two cargoes of coal sold them to the Govt. on c.i.f. terms, the latter guaranteeing their discharge, "cost of stevedoring to be paid by the Govt.," & it appeared that the consignees had previously to the knowledge of the purchasers agreed with the shipowners to effect the discharge, "steamer paying 1s. per ton towards cost of same":—Held: the finding of the cts. below that the purchasers' contract had been fulfilled by payment of the said cost less the stipulated contribution by the shipowners would not be disturbed.—*WHITE v. 1654. — Storage—Consignee not ready to take delivery.]—Goods were shipped at Antwerp for delivery at Southampton under a bill of lading by which freight was payable before delivery. The bill of lading also contained the following clause: "The goods to be taken from alongside by the consignees as soon as the vessel is ready to discharge & to receive the same as fast as the steamer can deliver . . . or otherwise they may be landed, put into lighters, or stored by the steamer's agents . . . in either case at the expense of the consignees." At Southampton the consignees were not ready to take delivery when the steamer discharged, nor did they then pay the freight, whereupon the shipowners stored the goods in a warehouse, giving the warehousemen notice that the goods were landed for ship's purposes, were to be held for the shipowners, & were not to be delivered without their, the shipowners', instructions accompanied by their release for the freight. No amount of freight was mentioned in the notice so given to the warehousemen:—Held: the storage of the goods in the warehouse by the shipowners was not a warehousing of them under

M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), so as to entitle the consignees to obtain delivery by depositing under sect. 495, sub-sect. 2, of the Act the amount of the freight with the warehousemen.—*DENNIS & SONS, LTD. v. The goods were discharged in London elsewhere than at Buyers' Wharf, & under the "London Clause" in the bill of lading certain charges were paid:—Held: these London charges fell upon the seller, & not upon the buyer.

The sellers apprised the purchasers of the delivery, who elected to pay for the goods by a bill, which the sellers having drawn, was duly accepted by the purchasers. The sellers retained the mate's receipts for the goods, but the master signed the bill of lading in the purchasers' names, who, while the bill they accepted was running, became insolvent:—Held: trover would not lie for the goods, for on their delivery on board the vessel, they were no longer in transitu, so as to be stopped by the sellers; & the retention of the receipts by the sellers was immaterial, as after their election to be paid by a

1661. —.]—If the goods dealt with by the contract were specific goods, it is not denied but that the words "free on board," according to the general understanding of merchants, would mean more than merely that the shipper was to put them on board at his expense; they would mean that he was to put them on board at his expense on account of the person for whom they were shipped; & in that case the goods so put on board under such a contract would be at the risk of the buyer whether they were lost or not on the voyage (BRETT, M.R.).—*STOCK v. The vendor, residing at Stockton-on-Tees, on Dec. 31, 1838, shipped 127 tons of coals by the George & Henry, & on that day wrote to the vendee at Southampton, to state what he had done, & that he should draw on him for the amount. The George & Henry was sunk at sea on Jan. 6, 1839, which fact the vendor, on Jan. 10, communicated to the vendee. The vendor's bill was not presented to the vendee until after he knew of the loss, & he then refused to accept it, but he did not by any other act repudiate the contract as performed by the vendor:—Held: his silence, after receiving the vendor's statement of the mode in which he had performed the contract, operated either as an admission by him that the contract was duly performed, or as evidence of acceptance of the substituted performance for that originally contracted for.—F. The remainder are not so large. On receipt of your order I will forward sample." Deft. replied, "You may send me 6 cheddar cheese as a sample." Pltf. sent 6 with a letter, saying, "I was obliged to change one of the cheese, fearing it would not bear carriage." Deft. afterwards wrote, "If remainder are as good as sample, you may send me 30 more. You may also send sample of the smaller ones, & say the lowest price for cash." Pltf. replied, "Your favour to hand. I will send the cheese to-morrow. I could not say less than 78s., they ought to be 80s." Pltf. then forwarded to deft. 12 larger cheeses, & 6 smaller ones, which deft. refused to accept, as he said, on account of badness of quality:—Held: he was bound to accept the 12 larger ones, but not the 6 smaller ones, as the contract for the larger ones did not mean 30 absolutely, but as many of the lot of 30 as were of the same quality as the samples previously sent, & as the 6 smaller ones were sent as samples merely, which deft. was not bound to keep.—SYMES v. If executed, please regard this as a new order for 100 more." Pltfs., acting on this order, purchased in the market, & paid for, 94 bales of the specified cotton. No direct evidence was given as to the then state of the Pernambuco market; but the circumstances of the case rendered it reasonable to infer that pltfs., in purchasing 94 bales, had done all that was practicable. Deft. declined to pay for these bales on the ground that his order had been inadequately performed:—Held: the order must be construed with reference to the state of market for which it had been given, & it had been substantially complied with.—JOHNSTON v. (1) L. wrote to J. & co. at Mauritius, desiring them to ship him 500 tons of sugar at 26s. 9d., to cover freight & insurance: adding, "50 tons more or less of no moment, if it enables you to get a suitable vessel. I should prefer the option of sending vessel to London, Liverpool, or the Clyde; but if that is not compassable, you may ship to either Liverpool or London." I. & co. could only procure, at the price mentioned, nearly 400 tons, which they purchased from several different persons, & shipped in one vessel to Liverpool. L. refused the cargo, & wrote to cancel the order so as to prevent any further shipment:—Held: under the circumstances L. was bound to accept the cargo.

(2) The terms at a price, "to cover cost, freight & insurance, payment by acceptance on receiving shipping documents," are very usual, & are perfectly well understood in practice. The invoice is made out debiting the consignee with the agreed price, or the actual cost & commission, with the premiums of insurance, & the freight, as the case may be, & giving him credit for the amount of the freight which he will have to pay to the shipowner on actual delivery, & for the balance a draft is drawn on the consignee which he is bound to accept, if the shipment be in conformity with his

1680. ———.—The declaration stated that deft., carrying on business at Liverpool, sent & delivered to plffs., carrying on business at New Orleans, an order to purchase cotton for deft., viz. if they, plffs., could purchase cotton at such price as to stand in, laid down in Liverpool, all charges included, Liverpool fair 9½d. per lb., good fair 10d. per lb., then plffs. were to purchase cotton to the extent of 200 bales, & if at ½d. per lb. under those prices, 300 bales; if a ¼d. per lb. under those prices, 400 bales; & to draw bills of exchange on deft. for the amount of the price. The declaration then averred that plffs. accepted the order, & promised to perform all things therein contained to be by them performed, & in consideration of the premises deft. promised to accept & receive the cotton to be purchased by plffs. in pursuance of the order, & to accept any bill drawn by plffs. on deft. for the price of the cotton. The declaration then averred that plffs. did purchase a large quantity, to wit 206 bales of Liverpool fair cotton, at such a price as to stand in 9½d. per lb. laid down in Liverpool, all charges included: it then stated the shipping of the cotton, that plffs. drew a bill for the amount, that afterwards, to wit on etc., the said cotton arrived in Liverpool, & then was ready to be delivered to deft., of all which he had notice; & plffs. afterwards, to wit, on etc., requested deft. to accept the said cotton, & to accept the said bill of exchange, which was then presented to deft. for acceptance. Breach, that deft. did not nor would accept the cotton so purchased, or any part of it, & did not nor would accept the bill, or pay or satisfy plffs. for the said cotton:—Held: the declaration was ill, as it did not sufficiently show that plffs. were ready & willing to deliver the 200 bales only.—DIXON v. FLETCHER (1837), 3 M. & W. 146; Murp. & H. 342; 150 E. R. 1092.

1681. Effect of acceptance of goods—Buyer liable only for part retained.—Deft. ordered of plff. two dozen of port & two dozen of sherry, with the understanding that, if it were not approved, he should return it. Plff. sent him four dozen of port & four dozen of sherry. Deft. was not satisfied with its quality, & returned the whole, except one bottle of the port & one dozen of the sherry, with a letter to plff., in which he stated that his order was for two dozen of each kind of wine; that he should not have refused to keep the four dozen if the quality had suited him, but that, as it did not, he returned the four dozen of port, minus one bottle, which he had tasted, & three dozen of the sherry:—Held: deft. was liable only for the price of the wine he actually kept.—HART v. J.—VOL. XXXIX.

1684 i. Waiver of objection to delivery.—Defts., with the knowledge that a consignment of goods was in excess of the quantity ordered by them, made no objection on that ground, though negotiations took place for a reduction in price, on account of delay, etc., but took into stock fifteen out of twenty-five cases sent. The other ten cases remained in bond till they were sold to pay duties:—Held: there was evidence on which a waiver of any objection as to the excess was properly found.—GOODYEAR RUBBER CO. v. d. Effect of retention of bill of lading after rejection of goods.—When the buyer of goods exercises his right, under Sale of Goods Act, R. S. 1890. ——— Words of estimate.]—A club established for the supply of coal to its members, by their rules, duly certified, appointed a secretary & treasurer. The duty of the secretary was, amongst other things, to receive the members' subscriptions, & pay them to the treasurer, & when necessary, to write to such merchant as the members might select for tenders for coals, to be delivered at the members' houses, & when the tender was accepted by the club, to draw up an agreement for the merchant to sign. The duty of the treasurer was, amongst other things, to pay the coal merchant as soon after every delivery as he should receive an order, signed by the secretary & chairman, & such order was to be given on the next Thursday night after each delivery. Pltf. having made a tender, which was accepted, to supply coals to the club, entered into a written agreement, signed by himself & the secretary, to supply 100 tons, "more or less," to be delivered at the members' residences, & he delivered 127 tons according to the directions given by the secretary. When the time for payment arrived there was only sufficient money in the hands of the treasurer, owing to the default of the secretary, to satisfy a portion of pltf.'s claim: that amount was paid to him, & he sued deft., a member of the club, for the residue:—Held: (1) deft. was liable. (2) the delivery of 127 tons was according to the contract, which specified "100 tons, more or less."—COCKERELL v. AUCOMPTÉ (1857), 2 C. B. N. S. 440; 26 L. J. C. P. 194; 3 Jur. N. S. 844; 5 W. B. was found to consist of 603 spars, of which only 496 averaged 16 inches:—Held: M. & co. were bound to accept the 496 spars at the rate agreed on, the words "say about 600 red pine spars" being words of expectation & estimate only, & not amounting to a warranty.—MCCONNEL v. At the same time of the verbal agreement the buyers stipulated that they should have the whole of the remainder of the cargo. On the same day the seller sent to the buyers a contract in writing by which he sold to the buyers "the remainder" of the cargo "more or less about 5,400 quarters Manitoba wheat . . . at Hull ex Clodmore." The buyers accepted delivery of about 5,400 quarters. The sellers had, in fact, made a miscalculation, & at the time of the sale he had 574 quarters more than 5,400 quarters in hand. Rules & conditions were indorsed on the written contract, of which condition 3 was as follows: "The word 'about' when used in reference to quantity shall mean within 5 per cent. over or under the quantity stated." The buyers contended that, having regard to the conditions, the most they could be compelled to accept was 5,400 quarters, plus 270 quarters, i.e. plus 5 per cent. on the 5,400 quarters:—Held: the words "more or less about 5,400 quarters" were merely words of estimate; the subject-matter of the contract was a sale of the whole of the remainder of the cargo, the governing words being "remainder"; & the buyers must accept the remainder, although it amounted to more than 5,400 quarters with a margin of 5 per cent.—Re HARRISON & MICKS, LAMBERT & Co., [1917] 1 K. in approximately equal quantities, delivered as their last monthly instalment a shipment of 455 tons short. In an action by the purchasers for damages for short delivery:—Held: there is a custom of the Newcastle coal trade that the word "about" gives to the vendors an option up to 5 per cent. in either direction, & the custom being proved, defts. had made no default in fulfilling their contracts, inasmuch as the word "about" referred to the total amounts to be delivered under each contract respectively, & not merely to the "last instalment."—*SOCIÉTÉ ANONYME L'INDUSTRIELLE RUSSO-BELGE v. The ship brought 350 quarters, & defts. refused to deliver any part unless plffs. would accept the whole. Plffs. abandoned the contract, & brought an action to recover back a sum of money which they had paid for 300 quarters:—Held: by the words "about," & "more or less," the parties could not be taken to have contemplated so large an excess as fifty over 300 quarters; at all events it lay on defts. to show that such an excess above the quantity named was in contemplation; & if from the obscurity of the contract they were unable to do so, their defence failed; semble: evidence of merchantile men as to the effect of the words "about," & "more or less," in such a contract, was not admissible.—*CROSS v. The ship having been compelled by stress of weather to put back to Calcutta, 18 of the bales were found to be damaged, & were sold. The sum payable for the 55 lbs. at the contract price would have been about 4s., but the sellers never claimed payment thereof. The buyers rejected the whole cargo solely upon the ground that the quantity tendered was 55 lbs. in excess of the contract quantity:—Held: as the quantity in excess was so trifling & the sellers had not claimed the price thereof, the sellers had substantially performed the contract, & the buyers were not entitled to reject the cargo under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 30 (2), which provides that, "where the seller delivers to the buyer a quantity of goods larger than he contracted to sell, the buyer . . . may reject the whole."—*SHIPTON, ANDERSON & CO. v. D. Quantity Specified by Reference to Particular Standard or Circumstances.

1707. Quantity ascertained by reference to particular standard—Ascertainment of standard rendered impossible—By buyer.—If a party entitled under a contract to receive a profit from another, by his own act so confounds the measure of that which he was to receive, that it can be no longer ascertained, he vacates his whole claim.

A. agreed to find sufficient coals for B.'s engine, to draw water from A.'s mine, & B.'s little coal, as they then stood. B. sunk to a lower seam, in draining which he drained the other two seams, but consumed for his engine more coal than before:—Held: A. was no longer bound to furnish any coal, because B. had destroyed the measure of sufficiency.—PRINGLE v. TAYLOR (1809), 2 Taunt. 150; 127 E. R. 1034.

1708. Quantity ascertained by reference to particular circumstances—Amount manufactured—Specified quantity mentioned.—Assumpsit on an agreement, by which deft. agreed to sell, & pltf. to purchase, all the naphtha which deft. might make from June 1 next, for & during the term of two years, say from 1,000 to 1,200 gallons per month, at the rate of 2s. 6d. per gallon, etc.; & it was agreed, that, should pltf. be desirous of dissolving the contract before the expiration of the term, he should be at liberty so to do, on giving deft. three months' notice. The declaration averred that the quantities of naphtha that deft. ought to have made during a period of ten months, under the agreement, at the rate of from 1,000 to 1,200 gallons per month, & to have sold & delivered to pltf., amounted to a much larger quantity than he had sold & delivered, viz. 7,000 gallons more; yet that deft. had not sold & delivered same to him:—Held: the declaration could not be sustained.—GWILLIM v. DANIELL (1835), 2 Cr. M. & R. 61; 1 Gale, 143; 5 Tyr. 644; 4 L. J. Ex. 174; 150 E. R. 26.

1709. ——— Buyer's requirements.—By an agreement under seal, pltf. engaged, during the period of three years, to supply defts., a gas co. incorporated by Act of Parliament, with such quantities of pipes, etc., as should, from time to time, during the period, be required by defts., at given prices:—Held: pltf. was bound to supply all such pipes as the co. might reasonably require for all such works as they were actually carrying on under the authority of their Act.—WHITEHOUSE v. LIVERPOOL GAS CO. (1848), 5 C. B. 798; 17 L. J. C. P. 237; 136 E. R. 1093.

1710. ——— Right to insist on quantities expressly stipulated for.—By a contract made between the Eastern Counties Ry. co. & defts., it was, amongst other things, provided that defts. should supply & the co. should purchase, subject to the terms & to the extent thereafter mentioned, all the coke that should be required by the co. for working their railways between London & Cambridge & London & Colchester. By the fourth clause the co. engaged to take from defts. 550 tons & 100 tons of coke weekly during the

ence to particular circumstances—Buyer's requirements.—For purpose of buyer's business.—By the terms of an agreement between a coal master & a co. for the manufacture of coal oil, the former became bound to supply to the latter as much canal coal, within certain limits, as they should "require":—Held: this did not mean as much as they should demand, but as much as they should require for the purpose of their manufacture.—NORTH BRITISH period of seventeen years; & they further agreed, that if they should require more than those quantities for the working of their railways they would take same from defts., with a proviso that, if they should require less than the stipulated quantities, the supply should be reduced accordingly, upon their giving defts. three months' notice. By the eleventh clause, the co. engaged that "so long as defts. should punctually & duly supply the coke & so long as same should be of the best quality they would abstain from making purchases of coke for their lines of railway aforesaid from any other persons:"—Held: the readiness & willingness of the co. to take from defts. all the coke they required for the purpose of their railways was not a condition precedent to their right to insist upon being supplied with the quantities expressly stipulated for; & consequently, the fact of the co. having bought coke from other persons afforded no answer to an action by them against defts. for a failure to deliver the quantities contracted for.—EASTERN COUNTIES RY. CO. v. PHILIPSON (1855), 16 C. B. 2; 24 L. J. C. P. 140; 25 L. T. O. S. 84; 139 E. R. 653.

1712. ———.]—H. being about to erect a factory for the purpose of carrying on the business of manufacturing explosives under the name of deft. co., appointed a manager to have sole charge of the business. The manager's office was used as the office of the co. The manager, without express authority from H., entered into a contract for the purchase by the co. from pltf's. of all the co.'s "requirements" of nitric & sulphuric acid, estimated at 500 & 750 tons respectively, during twelve months from the date of the contract. Subsequently the manager gave notice to pltf's. to deliver 15 tons under the contract. The co. never started business, & the undertaking was abandoned by H. within the twelve months. The acceptance of the 15 tons was refused. In an action by pltf's. against the co. for breach of contract to purchase 500 & 750 tons:—Held: the manager had been held out by H. as having authority to enter into the contract, & the contract was binding on H., but by the contract the co. had only agreed to buy such acid as might be required, & none having been in fact required, there had been no breach, except as to the 15 tons for which H. was liable to pay.—BERK (F. 1715. ———.]—"All waste as it comes from stills"—During occupancy of premises.*—Pltf. agreed to let, & defts. to take, for one year, at a stipulated rent, certain works & buildings; & pltf. agreed to supply to defts. the whole of the chlorine still waste as it came from their stills, neither adding to nor taking anything from "same," at the rate of 2s. 6d. for every 21 cwt. of waste so supplied, with the understanding that defts. were to have the option of a lease of the premises for seven or fourteen years at the same rent, if they should feel disposed so to do, within three months from the date thereof. Pltf. agreed not to use or injure or part with any of the still waste except to defts., so long as they should hold the works:—Held: defts. were bound to accept & pay for the whole of pltf.'s chlorine still waste during the year or such further term as they should hold the works, & it was no answer to an action for not accepting it, that defts.' manufacture failed & was discontinued, & the chlorine still waste proved useless, & was no longer necessary for their manufacture.—BEALEY v. STUART (1862), 7 H. & N. 753; 31 L. J. Ex. 281; 8 Jur. N. S. 389; 158 E. R. 672.

1716. Meaning of "cargo"—Whole cargo.—Deft. ordered of pltf's. "a small cargo of lathwood of about the following lengths, etc., in all about 60 cubic fathoms," & pltf's. accepted the order. Pltf's. not being able to procure a vessel of the exact size, chartered a vessel to deft.'s port, loaded with 83 fathoms. On the arrival of the vessel pltf's. agent unloaded, measured, & set apart timber to answer deft.'s order & tendered him a bill of lading for that quantity, & a draft for acceptance; but deft. declined to accept on the ground that the cargo was in excess of the order. In an action for non-acceptance of the goods:—Held: "cargo" meant a whole cargo, & not a parcel of a cargo, & pltf's. had not complied with the order so as to entitle them to maintain the action.—KREUGER v. BLANCK (1870), L. R. 5 Exch. 179; 23 L. T. 128; 18 W. R. 813; 3 Mar. L. C. 470; sub nom. KRENGER v. BLANCK, 39 L. J. Ex. 160.

1717. ———.]—Pltf's. sold to deft. "a cargo of from 2,500 to 3,000 barrels, seller's option, American petroleum . . . to be shipped from New York . . . & vessel to call for orders off coast for any safe floating port in the United Kingdom, or on the Continent between Havre & Hamburg, both inclusive, buyer's option." Pltf's. chartered a vessel, on which were placed 3,000 barrels of petroleum, & a bill of lading was signed making them deliverable to pltf's., but as this quantity did not constitute a full cargo, 300 additional barrels were placed on board, which were marked with a different mark, & for which a separate bill of lading was signed. Pltf's. gave notice to deft. of the shipment of the 3,000 barrels & were ready to order the vessel from its port of call to any port of delivery within the contract, & there to deliver to deft. the 3,000 barrels & to take the 300 barrels themselves, or to deliver to deft. at any such port 2,750 barrels as the mean between 2,500 & 3,000, but deft. refused to accept either the 3,000 barrels or any other quantity. Pltf's. having brought an action for non-acceptance:—Held: on the true construction of the contract, "cargo" meant the entire load of the vessel which carried it; deft. was therefore not bound to accept part of a cargo; & the action was not maintainable.—*BORROWMAN v. 1719. "All hemp shipped on seller's account"—"Not exceeding three hundred tons"—Contract confined to hemp shipped on seller's account.]—A. sold to B. all the hemp that might be shipped on board certain vessels at Riga, not exceeding 300 tons by C. the agent of the concern. C. shipped on board of these vessels only 71 tons of hemp on account of A., but upwards of 300 tons on account of other persons:—Held: the contract must be confined to such hemp as C. should ship as agent to A., & A. was not answerable to B. for more than the 71 tons.—*HAYWARD v. The quantity to be taken from the bill of lading by the measurement, to be calculated at 220 quarters the 100 kilos., payment in cash on handing the shipping documents & the policy of insurance, less two months' interest." By the bill of lading 1,667 quarters appeared to have been shipped, & payment was made upon that quantity; but only 1,614 quarters were delivered on the ship's arrival:—Held: the contract was for the purchase of the cargo as it stood, whether more or less than the quantity in the bill of lading; & pltf. was not entitled to any return of the price paid, on the quantity turning out to be less than that mentioned in the bill of lading, although pltf. had paid the price on the quantity as stated in the bill of lading.—*COVAS v. 1722. "About five hundred tons"—To form complete cargo of ship—Ship unable to carry five hundred tons—Whether contract for as much as ship can carry.]—A contract for the sale of nitrate of soda was in these terms:—"Sold, for, etc., about 500 tons of nitrate of soda, etc., to be ready for delivery on, etc."; & it then proceeded to state, "It is understood that the above nitrate of soda is to form the full & complete cargo of the J.P., 345 tons register, now on her passage, etc., to proceed to, etc., & there load. In the event of the J.P. being unable to prosecute her voyage, then the sellers to deliver another cargo of about equal, quantity," etc. The only ground on which the seller was to be excused was the loss of the J.P., or other vessel substituted for her, on the homeward voyage. The J.P. could not carry 500 tons:—Held: the contract was for about 500 tons at all events, & not for a less amount, being the whole that the J.P. could carry.—BOURNE v. SEYMOUR (1855), 16 C. 1725. Proviso for rejection of unmerchantable goods—Obligation of buyer to accept merchantable part.]—Under a contract to purchase 300 tons of Campeachy logwood, at £35 per ton, etc. to be of real merchantable quality; & such as might be determined to be otherwise by impartial judges to be rejected; the vendee is bound to take so much of the wood tendered as turned out to be of the sort described, at the contract price; though it appeared at the time that a part, which was afterwards ascertained to be 16 out of the 300 tons, was of a different & inferior description.—GRAHAM v. JACKSON (1811), 14 East, 498; 104 E. R. 693.

1726. Right of buyer to reject whole cargo—Where mixture above average.]—In an action on a contract for the sale of 1,200 quarters of "beans," it appeared that one-fifth part of the cargo was composed of peas, the same being an unusual & undue mixture of peas:—Held: the delivery of such a cargo was not a compliance with the contract for the sale of "beans."—*ALEXANDER v. 1727. — Other articles of distinct character.]—Deft., a retail dealer at Peterborough, ordered of pltf., who were wholesale dealers at Bristol, certain specified articles of earthenware, with a caution that the order was not to be exceeded. *Pltf.*s. sent by railway a crate containing not only the articles ordered, but others of a distinct character; & they forwarded an invoice to deft. in which the price of each item was given, & deft. was charged as debtor to *pltf.*s. for a lumped total. On the receipt of the invoice deft. refused to receive the crate, & it remained at the railway station. *Pltf.*s. having brought an action for goods sold to recover the price of the articles ordered:—Held: deft. had a right to reject the whole on account of the articles sent in excess, & *pltf.*s. could not maintain this action.—*LEVY v. 1728. — Sale of cargo as per bills of lading—Cargo including smuggled goods.—The sellers sold "the cargo" of maize shipped "per s.s. Rijn, consisting of about 2,813 French tons, or what steamer carries as per" certain bills of lading. On arrival of the ship it was discovered that she had on board, in addition to the maize, 58 tons of tobacco which, without the knowledge of the sellers, had been smuggled on board, & was not mentioned in the bills of lading. The buyers rejected the maize on the ground that the cargo carried was not "the cargo" contracted for. The arbitrators found that the contract was for the sale of the cargo of maize actually on board at the time when the contract was entered into as comprised in the bill of lading, & awarded that the buyers were not entitled to reject:—Held: the arbitrators were right.—*PAUL, LTD. v. 1730. Tender of bill of lading covering other goods—Right of buyer to demand clear bill of lading.—C., a firm in Scotland, through agents in London, purchased of the firm of B., carrying on business in Turkey, 1,400 quarters of rye, to be shipped free on board at a port in the Levant, & to be delivered at a port in Europe, to be indicated by & to the consignees of C. The grain was to be paid for by a bill to be drawn by B. on & accepted by C. B. shipped the rye on a vessel chartered by them, but finding that the ship could carry a larger cargo than the rye bought by C. would furnish, filled up the spare space with 78 quarters of maize. B. shipped the two descriptions of grain together by one charterparty & one bill of lading, which latter document was indorsed with orders to deliver the cargo to the agents in London of B. to whom they forwarded the shipping documents with an invoice for the rye made out to C. Before the arrival of the vessel at the port indicated by C., B. informed C. of the fact of there being other grain on board beside that purchased by them, & intimated their, B.'s, willingness to retain the 78 quarters of maize themselves & bear all charges in respect of it. The two descriptions of grain were stowed on board in such a manner that either lot might have been got at & delivered on shore without interfering with the other. C., however, insisted on having a clean, that is to say a separate, bill of lading for the grain they had bought, alleging that they had made a sub-sale at a profit, & could not fulfil their contract without such a document to hand over to their buyers, & they consequently refused to accept the bill drawn by B. upon them until a clean & separate bill of lading of the 1,400 quarters of rye was furnished. Between the time of entering into the contract of sale & the arrival of the ship at the port indicated by C., the market price of rye had fallen considerably below that at which the 1,400 quarters had been invoiced to C. On the arrival of the ship at such port the master held the whole of the grain under a general lien for freight. B. thereupon offered to C. the bill of lading for the two kinds of grain indorsed with a delivery order in favour of

C. of the grain they had bought, & at the same time tendered to C. a sum admittedly more than sufficient to discharge any lien upon the maize alone. C., however, refused to accept the bill of lading in this form, or to take the money proffered. In an action by B. against C., for refusing to accept the grain; & in an action by C. against B. for non-delivery of the rye, alleging as damage C.'s loss of profit upon the sub-sale & expenses to which C. had been put in a reference between their firm & their sub-vendees on a claim by the latter for damages against C. for non-delivery of the rye, in which arbit. an award had been made against C.:—Held: (1) in the first action, there had been a sufficient offer by B. to deliver the rye to C. & a refusal by C. to accept, & consequently B. was entitled to recover damages against C. for non-acceptance; (2) in the second action, C.'s refusal to accept when an offer reasonably sufficient to satisfy & fulfil the contract had been made by B., disentitled C. to recover.—*IMPERIAL OTTOMAN BANK v. See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 31.

1731. When vendor may sue for price of instalments.—Where, by a contract of sale, the vendor agreed to deliver 250 bushels of wheat within a specific time, & delivered part, but not the residue:—Held: he might, after the time mentioned in the contract had expired, recover from the purchaser the value of the wheat delivered to & retained by him.

Where there is an entire contract to deliver a large quantity of goods consisting of distinct parcels within a specified time, & the seller delivers part, he cannot before the expiration of that time bring an action to recover the price of that part delivered, because the purchaser may, if the vendor fail to complete his contract, return the part delivered. On Sept. 29 A. gives a third notice, that 20 tons would come by the Liveley, & the rest by another ship. Another vessel having subsequently arrived in the Tyne with brimstone, pltfs. having in like manner obtained permission of the owner to dispose of it on their own account, on July 11 tendered 150 tons to debt. in fulfilment of the contract. 1745. — No provision as to amounts of instalments.]—Defts. contracted to buy from pltf. from 5,000 to 6,000 tons of iron ore, to be delivered at Cardiff "during the months of June, July, Aug. & Sept." It appeared from the correspondence between the parties which led to the contract that pltf. had arranged with correspondents at Carthage for the supply & shipment of the ore. By July 28, 4,023 tons of ore were delivered to & accepted by defts., & on July 29, the Nero arrived with 767 tons more, notice at the same time being given to defts. of her readiness to discharge. There was considerable delay in discharging the Nero, she having made an exceptionally short voyage, & for her detention beyond the lay days, pltf. had to pay demurrage to the extent of £150, which he now sought to recover from defts. The jury found that the tender was a reasonable one, but defts. contended that the quantity ought to have been distributed rateably over the four months, & that, not being bound to accept the Nero's cargo till Sept., they were not liable to pay the demurrage sued for:—Held: the contract gave the option to either party to deliver or to demand the amount contracted for; & as no provision was made for exercising the option at any given time, whether in the first month or the last, pltf. could not tell, until the option was exercised, how many tons should be delivered in any month; also that the circumstances showed that the parties could not have contemplated equal monthly quantities.—CALAMINUS v. The market was rising, & notwithstanding urgent demands by pltfs., the delivery of the first 125 tons was not completed for nearly six months. Pltfs. refused to pay for the first parcel, claiming a right to set off the loss they had sustained from being obliged to procure other iron in consequence of debt.'s default; but they still urged the delivery of the second parcel. Debt., treating the refusal to pay as a breach & an abandonment of the contract by pltfs., declined to deliver any more. There was no suggestion of inability on the part of pltfs. to pay, & the price of the first parcel was ultimately paid:—Held: the mere refusal to pay for the first parcel did not, under the circumstances, warrant debt. in treating the contract as abandoned, & refusing to deliver the remainder, & pltfs. were entitled to damages for the breach.—FREETH v.

1747. — Vendor's winding up pending.—Resps. bought from applt. co. 5,000 tons of steel of the company's make, to be delivered 1,000 tons monthly, commencing Jan. 1881, payment within three days after receipt of shipping documents. In Jan. the co. delivered part only of that month's instalment, & in the beginning of Feb. made a further delivery. On Feb. 2, shortly before payment for these deliveries became due a petition was presented to wind up the co. Resps. bond fide under the erroneous advice of their solr. that they could not without leave of the ct. safely pay pending the petition objected to make the payments then due unless the co. obtained the sanction of the ct. which they asked the co. to obtain. On Feb. 10 the co. informed resps. that they should consider the refusal to pay as a breach of contract releasing the co. from any further obligations. On Feb. 15, an order was made to wind up the co. by the ct. A correspondence ensued between resps. & the liquidator, in which the resps. claimed damages for failure to deliver the Jan. instalment & a right to deduct those damages from any payment then due; & said that they always had been & still were ready to accept such deliveries & make such payments as ought to be accepted & made under the contract subject to the right of set off. The liquidator made no further deliveries & brought an action in the name of the co. for the price of the steel delivered. Resps. counterclaimed for damages for breaches of contract for non-delivery:—Held: upon the true construction of the contract, payment for a previous delivery was not a condition precedent to the right to claim the next delivery; resps. had not by postponing payment under erroneous advice acted so as to show an intention to repudiate the contract or so as to release the co. from further performance.—*MERSEY STEEL & IRON CO. v. 1749. — Refusal to pay increased instalment—Unqualified agreement to pay—Damages payable to vendor.—Pltfs. entered into a contract with buyers in Calcutta to manufacture & ship machinery by instalments over several months at agreed prices, but subject to a stipulation that should the cost of labour or wages increase, there should be a corresponding increase in the purchase price. The buyers were also to open a "confirmed irrevocable credit" in favour of pltfs. with a bank in this country, & to pay for each shipment as it took place. In pursuance of this arrangement defts., who were the buyers' bankers in London, wrote to pltfs. stating that they would pay bills drawn on the buyers to the extent of £70,000, the bills to be accompanied by documents & to be received before Apr. 14, 1921, "this to be considered a confirmed irrevocable credit." Pltfs. shipped two instalments under the contract & received payment under the letter of credit. The buyers then found that the invoices included an increase in the purchase price on account of wages & material, & instructed defts. only to pay so much of the next invoices as represented the original prices. Defts. accordingly refused to pay the bill presented on the next shipment & pltfs. then cancelled the contract, claiming damages from defts. as on a repudiation by the buyers:—Held: the credit being irrevocable, the refusal of defts. to take & pay for the particular bills on presentation of the proper documents constituted a repudiation of the contract as a whole, & pltfs. were entitled to damages so reckoned. The basis of this form of banking facility is that the buyer is taken, as between himself & the banker, to accept the seller's invoices, as correct. Any adjustment must be made by way of refund by the seller & not by way of retention by the buyer.—URQUHART LINDSAY & CO. v. EASTERN BANK, LTD., [1922] 1 K. B. 318; 91 L. J. K. B. 274; 126 L. delivered short in weight; pltf. refused to pay for any more unless a reduction was allowed for the price of the deficiency, & also for re-weighing

The whole amount was delivered except one instalment of thirty tons due in Dec. 1871, but the Nov. instalment was not paid for. On Dec. 20, E. called a meeting of his creditors, & declared himself insolvent. On Dec. 23, H. wrote a letter refusing to deliver any more bleaching powder under the contract. In Feb. following, E. was adjudicated bkpt., & the trustee applied to the ct. for an order upon H. to pay £150 damages for non-delivery of the Dec. instalment of goods:—Held: (1) although neither the non-payment of the Nov. instalment nor the bkpcy. of E. would entitle H. to rescind the contract, yet he had a right, after the declaration of insolvency to refuse to deliver any more goods till the price of both the Nov. & Dec. instalments had been tendered to him; (2) H.'s letter of Dec. 23, did not excuse the trustee of E.'s estate from tendering the price of the two instalments before claiming damages for the non-delivery of the Dec. instalment.—*Re EDWARDS, Ex p. 1754. ———.]—Defts. had, on Feb. 5, sold to plffs. 200 tons of iron, to be delivered twenty-five tons monthly at £5 per ton, net cash, or by four months' bill with 2s. 6d. per ton added. By the usage of trade, no delivery was due under this contract till Apr. 1. On Mar. 12, plffs. found themselves to be insolvent, & they gave notice of the fact to defts. On Mar. 16, they filed a petition in the Bkpcy. Ct. for liquidation by arrangement or composition. The usual course of business under previous contracts between the parties of a similar description was for defts. to deliver upon such contracts without further demand of delivery. No delivery, however, was made by defts. or claimed by plffs. in Apr. On Apr. 5, at the first meeting of creditors a resolution was passed to accept a composition of 5s. in the pound. Though the existence of the contract was mentioned at the meeting, no mention was made of it in the written statement of pltf.'s affairs. No step was taken in relation to the contract by either party until May 13, when, the market for iron having risen, plffs. claimed the delivery of iron in fulfillment of the contract, offering & being ready to pay cash for it. Defts. replied, stating that plffs. having failed to perform their part of the contract, there was an end of it. Plffs. thereupon brought an action against defts. for non-delivery of the iron:—Held: the effect of the facts was that there had been a rescission of the contract before May 13, the conduct of plffs. having been such as to justify defts. in the belief that plffs. intended to abandon the contract upon their insolvency, & there being evidence that defts. in such belief had likewise abandoned it.—*MORGAN v. After the straw had been supplied for some time W. refused to pay for the last load delivered, & insisted on always keeping one payment in arrear:—Held: according to the true effect of the agreement, each load was to be paid for on delivery, & on W.'s refusal so to pay for them. The instalments were delivered till the month of Feb. 1875, inclusive, in which month the purchasing co. called a meeting of their principal creditors, & stated that they were carrying on the business at a loss & were short of working capital, & asked for an extension of credit in their existing contracts, which, however, was refused them. The selling co. then refused to deliver any more iron except upon immediate cash payments, & in consequence of that refusal the purchasing co. gave notice to rescind the contract. The purchasing co. continued to carry on the business after the meeting, & endeavoured to raise fresh capital by issuing preference shares, but in June, 1875, they passed a resolution for winding up. The selling co. claimed to prove for damages for breach of the contract against the estate of the purchasing co. :—Held : there was no such declaration of insolvency at the meeting in Feb. as to justify the selling co. in refusing to deliver iron except for cash payments, & consequently that the purchasing co. had a right to rescind the contract, & the claim for damages was dismissed.—*Re PHOENIX BESSEMER STEEL CO., Ex p. 1762. Non-delivery of full instalments—At purchaser's request—Purchaser's right to arrears.—Defts. in Oct. 1870, contracted to sell to *pltf.*s. 2,000 tons of iron "delivery in monthly quantities of 166½ tons over 1871, or sooner if required"; payment by four months' acceptance for the 10th of the month following delivery. In Jan. 1871, 101 tons were delivered, but *pltf.*s. did not then demand the delivery of the balance of the monthly quantity. In Feb. 1871, & at several periods between that date & Dec. 1871, *pltf.*s. requested defts. to forbear from delivery of more iron under the contract, & defts. accordingly only made partial deliveries during the several months of 1871, up to & including Nov. In Dec. *pltf.*s. required delivery of the residue of the whole 2,000 tons. Defts. refused it, & denied that they were liable to deliver any more iron under the contract, except what was due on the monthly balance. *Pltf.*s. then brought an action for non-delivery :—Held : without deciding whether defts. could be required to deliver in Dec. at once the whole balance of the 2,000 tons, they remained liable to deliver it at

1764. — Damages calculable at time of particular breach.—Defts. entered into a contract with pltf., whereby they undertook to deliver, from Jan. 1, until Dec. 31, 1872, 6,260 waggons of coal at 7s. 3d. per ton of 20 cwt., at the fair average rate of twenty waggons per day; payment by three months' acceptance, drawn on the 10th of each month, for the previous month's supply. The deliveries were irregular in point of time, & insufficient in point of quantity, & they failed to comply with the condition of the contract, that they should be at the fair average rate of twenty waggons per day. At the end of the year there was a large deficiency. Pltf., although constantly complaining of the deliveries, did not go into the market & buy against defts. at any time during 1872, but on Feb. 13, 1873, he bought coal in the market to supply the whole of the deficiency of the coal undelivered, at a very much higher price, namely, 19s. per ton. Coal had been gradually rising in price in the market throughout the successive months of 1872, & it rose more rapidly in the months of Jan. & Feb. 1873. Pltf. claimed to be entitled to, as damages, the difference between the contract price of 7s. 3d. & the market price of coal at the expiration of such a reasonable time after Dec. 31, 1872, as would have enabled him to go into the market & obtain it, calculated upon the whole of the deficiency left undelivered by defts. under their contract throughout the year 1872. Defts. contended that pltf. was not entitled to wait until the expiration of the year before assessing his damages, as contended for by pltf., for that a breach of the contract was committed as often as a month expired without the proper quantity applicable to such month having been delivered, & that pltf. was bound to assess his damages in respect of such breach from an estimate of that month's market price of coal, or that the breaches were committed at some shorter periods; but that the damages should be calculated at the end of each month :—Held : as soon as defts. failed to deliver a fair average of coal, according to the terms of the contract, a breach had taken place, for which at that time, pltf. was entitled to damages as upon that breach, & so on from time to time as each subsequent breach took place, & it was an erroneous way of estimating the damages by waiting until the full period of the contract had expired, & then claiming the difference at that time.—BARNINGHAM v. SMITH (1874), 31 L. T. 540.

1765. — Reduction of damages—Unreasonable exercise of right to repudiate.—Deft. agreed to sell to *pltf.*s. a quantity of silk, deliveries to be spread over several months, & payment for each delivery to be made within a month. *Pltf.*s.

drew a cheque for the amount of the first delivery within a month, but it failed to reach debt. On ascertaining this fact in the following month pltf's. sent another cheque, & debt. then said that cash cover would be required for future deliveries. Pltf's. elected to treat debt.'s refusal to deliver under the contract as a repudiation, & endeavoured, on a rising market, to buy elsewhere, but unsuccessfully. They then brought an action claiming the amount of the loss which they had sustained, based on the value of silk at the time of repudiation, & on the refusal to deliver on the original terms. The judge at the trial found that there had been a breach of the contract, but that pltf's., for the purpose of minimising their loss, would have acted reasonably in accepting debt.'s offer to supply the goods for cash, & that therefore it was their duty to do so, & he reduced the damages accordingly:—Held: the question was one of fact & the decision must be affirmed.—*PATZU, LTD. v. Right to refuse acceptance—Delivery of first instalment delayed.]—To a declaration on an agreement, stating that debts. agreed to buy of pltf's. 667 tons of iron, to be shipped from Sweden in the months of June, July, Aug. & Sept., & in about equal portions each month, at £15 10s. per ton delivered, on arrival in London; that sellers should have the option of commencing shipments in May, & also of completing the whole by the end of July; & alleging, as a breach, the refusal to accept or pay for the iron, or any part thereof; debts. pleaded that pltf's. did not avail themselves of the option of commencing shipments in May; that in June pltf's. shipped 21 tons, being a much less quantity than was required to be shipped during that month by the terms of the contract; that pltf's. failed to complete the shipment for the month of June, according to the terms of the contract, & were never ready to deliver such a quantity of iron, shipped from Sweden in June, as is specified in the contract, & were not ready & willing to deliver to debts. the small quantity shipped, until after debts. had notice that pltf's. were not ready & willing, & were unable to fulfil their part of the agreement with reference to the quantity of iron to be shipped in June; wherefore debts. refused to receive the quantity so shipped during the month of June, & gave notice to pltf's. that they refused to accept the residue of the iron:—Held: the plea was a good answer to the action.—HOARE v. RENNIE (1859), 5 H. & N. 19; 29 L. J. Ex. 73; 1 L. T. 104; 8 W. R. 80; 157 E. R. 1083.

1769. ——A contract was entered into for the sale of 1,100 pieces of timber, to be delivered in two instalments. Upon the delivery of the first instalment the purchasers refused to accept the goods on the ground that they did not fulfil the terms of the contract, & further intimated that they would refuse the second instalment on the ground that the first instalment was such a departure from the contract as to justify them in refusing to accept either parcel. The matter was referred to arb'n., & the arbitrator found & awarded that the first shipment was so far from complying with the requirements of the contract as to entitle the buyers to repudiate & to rescind the whole contract, & to refuse to accept the first shipment & all further shipments under the contract. Upon a motion by the vendors to set aside the award upon the ground that it was bad upon its face:—Held: the umpire was entitled to draw the inference from the defective delivery of the first instalment that the second would also be bad, & therefore the award could not be said to be bad upon its face.—*MILLAR'S KARRI & JARRAH CO. The purchaser refused to receive part of the oil tendered in Oct., as of inferior quality, & sued the vendor for breach of contract, but failed in proof that the oil was of inferior quality, & it was found that pltf., the purchaser, did not intend thereby the repudiate the contract:—Held: the vendor was not thereby discharged from the further performance of the contract.—*KENT v. During the first month pltf's. sent waggons to receive only 158 tons. Immediately after the first month had expired, debts. informed pltf's. that, as pltf's. had taken only 158 tons, debts. would annul the contract. Pltf's. refused to allow the contract to be annulled, but debts. declined to deliver any more coal:—Held: the breach by pltf's. in taking less than the stipulated quantity during the first month did not entitle debts. to rescind the contract.—*SIMPSON v. Pltf. failed to take delivery of any of the iron in Nov., but claimed to have delivery of one-third of the iron in Dec. & one-third in Jan. Deft. refused to deliver these two-thirds, & gave notice that he considered that the contract was cancelled by pltf.'s breach to take any iron in Nov.:—Held: in an action by pltf. for damages, in respect of deft.'s refusal, by pltf.'s failure to take one-third of the iron in Nov., deft. was justified in refusing to deliver the other two-thirds afterwards.

Coal was delivered under this contract up to Mar. 28, 1874, but on that day, in consequence of pltfs.' men refusing to accept a lower rate of wages proposed by pltfs., in pursuance of a combination entered into by pltfs., with other masters in the district, the pits were closed by pltfs., & remained closed until July 28, other pits in the neighbourhood being also closed by their owners for a like reason. During that time no coal was in consequence delivered; but at the end of the strike pltfs. called upon deft. to take the amount of coal which still remained undelivered under the contract. In an action for not accepting this coal:—Held: the strike was equally a strike within the meaning of the contract, though brought about by pltfs. lowering the wages of their men; the effect of the strike was merely to postpone the daily deliveries, & deft. was bound to accept the coal remaining undelivered.—KING v. PARKER (1876), 34 L. No responsibility to attach to us should we be prevented from delivering all or any portion of the ore, through any dangers & accidents of the mines, railway shoots, rivers, seas, & navigation of whatever nature or kind, or through any circumstances beyond our own control":—Held: (1) pltfs. were entitled to deliver quantities of the ore which they had previously withheld while freights were above the limit, provided such deliveries were made within a reasonable time, having regard to the contemplated duration of the contract, the means which they had to make up arrears, etc.; (2) they were not entitled to deliver quantities which they had previously been prevented from delivering from dangers & accidents of the mines, etc., such quantities being as much struck out of the contract as if they had been actually delivered.—DE OLEAGA v. WEST CUMBERLAND IRON & STEEL CO. 1802. ———.]—When goods are sold by contract on c.i.f. terms, the contract of the seller is performed by delivery to the buyer, within a reasonable time from the agreed date of shipment, of documents, ordinarily the bill of lading, invoice, & policy of insurance, which will entitle the buyer on the arrival of the ship to obtain the delivery of the goods shipped in accordance with the contract, or, in case of loss, will entitle him to recover on the policy the value of the goods if lost by a peril agreed in the contract to be covered, & in any case will give him a rightful claim against the ship in respect of any misdelivery or wrongful treatment of the goods. It is therefore immaterial whether, before the tender of the documents, the property in the goods is in the seller or buyer or a third person. The seller however must be in a position to pass the property in the goods by the bill of lading, if the goods are in existence, but he need not have appropriated the particular goods in the particular bill of lading to the particular buyer until the moment of tender.—*GROOM (C.), LTD. v. The goods were not shipped. In an action by the buyers for non-delivery:—Held: (1) the delivery intended by the contract was a constructive delivery by tender of the shipping documents as soon as possible after shipment, & there was a breach of contract on July 21; (2) the damages were to be measured by the difference between the contract price & the market price on July 21, as that date, & not Aug. 30, was the time when the goods ought to have been delivered within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 5 (3); (3) it being impossible to buy similar goods coming forward on a June shipment but possible to buy such goods on the spot, a merchant in the circumstances acting reasonably would have bought goods on the spot, & the price of such goods should be regarded in measuring the damages.—SHARPE

1806. ———.]—A contract for the sale of wheat to be shipped from New Orleans to Hamburg provided that payment should be net cash against surrender of documents, which were to consist of the bill of lading, certificate of inspection & policy of insurance. On Sept. 3, 1898, the sellers appropriated to the sale a quantity of wheat on board a certain vessel, & on Sept. 8 tendered to the purchasers the three documents, two of which were altered & one of which was unaltered. The purchasers refused to accept & pay for the documents by reason of the erasures & alterations therein, & on a formal tender being made on Sept. 12, they again refused to accept them. As tendered, the bill of lading contained a marginal note reading "stored in holds 3 & 4." The figures 3 & 4 had been substituted for the figures 2 & 3 which had been erased; the certificate of inspection stated that the wheat was in holds 3 & 4; the figures "& 4" had been added after the figure 3, & the figures "2 &," which had been in the certificate before the figure 3, were struck through; & the certificate of insurance was unaltered & stated the wheat to be in holds 3 & 4, which was the fact, so that as tendered all three documents agreed & were in accordance with the facts. The mistake arose through an error, & having been discovered, was corrected as above described in the bill of lading & the certificate of inspection before those documents were executed. The certificate of insurance was correct from the first & was unaltered. The ship arrived in Hamburg on Sept. 14, & on Sept. 16, the documents were again tendered, together with two confirmatory documents showing that the alterations were made before the execution of the documents, & were proper alterations as agreeing with the facts:—Held: the tenders on Sept. 8, & Sept. 12, were good tenders of the documents, & ought to have been accepted by the purchasers as, upon such tenders, the purchasers were put upon inquiry & were bound to look at all the documents, & as one of the documents was unaltered & the altered documents agreed with the unaltered one, they ought to have come to the conclusion that the altered documents were altered before the execution, & were perfect documents in the sense that they absolutely agreed with the facts.—Re SALOMON & CO. & NAUDSZUS (1899), 81 L. 1808. Sufficiency of tender—Question for jury.—Defts. had become responsible, as del credere agents, for the purchase of a cargo of wheat of from 1,800 to 2,000 quarters, to be shipped at the price of 50s. per quarter f.o.b. at Taganrog, " & including freight & insurance to any safe port in the United Kingdom." "Payment cash in London in exchange for shipping documents." Pltfs. tendered the following shipping documents of a cargo answering the description in the contract: a charterparty: a bill of lading & provisional invoice, in both of which the cargo was stated to be 1,850 quarters, at 50s. per quarter, £4,626, less freight, at 10s. 9d. per quarter, £1,001 10s. & a policy of insurance effected on the cargo valued at £3,600. On behalf of pltfs. evidence was given, which was not contradicted, that the policy tendered was sufficient to protect the interest of the shipper of the cargo at the time of shipment. In an action against defts. for not paying or procuring from their principal payment of the price of the cargo, they pleaded that pltfs. were not ready & willing to tender, nor did they tender, "the usual shipping documents" according to the contract:—Held: whether pltfs. had so tendered was a question for the jury; it was not a question of law but of fact for the jury, whether, in all the circumstances, the policy was a sufficient shipping document within the meaning of the contract.—*TAMVACO v. 1811. — — — — ——Sellers agreed to sell 400 bales of hemp at a price to include cost, freight, & insurance. By the terms of the contract of sale the hemp was to be shipped from a port in the Philippine Islands or from Hong Kong by steamer or steamers direct or indirect to London between Oct. 1 & Dec. 31, 1909; payment was to be by cash in exchange for shipping documents, & disputes under the contract were to be settled by arb'n. The sellers then purchased from B. & Co. 400 bales of hemp. This hemp had been shipped at Manila, a port in the Philippine Islands, under bills of lading dated at that place Dec. 28, 1909, for delivery at Hong Kong to the order of the shippers; it was intended for transhipment & was transhipped on a steamer bound for London, the bills of lading being dated at Hong Kong Mar. 25, 1910; it had been insured by the shippers from Manila to London. The sellers tendered to the buyers in fulfilment of the contract of sale the bills of lading from Hong Kong & the policy of insurance from Manila to London. The buyers paid the contract price under protest, contending that these documents were not a good tender under the contract. The dispute was referred to arb'n. The arbitrator found that it was a usual course, when goods were shipped from Manila to London, to tranship them at Hong Kong, but to ship them in the first instance at Manila on a through bill of lading from Manila to London; in so far as it was a question of fact, he found that, on a contract of sale of goods on cost, freight, & insurance terms, it was by mercantile usage, unless otherwise agreed, the duty of the seller to provide by contract of affreightment for the carriage of the goods from the port of shipment to the port of destination named in the contract, & by an indorsed bill of lading, or otherwise, to transfer to the buyer the benefit of the rights created by the contract of affreightment between the shipper & the shipowner for the entire voyage from the port of shipment to the port of destination:—Held: the tender of the documents was not a good tender under the contract, because it did not include a contract of affreightment to London made before Dec. 31, 1909, & because it did not include a contract of affreightment from Manila to Hong Kong.—*LANDAUER & Co. v. On May 12 the seller tendered to the buyers documents relating to the first instalment, including the ocean bills of lading, but the buyers rejected the documents & refused to take up the goods. In an action for the price of the goods:—Held: (1) the ocean bills of lading were not through bills of lading, inasmuch as they afforded no protection to the buyers on the initial voyage, & did not satisfy the conditions of the contract; (2) on a sale on c.i.f. terms the contract of affreightment must be procured on shipment, & a bill of lading issued thirteen days after the original shipment at another port in another country was not procured on shipment.—*HANSSON v. 1813. — Inoperative prior to date of tender—Valid at date of shipment.]—On a sale of goods under a c.i.f. contract, the tender by the sellers of a bill of lading & policy of insurance, which though valid at the time of shipment had, as regards the bill of lading only, or as regards both documents, become inoperative prior to the date of tender, is not a valid tender entitling the sellers to payment of the purchase-price by the buyers. Under two c.i.f. contracts, made respectively between two English firms the sellers sold to the buyers a quantity of horse beans to be shipped from a port in China to Naples in one case & to a range of European ports in the other case. Payment was to be in "net cash in London on arrival of the goods at port of discharge, in exchange for bill or bills of lading & policies of insurance, free of war risk, on Lloyd's conditions, "but was" to be made in no case later than three months from the date of bill of lading, or upon the posting of the vessel at Lloyds as a total loss." There was a provision that "In the event of war, should sellers not have received from buyers approved underwriters' policies . . . covering war risks three days prior to time of shipments, sellers shall have the right . . . to cover war risk for account & risk of buyers." They were also given power to insure at buyers cost if the war risk was incurred during the time of shipment. In each case the sellers shipped the beans on a German vessel, & war being subsequently declared between England & Germany each vessel entered a port of refuge without completing the voyage. Three months after the date of the bill of lading the respective sellers tendered to the buyers the shipping documents, namely, in the one case, the German bill of lading & an English policy, & in the other case, the German bill of lading & a German policy:—Held: (1) on the true construction of the contracts the buyers had not taken upon themselves all the risks of what might happen in the event of war, but only such risks as were excepted perils under the warranty "free of capture & seizure"; & the risk that the shipping documents might become invalid was not one of these perils; (2) the contracts evidenced by the German bills of lading or German policy of insurance were dissolved on the outbreak of war, &

consequently the shipping documents tendered were in neither case a good tender on which the sellers could claim payment of the purchase price.—*ARNHOLD KARBERG & Co. v. Of insurance policy—Certificate of insurance—In usual form.]—A parcel of meal was sold to a London firm at £5 8s. 9d. per ton c.i.f. London, under a contract which provided for dispatch of the meal from the mills in the interior of America to an American port, thence to be shipped per steamer; "all other conditions as per the American maize germ meal contract" The meal was forwarded from a town in Illinois under two through bills of lading issued in the customary form by the Illinois Ry. Co., which provided that the meal should be carried to the port of New Orleans & thence by Leyland Line to London, & further that the property covered by them was subject to all conditions expressed in the regular forms of bills of lading in use by the steamship co. at time of shipment. The Leyland Line is a well known line trading between New Orleans to London, having a regular form of bill of lading upon which all goods by that line are shipped. By that form of bill of lading the Leyland Line reserved liberty to proceed to the port stated in the bill of lading "via any other port or ports in any order or rotation, outwards or forwards, whether in or out of or in a contrary of the goods "nett cash against bills, of lading or delivery order" it is not necessary in order to constitute a direction to or beyond the customary or advertised route " & likewise reserved power to tranship the goods at any port into any other steamer or sailing vessel. Under the American maize germ meal contract the sellers were to give policies &/or certificates of insurance in respect of the meal in question, & certificates in the customary form were in fact given which took the place of a policy which was duly issued & which contained the following clause, " In event of deviation or of change of voyage held covered at a premium to be fixed by insurers." The steamship in which the meal was carried having deviated to Bremen before reaching London, thus causing delay, the buyers refused to accept delivery, & the question as to their right to do so was submitted to the trade tribunal, which decided against them, finding that all the documents relating to the carriage of the meal were usual & customary & were in forms well known in the trade, & constantly received, & hitherto without objection, in fulfilment of similar contracts of sale :—Held: (1) upon these findings of fact, the adoption by the sellers under the through bills of lading of the method of sea carriage in question was not necessarily inconsistent with the terms of the contract of sale, & the buyers were not justified in refusing to accept delivery; (2) as the certificate of insurance was in the usual form & covered deviation, it satisfied the requirements of the c.i.f. contract.—BURSTALL & Co. v. GRIMSDALE & SONS (1906), 11 Com. Cas. 280.

1816. — — — — — "Approved insurance policy."—An approved insurance policy is one to which no reasonable objection can be made.

Bankers issued a letter of credit to English sellers of 100 tons of steel plates to Dutch buyers. By the terms of the letter of credit the bankers agreed to honour the sellers' draft for the amount of the purchase-money, which included freight & insurance to Rotterdam, provided the draft were accompanied by an approved insurance policy covering the shipment of the goods. The sellers presented their draft accompanied by a certificate of insurance which did not contain & did not offer any means of ascertaining the full terms of the insurance. In an action by the sellers against the bankers for not honouring the draft:—Held: the certificate was not an "approved insurance policy" within the meaning of the letter of credit, & the bankers were justified in refusing to honour the draft.—SCOTT (DONALD H.) & Co. v. 1817. ————.]—(1) Under a c.i.f. contract for the sale of goods, the seller, in the absence of any custom or special stipulation to the contrary, does not perform his obligation of tendering to the buyer along with the other shipping documents a policy of insurance by tendering instead of a proper policy a broker's cover note or a certificate of insurance.

1827. Declaration by seller—After elapse of contract time.]—Pltfs. contracted to sell to defts. “about 25 tons, more or less, Penang black pepper, Oct. & Nov. shipment, from Penang to London, per sailing vessel or vessels . . . the name of the vessel or vessels marks, etc., to be declared to the buyer in writing within sixty days from date of bill of lading.” Pltfs. within the contract time declared 25 tons of pepper shipped in one vessel, of which 20 tons were properly shipped & declared, but 5 tons were shipped in Dec. & defts. in consequence refused to accept the whole quantity. Subsequently pltfs. declared 5 tons of Nov. shipment in substitution for the 5 tons shipped in Dec. but this declaration was made more than sixty days after date of bill of lading, & defts. refused to accept it. On the vessel arriving in England, pltfs. as a performance of their contract, tendered the 20 tons properly shipped & declared, & the 5 tons properly shipped but declared after the contract time had elapsed. Defts. refused to accept any of the pepper so tendered, & pltfs. claimed damages for such refusal:—Held: (1) the contract time for declaration was an essential condition; (2) the contract was not divisible; & defts. therefore were entitled to reject the whole 25 tons.

The subject of the contract in the sale of a specific quantity of a given article, with a margin for a moderate excess in or diminution of that quantity under the words "about" & "more or less." The rule applicable to such a contract, if it were not qualified by other provisions, would be that, subject to the moderate margin, the sellers cannot call upon the buyers to accept any greater or less quantity of the article bargained for than the specified quantity (THESIGER, L.J.).

The matter may be made more plain by reversing the position of the parties. Suppose a declaration such as was made in this case on Jan. 19 & that the fact had been that all the then parcels had been shipped in accordance with the terms of the contract; suppose also that under such circumstances defts. had, either at the time of declaration or when the pepper was tendered, expressed their willingness to take the twenty tons, but had absolutely refused to take the five, plffs. might clearly have said, "we make this declaration or tender as a whole, & will only deliver the pepper comprised in it as a whole." If that be not so, where would defts.' right of separation cease? They might, of course, take one only of the three parcels, & it is difficult to see on what logical or legal principle they might not demand to have some bags out of the one parcel, & say, "We will pay for the non-acceptance of the remainder in damages." This would reduce the matter to a practical absurdity (THESIGER, L.J.).—REUTER v. SALA (1879), 4 C. P. D. 239; 48 L. J. Q. B. 492; 40 L. T. 476; 27 W. R. 631; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 121, C. A.

1828. Irregularity in documents—Bill of lading—Showing excessive quantity.]—By a contract in writing K. bought from B. "About 3,000 tons of wheat, 10 per cent. more or less, to be shipped by steamer" from India, payment to be made by cash in London within seven days from delivery of invoice in exchange for bill or bills of lading. In the contract there was the following clause, "Sellers have option of shipping less than the minimum quantity, in which case the price of the quantity short shipped of the medium quantity will be settled at the value of the day of the appropriation. Sellers can also exceed the maximum quantity, in which case the excess over the medium quantity will remain for their account." B. informed K. that 3,800 tons had been shipped on the Bombay, & that he appropriated 3,000 tons of that shipment to the contract with K., & he subsequently sent K. an invoice for 3,000 tons ex Bombay. The bills of lading of the 3,000 tons were two for 1,750 tons each & two for 250 tons each. K. offered to deliver to B. either all the bills of lading or two for 1,750 tons each, but B. refused to accept the tender or to pay any part of the price:—Held: the buyers were entitled to delivery of a bill or bills of lading for the amount of wheat which they had bought, & were entitled to refuse the tender made by the sellers.—Re KEIGHLEY, MAXTED & Co. & BRYAN, DURANT & Co. (No. 2) (1894), 70 L. T. 155; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 418, C. A.

1829. —Slight variation—Immaterial.]—

A contract for the sale of a cargo of wheat per Vandura provided that the vessel should discharge "At any safe port in the United Kingdom." The vessel was chartered by the sellers to discharge at "Any safe port in the United Kingdom, Manchester excepted," & the bill of lading was in the same terms. By Manchester Ship Canal Act, 1885 (c. clxxxviii), & by the Customs regulations, the port of Manchester included the whole of the ship canal, but in the ordinary commercial meaning it included only Manchester, & the waters adjacent thereto. In the wider meaning Manchester was, but in the more limited meaning was not, a safe port for the Vandura:—Held: Manchester, within the meaning of the charter-party & bill of lading, was not a safe port for the Vandura, & therefore the addition of the words "Manchester excepted" in the bill of lading & charter-party was not a material alteration of the contract of sale so as to release the buyers from taking the documents.—*Re GOODBODY & Co. & BALFOUR, WILLIAMSON & Co. 1832. Omission of documents—Insurance policy.]—Ptfs., at New York, contracted to sell & deliver 1,000 quarters of wheat to defts. at Bristol, upon the terms, "cost, freight & insurance." Through a mistake ptfs. shipped by a sailing vessel, a cargo of 2,000 quarters of wheat to K. at Bristol. They also forwarded to K. by steamer a bill of lading & a policy of insurance of the whole cargo of wheat shipped. This policy was "free from particular average." K. at the request of ptfs., accepted a bill of exchange drawn upon him by them for the price of the 2,000 quarters. Defts. afterwards refused to accept the 1,000 quarters from K.:—Held: in an action against defts. for breach of a contract to accept the 1,000 quarters, ptfs. were not "ready & willing" to deliver the 1,000 quarters to defts. within the terms of their contract.

Is the English firm bound to accept the bill of lading of the goods without the policy of insurance? I think they are certainly not so bound (MELLISH, L.J.).—HICKOX v. ADAMS (1876), 34 L. T. 404; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 142, C. A.

1834. C.i.f. contract.]—By a contract headed "C.i.f. contract" the sellers sold to the buyers a quantity of tapioca to be shipped at Java for Liverpool, "to be taken c.i.f. terms, net landing weights, war risk included." The contract provided that "should the goods or any portion thereof not arrive from loss of vessel . . .

or other unavoidable cause, this contract or such portion to be void," & (by clause 5), "Payment cash, before delivery if required, against documents or delivery order. . . ." On arrival of the tapioca at Liverpool the sellers tendered to the buyer a delivery order for the goods, but no policy of insurance, contending that under the contract they had the option of tendering documents or delivery order. The buyers refused to take delivery of the tapioca, contending that the contract was a c.i.f. contract, & therefore they were entitled to a policy of insurance on the tapioca:—Held: clause 5 meant, "Payment cash against delivery of all the usual documents under a c.i.f. contract or delivery order in lieu of one of those documents necessary for giving possession of the goods," & consequently the buyers were justified in refusing to take delivery without a policy of insurance.—Re DENBIGH COWAN & CO. & ATCHERLEY (R.) & CO. (1921), 90 L. The P. B. co., manufacturers of steel rails, contracted with S. & co., iron merchants, for the sale of a quantity of rails to be rolled at their works, & to be delivered at intervals, payment to be made as to three-fifths at three days' sight, & as to two-fifths by buyer's acceptances at four months. On the completion of each portion of goods a warrant for the same in the above form was sent to S. & co. with an invoice & drafts for the purchase-money & the goods referred to in the warrants were stacked at the works. In the meantime S. & co. pledged the several warrants & indorsed the same to pl'tfs. Before the contract was completed, when only part of the goods were paid for, S. & co. became bkpt., & their acceptances were dishonoured. At that time part of the goods had been dispatched in waggons sent by order of S. & co., & were stored in a railway co.'s warehouse, addressed to the agents of S. & co., & part remained stacked at the works:—Held: (1) by the usage of the iron trade, as well as by the intention of the parties as shown by their course of dealing, pl'tfs., as holders for value of the warrants, were entitled to the goods free from any vendor's lien; (2) even had the vendors been able to claim a lien on the undelivered goods the transit was at an end as regarded those stored in the warehouse, & their right was gone; (3) the contract was apportionable, & the vendors could not, in any event, have claimed any lien on that portion of the goods

In an action by pltf. on the certificate of insurance deft. co. pleaded that the clause in the policy as to giving notice within a limited time had not been complied with:—Held: as it was not clear either that the certificate incorporated clause 11 of the policy or that clause 11 was a condition precedent, pltf. was entitled to recover.—*KOSKAS v. Right of vendor to benefits—Goods independently insured by purchaser.]—A. sold goods to B., at whose risk they were shipped for Lisbon, to be paid for by bills drawn upon R. & co., C. went as supercargo & trustee for A. & B. & was to retain possession of the goods until the amount of the bills drawn upon R. & co. was remitted, & then the bill of lading was to be delivered up to B. B. directed R. & co. to effect an insurance, which was done at his expense, & not in pursuance of any agreement between him & A. The ship, with the goods on board, was captured, & the underwriters paid a total loss to R. & co., who gave B. credit for the money, part of which they paid over to him, & part to his assignees after he had become bkpt. R. & co. paid part of the bills drawn upon them, & rejected others. 1853. Insurance against all risks—Extent of vendor's obligation.—A contract for the sale of goods on c.i.f. terms contained the following words: "insurance to be effected by (sellers) all risks?"—Held: on the construction of the contract, the sellers' obligation was to effect an insurance to cover all risks in the sense of the entire quantum of damage, & not to cover the assured against all causes of accident, e.g. damage done to the goods in consequence of the shipowners committing a breach of the contract of carriage by improperly stowing them on deck instead of below deck.

1854. General rule.—Pltfs., merchants at Liverpool, were in the habit of consigning to defts., brokers at Montreal, goods on sale or return, & of receiving in payment bills on British Houses purchased by defts. with the proceeds. Pltfs. having desired that none but undoubted bills should be sent to them, defts. remitted a bill drawn by & upon parties supposed at the time to be in good credit. Pltfs., on receiving it, returned for answer that it had been refused acceptance, & requested defts. to do what was needful to procure security from the drawer, & to take all legal & necessary steps for their security. In an action brought by pltfs. for money had & received, to recover from defts. the proceeds of the consignment to which this bill had reference, defts. pleaded the delivery to pltfs., & acceptance by them, of the bill of exchange in full satisfaction. The judge directed the jury, that if the bill was such a one as by the course of dealing between the parties pltfs. were bound to take, that was a taking in full satisfaction:—Held: this was a misdirection; for acceptance in satisfaction must be an act of the will in the party receiving.

What is an acceptance in satisfaction? To constitute an acceptance, there must be an act of the will. Every receipt is not an acceptance; but if the party accepts the thing, though but for a moment, for that for which the other pays it, he cannot afterwards by his subsequent dissatisfaction, get rid of the effect of it (ALDERSON, B.)—HARDMAN v. BELLHOUSE (1842), 9 M. & W. 596; 11 L. J. Ex. 135; 152 E. R. 251.

1857. Removal of goods by buyer—To warehouse—To remain until paid for.—Deft., having bargained with pltf. for the purchase of wool from pltf. at a certain price, removed it to a warehouse, used by deft. for that purpose, but belonging to a third party; then the wool was weighed & packed in sheeting of deft.'s. The course of dealing was that the wool remained on these premises till paid for. The wool in question was not removed or paid for:

—Held: there was a sufficient delivery & acceptance of the goods, within Stat. Frauds, to ground an action for goods sold & delivered, though pltf. retained a special interest in them, not properly a lien, in respect of the understood engagement not to remove them till paid for.—DODSLEY v. VARLEY (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 632; Arn. & H. 128; 4 Per. & Dav. 448; 5 Jur. 316; 113 E. R. 954.

1858. —Sale by buyer in own name to satisfy damages.—Pltfs., merchants at Dieppe, sold to deft., a merchant at Wisbech, a quantity of oil cake, which was delivered to deft. there in Dec. 1841. Deft., conceiving that the cargo did not answer the sample, landed a portion of it for the purpose of examination, & subsequently, landed the whole, stored it in a public warehouse, & wrote to pltfs. informing them that it lay there at their risk & costs, & requiring them to take it back: which pltfs. refused to do. After some correspondence, deft., in May, 1842, gave pltfs. notice that the cargo was lying at the warehouse at their disposal, & that if no directions were given by them, it would be sold, & the proceeds applied in part payment of deft.'s damages. Pltfs. answered that they considered the transaction at an end, & demanded payment of the price. Deft. thereupon offered the cargo for sale in his own name, & in July sold it in his own name to a third until the following day. The vessel having been lost on the passage:—Held: the seller's duty was to have given the purchaser immediate notice of shipment, so as to enable him to insure; & this not having been done, that the risk remained with the seller.—*FLEET BROTHERS v. party:—Held: these facts sufficiently showed an acceptance of the goods by deft., after which he could not treat the contract as rescinded; he was not to be considered an agent of pltf's. from necessity, to dispose of the goods; & he could not, in an action against him for another debt, set off money paid by him on bills which he had accepted on account of the disputed cargo before its arrival.—CHAPMAN v. MORTON (1843), 11 M. & W. 534; 12 L. J. Ex. 292; 1 L. T. O. S. 148; 152 E. R. 917.

1861. Acts of ownership—Spreading out seed.]—Pltf. sent twenty sacks of seed to defts. in part performance of a verbal contract for the sale of seed to the value of more than £10. On the same day one of defts. informed pltf. that he had heard the seed had arrived out of condition. Pltf. asserted it was in condition. Immediately afterwards defts. wrote to pltf., rejecting the seed, & in one of the letters informed him that "the twenty sacks which you authorised us to receive for you, & to lay out thin in consequence of its being hot & mouldy," would be returned.—On the trial, the above facts being proved by pltf., who gave evidence that he gave no authority to spread it out, & that the seed was not hot & mouldy, the judge directed a nonsuit, with leave to enter a verdict if there was any evidence of, or acceptance of, part of the goods:—Held: there being evidence to go to the jury that the seed was spread out thin, neither because it was out of condition, nor by pltf.'s authority, there was evidence that it was spread out thin as an act of acceptance; & therefore, the nonsuit was wrong. But the ct. thought the evidence too slight to justify them in entering a verdict for pltf., & directed a new trial.—PARKER v. WALLIS (1855), 5 E. & B. 21; 3 W. R. 417; 119 E. R. 390.

be sent by a certain railway, as had been the practice between the parties in their previous dealings. On the timber arriving at the railway station in the country, on Apr. 19 deft. was informed of its arrival, when he told the railway clerk he should not receive it. He received at the same time an invoice, which he kept. On May 28 deft. informed pltf. that he declined to take the timber:—Held: although there might be a scintilla of evidence of an acceptance within Stat. Frauds, yet the jury ought to have found for deft.; & the ct. set aside a verdict for pltf. as against evidence.—NORMAN v. PHILLIPS (1845), 14 M. & W. 277; 14 L. J. Ex. 306; 9 Jur. 832; 153 E. 1864. — Kept for further trial.]—Pltf. sold a hogshead of cider to deft., by sample, as good draught cider. After the arrival of the cask, deft. on May 28 wrote to pltf.: "The cider differs from the sample, & the little I have sold has been complained of in every instance; should this continue I shall be obliged to return it." Pltf. did not answer this letter till June 24. Deft. in trying to sell it used 20 gallons, but finding it unserviceable, refused to pay for the rest, which he returned to pltf. It was found as a fact that the 20 gallons were more than sufficient to enable deft. to test the quality of the bulk:—Held: the omission of deft. to answer the letter of May 28 was evidence from which a jury might presume that pltf. acquiesced in the further trial of the cider, & deft. had not so accepted the bulk as to be bound to pay for the whole.—*LUCY v. e. Delay in returning goods—Goods not likely to deteriorate.]—Delay in returning an article not likely to the latter. Owing to a dispute as to the quality of the 420 piculs of cotton, the matter was referred & an allowance made. The 420 piculs were afterwards weighed, the price ascertained, the invoice made out, & subsequently, at deft.'s request, corrected by deducting the amount of the allowance:—Held: there was evidence that deft. consented to take the 420 piculs, & the property in the same passed to him so that pltf. could maintain an action for goods bargained & sold.

It is argued that no action can be maintained, because the contract was for the sale of 500 piculs, not 420. SUB-SECT. 2.—BUYER'S RIGHT OF INSPECTION.

See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 34.

1866. Whether implied—Sale by auction—Printed conditions.—Certain woollen & mercery goods were put up to sale by auction. Each lot was described in the catalogue as containing a certain number of yards. The goods were open to public inspection for two days before the sale. By the printed conditions of sale, the purchaser of any lot was to pay down a deposit; the lots were to be taken away with all faults, imperfections, or errors of description, on a day specified; & the remainder of the purchase-money was to be paid before the delivery. There was also a memorandum, that all small remnants were to be cleared at the measure stated in the catalogue. The biddings at the sale were to be at so much per yard:—Held: (1) in such a sale no condition was implied, that a purchaser might inspect & measure the lots, before paying the remainder of the purchase-money; (2) such a condition would be at variance with the printed conditions.—PETTITT v. WHITMORE (1843), 11 M. & W. 347; 12 L. J. Ex. 318; 1 L. T. O. S. 81; 7 Jur. 535; 152 E. R. 837.

Pltfs. supplied defts. with a parcel of 40,000 books which they knew were intended for America. Defts., without inspecting the books, sent them to America, where they were inspected & rejected as not being of the quality agreed, & were sent back to England. Defts. gave notice to pltfs. that they intended to reject them all, except such as were saleable, & they sold 13,000 of them, & rejected the rest:—Held: (1) as pltfs. knew that the books were intended for America, that was the proper place for inspection, & defts. were therefore entitled to reject them; & defts. could recover the cost of sending them to America & back to England; (2) as each of the books had to be up to standard defts. could accept some & reject the others.—*MOLLING & Co. v. 1873. ——— No reasonable opportunity on shipment.—Resp., who carried on business in Spain, sold to applt., a merchant in Liverpool, a quantity of Spanish walnuts, to be shipped f.o.b. at Tarragona. The documents arrived in England before the goods, & applt. had taken up the documents & paid the price before the goods were delivered. On finding that the goods were not of the contract quality applt. rejected them & claimed the return of the price. Resp. contended that applt. ought to have examined the goods at the port of shipment & had lost his right of rejection:—Held: as the buyer was not to be deemed to have accepted the goods until he had had a reasonable opportunity of examination, & as applt. had in the circumstances not had a reasonable opportunity, he had not lost his right of rejection.—BRAGG v. VILLANOVA (1923), 40 T. L. R. 154, D. C.

1874. Mode of inspection—Sale of ship—To be placed on gridiron.—An agreement for the sale of a ship contained a provision that the purchaser should have permission to remove the ship to a suitable gridiron to scrape & otherwise examine the vessel's bottom. The person mutually agreed upon to make the inspection went on board the ship for the purpose, it being in the middle of Milford Haven, when the vendors refused to allow him to inspect the bottom of the ship from the inside, & upon this point the sale went off:—Held: the purchaser was not entitled to maintain an action for breach of contract, as the only inspection permitted was of the ship on the gridiron, & defts. had a right to refuse an inspection when the ship was in the middle of Milford Haven.—DE MATTOS & Co. v. GREAT EASTERN S.S. Co. (1887), 3 T. L. R. 639, H. L.

1875. Effect of failure to inspect—Goods sold "payment after inspection on arrival."—Where goods are sold "Payment net cash after inspections of goods immediately on arrival of steamer," the buyer has a right to claim damages if the goods are not in accordance with the contract even though he does not inspect the goods, or, by mistake does not on inspection discover the defect in them.—KHAN v. DUCHÉ (1905), 10 Com. Cas. 87.

1876. Necessity for return of goods.—If a party purchases an article at a certain price, pursuant to a specimen exhibited, &, on delivery, it is found to be of inferior performance, the party cannot, in an action for goods sold, set up the inferiority of it to the specimen; he should have returned it, & so have rescinded the contract.—*GRIMALDI v. 1879. ———.—Where goods were sold by sample, & the bulk was found by the purchaser on inspection after delivery not to be equal to sample:—Held: the purchaser might reject the goods by giving notice to the vendor that he would not accept them, & they were at the vendor's risk, & was not bound to send back, or offer to send back, the goods to the vendor, or to place them in neutral custody.—*GRIMOLDBY v. 1876 i. Necessity for return of goods.—When goods sold are rejected by the purchaser as disconform to contract it is not absolutely necessary that they should be at once restored to the seller, or placed in neutral custody, as the adoption of either of these courses may be very inconvenient, or impossible, but if the purchaser, after intimating to the seller, his rejection of the goods, retains them in his own custody, he is bound to keep them intact until removal.—*CHAPMAN v. 1876 ii. ———.—Where a buyer orders goods of a specified kind or quality, it is his duty to examine them on delivery to see that they are conform to contract, & in the event of their proving not to be so, to return them immediately to the seller, & if he does not do so, unless the defect is latent & only discoverable after use, he is barred from refusing to pay the contract price.—*CARTER & Co. v. Frauds.—BUSHEL v. WHEELER (1844), 15 Q. B. 442, n.; 3 L. T. O. S. 125; 8 Jur. 532; 117 E. R. 526.

"Sold . . . the following cotton $\frac{DC}{C}$ 128 bales at 25d. per pound, expected to arrive in London, per Cheviot, from Madras; the cotton guaranteed equal to sample in our possession. Should the quality prove inferior to the guarantee a fair allowance to be made." The sample contained long stapled Salem cotton. When the bulk arrived it turned out to be Western Madras cotton, which is inferior to long stapled Salem, & requires different machinery for its manufacture:—Held: the contract was not a contract for the sale of the specific cotton on board the Cheviot, but it was a condition precedent that the cotton should be long stapled Salem, & therefore debt. was entitled to refuse to accept the cotton which arrived.—AZEMAR v. CASELLA (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 677; 36 L. J. C. P. 263; 16 L. T. 571; 15 W. R. 998, Ex. Ch.

1888. Effect of arbitration clause.—G. & co., on July 31, 1889, entered into a contract to buy from B. W. & co. 1,000 cases of tinned salmon. The contract contained, amongst other things, the following provisions: "Quality guaranteed good merchantable, & equal to the average of the spring pack of 1889 season C. R. salmon at 22s. per case, ex quay Liverpool. Usual examination for customary allowances & general broker's conditions. Any dispute to be settled by arbn." On Apr. 3, 1890, G. & co. wrote to the agents of B. W. & co. that they did not consider the tender, as per samples, examined, equal to contract guarantee, & therefore must call for arbn. An arbitrator was appointed on each side, & the parties went to arbn. The arbitrators award was dated Apr. 11, 1890, & was, so far as is material, as follows: "That the buyers accept the salmon, & that the sellers make an allowance to the buyers of one shilling & sixpence per case." The arbitrators, according to their evidence, had proceeded on the understanding that they were not merely to find whether the salmon was inferior in quality, but, if they found it was so, were to decide whether it should be rejected or not. G. & co. moved to restrain B. W. & co. from proceedings to enforce the award, & also that the award might be set aside or remitted to the arbitrators for reconsideration:—Held: the submission extended to nothing except the question whether the goods were up to guarantee, & if the goods were not of the guaranteed quality, the buyers were entitled to reject them, the sale not being of specific goods; the arbitrators had exceeded their jurisdiction in dealing with a question not submitted to them; & the matter must be referred back to them.—Re GREEN & CO. & BALFOUR, WILLIAMSON & CO. (1890), 63 L. 1889. — & stipulation for non-rejection.—

A contract for the sale of laths to be shipped, & to be "about the specification stated below," provided that the property in the goods was to be deemed to have passed to the buyers when the goods were put on board, & contained a clause that, if any dispute arose under the stipulations of the contract, the buyers were not to reject any of the goods, but the dispute was to be referred to arbn. The sellers having put on board laths which were not of the specified lengths:—Held: the buyers were justified in rejecting these laths on their arrival in this country, & were not bound by the terms of the contract to accept them subject to an allowance to be fixed by arbn.—VIGERS BROTHERS v. SANDERSON BROTHERS, [1901] 1 K. B. 608; 70 L. J. K. B. 383; 84 L. T. 464; 49 W. R. 411; 17 T. L. R. 316; 45 Sol. Jo. 328; 6 Com. Cas. 99.

which, by reason of the lateness thereof, was an unreasonable & improper hour. The jury found specially on this plea, that the hour was unreasonable & improper. They also found that there was time for deft. to have taken in & weighed the goods before twelve o'clock at night:—Held: judgment ought to be entered up for plffs. on this finding; a verdict ought to be entered for plffs., on a plea denying that they were ready to deliver the goods within the last fourteen days of Mar.

In such a case the party bound must find the other, at his peril & within the time limited, if the other be within the four seas; & he must do all that, without the concurrence of the other, he can do, to make the payment, or perform the act, & that, at a convenient time before midnight, such time varying according to the quantum of the payment, or nature of the act to be done (PARKE, B.).—*STARTUP v. 1892. Goods tendered without proper shipping marks—Subsequent tender of goods properly marked.]—(1) Deft. employed plffs., who were cotton brokers in London, to buy 500 bales of cotton for him, telling them to buy gradually at 8½d. if they could not do better. Cotton could not then have been bought at 8½d. Plffs. shortly afterwards passed to deft. a bought note, "Bought on your account 500 bales, etc., at 8½d." This was signed by plffs. as brokers, & at the bottom of the note a charge of ½ per cent. was made for brokerage. Before delivery of the cotton, deft. became aware that plffs. had not, at the time of their passing this bought note, made any contract for him for the purchase of cotton, but that they had subsequently bought the 500 bales, in their own name, to enable them to make delivery to him partly at 8½d. & partly at 7½d. per pound. Deft. would not have accepted the bought note from plffs. if he had known that they were thus acting as principals in the transaction. Deft., on becoming aware of the state of circumstances, refused to accept the cotton, & this action was brought to recover damages for non-acceptance. It was proved that there was a custom in the London cotton market that, if a broker bought for his employer of an undisclosed principal, he was liable himself upon the contract:—Held: the action was not maintainable, as no contract of sale had been made between plffs. & deft.

(2) Plffs. before the expiration of the time for the delivery of the cotton, tendered marks of cotton that was not in accordance with the terms of the contract, & on deft. rejecting the same, they, before the expiration of the time fixed for delivery, tendered marks of cotton that was in accordance with the contract:—Held: plffs. had not, by the first delivery, broken the contract, so as to justify deft. in refusing to accept the cotton subsequently tendered.—TETLEY v. SHAND (1871), 25 L. T. 658; 20 W. R. 206.

1893. Cargo tendered without shipping documents—Defts. agreed to buy of plffs. a cargo of maize. Plffs. tendered the cargo of the C., which defts. refused to accept, upon the ground that the shipping documents were not tendered with it.

Plffs. insisted that the tender was valid. This dispute was referred to an arbitrator, who decided that the tender was invalid. Plffs. thereupon, & within the time limited by the contract, tendered the cargo of the M., which defts. refused to accept, upon the ground that they were not bound to accept any cargo in substitution for that of the C., the tender of which the arbitrator had decided to be invalid:—Held: defts. were bound to accept the cargo of the M., & might be sued by plffs. to recover any loss which the latter might have sustained through the refusal to accept it.

It may be that, where goods which fulfil the terms of a contract are appropriated for sale in performance thereof, there is an election by the vendor which is irrevocable (BRETT, L.J.).

When a selection is made of goods not specified in the contract, the goods selected, if they comply with the conditions of the contract, must be treated as if they had actually been named in the contract (COTTON, L.J.).—BORROWMAN v. FREE (1878), 4 Q. B. D. 500; 48 L. J. Q. B. 65; 40 L. T. 25, C. A.

1894. Goods subject to approval—ORNSTEIN v. ALEXANDRA FURNISHING CO. (1895), 12 T. L. R. 128.

1895. Goods not merchantable—Though remediable on outlay.—The expression "merchantable quality" in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 14 (2), means goods saleable at the time the delivery is made, & not goods which can only be made saleable if some labour is expended on them.

In Oct. 1908, defts., an English co., who sell motor accessories, gave an order to pltf., a manufacturer in Paris, for a large number of motor horns of different sizes & of different prices "delivery as required." The goods were delivered in 19 cases at various dates in May & June, 1909, the last delivery being on June 24. On the same day defts. inspected the goods, & as the result of their inspection rejected them all, except those contained in one case which they had already resold, mainly on the ground that the goods were not merchantable. In an action by pltf. to recover the price of the goods:—Held: according to the true construction of the contract, it was to be treated as a separate contract in respect of each consignment; & subject to the exception of de minimis, the buyer had a right to insist that all the goods comprised in each consignment should be of merchantable quality, & if they were not, then to reject the whole consignment.—*JACKSON v. 1896. Delay in delivery.—By a contract in writing 200 tons of cotton seed were sold for shipment from Bombay & certain other Indian ports to Hull, via Suez Canal during Aug. & Sept. 1910, at 26 15s. per ton net, free delivered in sound & merchantable condition to buyers' craft alongside. Shipment was to be by steamer or steamers, direct or indirect, with or without transshipment, & the bill of lading was to be proof of date of shipment in the absence of evidence to the contrary. Particulars of shipment were to be given within six days after the receipt of the shipping documents in this country. It was further provided that if the seed, on arrival proved to be not as warranted, or was damaged or out of condition, it was to be taken with an allowance. The contract was to be void as to any portion shipped that might not arrive by the ship or ships declared against the contract. By notice in writing dated Sept. 6, 1910, the sellers declared a shipment under the contract of 1,600 bags of cotton seed by the Othello under a bill of lading dated Aug. 16, 1910. The Othello, which was a general ship, left Bombay with the cotton seed on board on Aug. 18, 1910, intending to call at Karachi for further cargo. On Aug. 22, 1910, when near Karachi, she stranded, & was not refloated till Nov. 27, 1910. About 1,646 tons of her original cargo, including the cotton seed, were landed & stored at Karachi, & she returned to Bombay for repairs. On Feb. 12, 1911, the Othello again left Bombay, having on board 1,540 tons of new cargo to replace a somewhat larger quantity of manganese ore originally shipped at Bombay but jettisoned on the stranding off Karachi. Included in these 1,540 tons of new cargo was a further quantity of cotton seed which, being shipped in Feb., was available for & was used by the owners thereof to fulfil contracts made by other parties for Jan. to Feb. shipment. On the arrival of the Othello at Karachi on the second occasion she loaded the cargo, including the cotton seed in question, which had been left there; & on Feb. 20 she sailed for Hull, where her cargo, including the cotton seed, was discharged on Mar. 27, 1911, the cotton seed being carried under the original bill of lading. The buyers having declined to accept the declaration of shipment as a proper declaration in fulfilment of the contract the dispute was referred to arbn. No evidence was given in the arbn. to show that the stranding of the Othello was due to negligence. The arbitrators found that there was no undue delay in the refloating of the vessel after the stranding, or in the execution of the repairs, & that the voyage was not unduly delayed by the loading of the further cargo at Bombay; that cotton seed purchased for Aug. or Sept. shipment would be seed of the old crop & on arrival in the ordinary course would go into consumption before the new crop would be available; that when the new crop first comes on the market the value of seed of the old crop is at a discount compared with the price of seed of the new crop; & so far as the question was for them, the arbitrators found as a fact that the delay in delivery beyond the normal time for a voyage from Bombay to Hull was not due to any act or default of the sellers. They further found that the buyers had been prejudiced by the fact, but not further or otherwise, that the seed, being seed of the old crop arrived at a time when it had to compete on the market with seed of the new crop. On these findings:—Held: (1) there had been no cancellation of the original shipment in Aug. 1910, so as to make the reloading at Karachi in Feb. 1911, a new shipment, & as such, not within the time stipulated for by the contract; the loading of further cargo at Bombay in Feb. 1911, did not constitute a new voyage so as to vitiate the tender made by the sellers; (2) the mere fact that the seed when it arrived at Hull was exposed to a more highly competitive market than that which it was expected would be found was not sufficient to warrant a finding of fact that the commercial object of the contract was defeated; therefore, the sellers were entitled to call upon the buyers to accept delivery of the seed; (3) semble: on the construction of the contract, the buyers would be entitled to damages for the delay in the delivery of the seed if it could be shown that the delay had been caused by the negligent navigation of the Othello.—Re CARVER & Co. & SASSOON & Co. (1911), 17 Com. Cas. 59.

1897. Whole cargo not delivered.]—By two contracts in similar terms cotton seed was sold, to be shipped in Alexandria & delivered in London to buyers' craft alongside, payment to be in London in exchange for shipping documents. On the arrival of the ship in London, & after payment by the buyers, a portion of the seed was delivered into the buyers' barges. The ship then left for Hull with the remainder of the seed on board in order to discharge other cargo. The ship returned to London in fourteen days & the balance of the seed was tendered to the buyers, but they refused to accept it. The buyers retained the portion which had been delivered & claimed repayment of the price paid for the rejected portion:—Held: when the delivery had begun the buyers were entitled to receive the whole quantity before the ship left the port, & in the circumstances the buyers were entitled to keep the part actually delivered & to reject the balance & to be repaid the price of the balance.—BEHREND & Co. v. PRODUCE BROKERS' Co., [1920] 3 K. B. 530; 90 L. J. K. B. 143; 124 L. T. 281; 36 T. L. R. 775; 15 Asp. M. L. C. 139; 25 Com. Cas. 286.

C. Limitation of Right.

1898. Delivery on trial—Necessity for return on discovery of defects.]—Though on the sale of a horse there is an express warranty by the seller that the horse is sound, free from vice, etc., yet if it is accompanied with an undertaking on the part of the seller to take the horse again, & pay back the purchase-money, if on trial he shall be found to have any of the defects mentioned in the warranty, the buyer must return the horse as soon as he discovers any of those defects, in order to maintain an action on the warranty, unless he has been induced to prolong the trial by any subsequent misrepresentation of the seller. In such case the term trial means a reasonable trial.—ADAM v. RICHARDS (1795), 2 Hy. Bl. 573; 126 E. R. 710.

1899. — Reasonableness of trial question for jury.]—Where utensils to be used in trade have been contracted for & delivered at a stipulated price, it is a question for the jury, whether the vendee, who complains that they are unfit for the purpose for which they were intended, has used them further than was necessary, in order to give them a fair trial; & if not, the commodity being bulky, & after a reasonable trial found to be unfit for such purpose, the vendor upon notice given, is bound to take them away; but if the vendee retain the utensils, without giving such notice, he is liable to pay for the value of the materials.—OKELL v. SMITH (1815), 1 Stark. 107; 171 E. R. 410, N. P.

1900. Whether repudiation within reasonable time—Question for jury.]—It is a question for the jury, whether the vendee of goods which turn out to be of a quality inferior to that which was stipulated for, has in point of fair mercantile dealing given a notice sufficiently early to the vendor of 1901. Custom as to rejection—Inconsistent with express contract.]—A usage of trade cannot be set up in contravention of an express contract: Therefore, where A. agrees to sell to B. a quantity of prime bacon, which B. weighs & examines, & pays for by a bill at two months, but before the bill becomes due, gives notice to A. that the bacon does not answer the contract:—Held: A. could not give in evidence a custom that the buyer was bound to reject the contract, if at all, at the time of examining the goods.—YATES v. PYM (1816), 6 Taunt. 446; 128 E. R. 1107; sub nom. YEATS v. PIM, 2 Marsh. 141.

1902. ———.]—Held: an alleged custom in the iron trade that defective castings might be returned by the purchaser to the founder, & that in such a case the purchaser had no claim against the founder except to have them replaced by sound castings or to receive credit for their cost price, could not apply to a contract which expressly provided that the purchaser relied upon the founder's inspection of the castings, & would use them on receiving them, & that the responsibility must rest on the founder.—VICKERY'S PATENTS, LTD. v. HILL (1917), 33 T. L. R. 536.

1903. ——— Reasonableness.]—Semble: an article sold by sample cannot be rejected as not corresponding with the sample, except within a reasonable time.—SANDERS v. JAMESON (1848), 2 Car. & Kir. 557.

1904. Custom compelling acceptance—Subject to allowance—Existence in Liverpool corn trade.]—A contract for the sale of wheat to arrive, contained a clause that any dispute arising thereout should be referred to arbitration as therein provided. On its arrival, the buyer claimed the right to reject it, on account of inferiority in quality. The sellers at once called for an arbn. The arbitrators made an award that the purchaser should take the wheat with an allowance:—Held: the award was invalid, inasmuch as the only question submitted to the arbitrators was the buyers' right to reject. No custom exists in the Liverpool corn trade compelling a buyer to accept, with an allowance, wheat inferior in quality to that contracted for, if not sea-damaged.—SINIDINO, RALLI & Co. v. KITCHEN & Co. (1883), Cab. & El. 217.

1905. Effect of stipulation as to rejection—Damaged part only—Whether parcels divisible.]—In a contract for the sale of ten bales of cotton at so much a pound, the following stipulation was contained: "Claims for damaged cotton allowed at the value of the sound cotton at the time of return, if claim & return made within ten days & three months." Of two out of the bales delivered respectively, two-thirds were sound & one-third damaged:—Held: the purchaser was not entitled to return & be allowed for the whole bales, but only the one-third that was damaged. Semble: such a quantity out of a bale might be damaged as to render the whole bale substantially damaged cotton, & returnable under the above stipulation, even though there were some sound cotton in it.—MELLOR v. STREET (1866), 15 L. T. 223.

D. Loss of Right.

1908. Fourteen days.]—A trader ordered bags of wool of defts., merchants, in Dec., which were delivered on Feb. 19 following, & by the course of dealing the trader had the option of returning the wool for which he had no call, though previously ordered. The trader being from home when the bags were delivered, on his return the same day gave directions not to have them opened or entered in his books, but only weighed off to see that they agreed with the invoice; he being then in embarrassed circumstances & intending not to take them into the account of his stock if in the event he found himself unable to pursue his business. Afterwards on Mar. 4, 5, being then avowedly insolvent, he returned the bags with a letter to the merchants declaring his situation, & hoping that they would have no objection to take back the wool, & requesting the favour of a line of approbation thereof; which letter was received & the approbation given after an act of bkpcy. committed on the same day the letter was sent:—Held: by the trader keeping possession of the goods so long, his option, which ought to have been exercised on the receipt of them, was gone; & being in a state of insolvency & on the eve of bkpcy., he could not exercise the power of restoring the goods to the vendors, though without any fraudulent concert with them: but the trader's assignees were entitled to the property.—*NEATE v. 1909. Two months—Without inspecting goods.]—If a person purchases an article, & suffers it to remain on his premises for two months without examination, & then finds it to be unfit for use, he cannot, after that length of time, avail himself of the objection in an answer to an action for the price, unless some deceit has been practised with regard to the article.—PERCIVAL v. BLAKE (1826), 2 C. & P. 514; 172 E. R. 233.

1910. Necessity for prompt notice of rejection.]—If one order a certain machine, e.g. a threshing-machine, which, when sent to him, turns out to be unfit for use, he should either return it immediately, or else give immediate notice to the vendor to fetch it away; for if he keep it a long time without doing either, he will be taken to have waived all objections to its goodness.—*CASH v. 1911. Using more than necessary as sample.]—Pltf. contracted by parol with H., deft.'s agent, for the purchase of flour above the value of £10 of the same quality as deft. had supplied to M. On the next morning deft. sent to pltf. a sold note, which described the flour simply as "Whites XS." On the following day flour answering the description of "Whites XS" was delivered. Pltf. tried half a sack, & finding it not so good as the flour supplied to M., which was "Whites XSS," complained of it to H., but afterwards used two more sacks & sold a third, & then paid the contract price under protest:—Held: pltf. after having used more of the flour than was necessary for the purpose of testing it, & sold a portion of it, was not at liberty to rescind the contract & recover the price paid as money had & received to his use.—HARNOR v. GROVES (1855), 15 C. B. 667; 3 C. L. R. 406; 24 L. J. C. P. 53; 24 L. T. O. S. 215; 3 W. R. 168; 139 E. R. 587.

1912. Announcing incapacity to return goods—On advice of solicitor.]—Goods were consigned from London to A. at Sunderland according to order; & a draft for the price, the invoice, & the bill of lading, were forwarded. On the arrival of the goods at Sunderland A. was in difficulties, & desired that they should not be received from the wharf where they then lay. But in the absence of A., & without his consent, the goods were deposited on his premises. He afterwards knew of these facts, & took & kept the key of the warehouse in which the goods were deposited. On Feb. 4, A. wrote to pltf., the vendor, returning the draft unaccepted, & stating the circumstances as to the goods, & that a stoppage of his business was decided upon, & continued: "I immediately sent for my solr. to get his advice, amongst other things, as to whether I could not, under the circumstances, return the hemp to the wharf. He declared not; which placed me under the necessity of depriving you of what I considered your right. I cannot say what dividend there is likely to be." "I return your draft, &, although it can be little satisfaction to you, must express my extreme regret that you are so unfortunately placed." On Feb. 6, the vendor applied to A. for the goods, & was referred by him to his solr. On Feb. 25, A. made an assignment to defts. for the benefit of his creditors, & delivered the key of the warehouse to them. The goods were demanded of defts. & were refused; & defts. sold them.

In an action of trover by the vendor:—Held: (1) the property in the hemp passed to A. by the delivery on board ship & the forwarding of the bill of lading; (2) there was no valid rescission of the contract, for such could only be by mutual consent, therefore any expression of a wish to rescind uttered by one party & not communicated to the other was immaterial, the letter of Feb. 4, which was communicated to the vendor, did not amount to an offer by A. to rescind, but to an assertion that he could not do so; (3) there was no valid stoppage in transitu, for the natural transit was ended, & the facts showed that A. had taken to the goods as owner whilst they were in his possession.—HEINEKEY v. EARLE (1858), 8 E. & B. 410; 28 L. J. Q. B. 79; 31 L. T. O. S. 357; 4 Jur. N. S. 848; 6 W. R. 687; 120 E. R. 159, Ex. Ch.

1913. Purchaser despatching goods abroad.]—Defts. engaged to supply shoes to pltf.s., to be according to sample, & to be inspected & paid for by pltf.s. before shipment, it being known that the shoes were intended for the French army; a large quantity of shoes were inspected, approved & delivered, & a portion then sent by pltf.s. to Lille. It was subsequently discovered by pltf.s. that some of the shoes contained paper in the soles, which the French authorities would not allow, & after various communications defts. engaged to take back shoes returned because they contained paper, but not a larger quantity if only a few were so defective. The French authorities rejected all, & on cutting open a large number most were found to contain paper, which was also found in the sample; the shoes both delivered & undelivered were inferior to sample, & the defect could not be discovered by any reasonable inspection. Pltf.s. gave notice that they rejected the shoes delivered & would receive no more, & brought their action:—Held: (1) pltf.s. were entitled to reject the shoes delivered, & throw them back on defts.' hands at Lille & in England respectively, to refuse to receive more, & to recover as damages the whole money paid, the expense of sending to & keeping at Lille & the loss of profit on all shoes delivered or not.

In the case of executory contracts, where the goods are not ascertained or may not exist at the time of the contract, from the nature of the transaction no property in the goods can pass to the purchaser by virtue of the contract itself (BOVILL, C.J.).

(2) The shoes could not have been thrown back on defts.' hands at Lille but for the second engagement.—HEILBUTT v. HICKSON (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 438; 41 L. J. C. P. 228; 27 L. T. 336; 20 W. R. 1005.

1914. Sending carrier for goods—No inspection until next day.]—Pltf. sold a quantity of wheat to deft. by sample, & delivered it at a railway station some 20 miles from deft.'s mills. In obedience to the directions of deft. the wheat was brought from the station to the mills by a carrier employed by him. On inspecting it next morning, deft. found it was not equal to sample, & rejected it:—Held: on these facts he was precluded from rejecting it.—WATSON v. HODGSON (1876), 40 J. P. 487.

between appts. in Gibraltar & resp. in Malta appts. sold to resps. anchovies f.o.b. Gibraltar. Upon the anchovies arriving in Malta resp. complained of their quality, but without claiming to reject them; on the contrary he claimed an allowance for an alleged shortage & delivered them to purchasers from him. Upon their refusing to accept the goods, resp. claimed to rescind his contract with appts., & brought an action against them in Malta. The cts. there found that the anchovies were defective in quality, & applying the law of Malta, held that resp. was entitled to rescind the contract, & to recover from appts. the price, together with the sums paid for freight & insurance:—Held: under Gibraltar Ordinance No. 20 of 1895, s. 35, which is in the same terms as Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 35, resp. had lost that right [to reject] since he had acted in a manner inconsistent with the ownership of the sellers.—BENAIM & Co. v. 1916. General rule.]—Pltf. sold barley by sample to deft. to be delivered at a railway station. Deft. resold by the same sample. On the barley being delivered, the stationmaster, at deft.'s request, sent him samples taken from the sacks; & deft. thereupon ordered the barley to be forwarded to the sub-purchaser, who on inspection found it not up to sample, & rejected it. Deft. then claimed to reject as against pltf.:—Held: there was nothing in the facts to dislodge the prima facie presumption that the place of delivery was to be the place of inspection, & when deft. ordered the barley to be forwarded to the sub-purchaser the property passed to him, & his right of rejection was gone.—PERKINS v. 1919. —.]—Wheat was sold under a c.i.f. contract to be shipped from a foreign port to this country. The ship arrived & the buyers took up the shipping documents on Mar. 20. On Mar. 21 she commenced to discharge the wheat & the buyers took delivery. On the same day they resold & dispatched to sub-purchasers a portion of the wheat so delivered to them. They subsequently discovered that it was not in accordance with the contract, & on Mar. 23, before a reasonable time for the examination of the goods had expired, they gave the sellers notice of rejection. It was contended by the buyers that before the date of the sub-sales the property in the wheat had passed to them, so that the sellers had no ownership with which the sub-sales could be inconsistent:—Held: (1) whether the true effect of a c.i.f. contract is that the passing of the property in the goods is suspended until after the buyer has had a reasonable opportunity of examining them, or that the property passes upon the buyer taking up the shipping documents subject to its being revested in the seller in the event of the buyer rejecting the goods as not being in accordance with the contract, the transfer of the possession to the sub-purchasers was an act inconsistent with the ownership of the sellers, being either inconsistent with their ownership at the time of such transfer of possession in one view of the contract, or inconsistent with the ownership revested in them by rejection in the other; (2) the provisions of Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), are not limited by Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 34, & the transfer of possession to the sub-purchasers put an end to the buyers' right of rejection notwithstanding that it took place before a reasonable time for examining the goods had expired.—HARDY & Co. v. HILLERNS & FOWLER, [1923] 2 K. B. 490; 92 L. J. K. B. 930; 129 L. T. 674; 39 T. L. R. 547; 67 Sol. Jo. 618; 29 Com. Cas. 30, C. A.

I. co., to be put up at the next E. I. co.'s sale by the proprietors, if required, at a certain price there mentioned. The proof was, that, besides these conditions, the rice was sold per sample. This is no variance; the words "per sample" not being a description of the commodity sold, but a collateral engagement that it shall be of a particular quality. The rice did not correspond with the sample; but deft., after seeing fresh samples inferior in quality to the original purchase sample, put it up at the E. I. co.'s sale, at a limited price; & no bidding taking place to that extent, he bought it in:—Held: he could not afterwards repudiate the contract.—PARKER v. 1922. Effect on right to repudiate—Acceptance of part.]—If a person orders several articles from a tradesman, at the same time, though at different prices, he may consider the whole as forming one order, & he will not be obliged to accept or pay for any particular articles, unless all the rest are furnished according to the terms agreed on; but if he accept of any one article, he is precluded from saying that the order was entire, & he will be obliged to accept & pay for so many as are individually furnished according to the contract.—CHAMPION v. SHORT (1807), 1 Camp. 53; 170 E. R. 874, N. P.

1923. ——— Allegation of inferior quality.]—Defts. agreed to buy from plffs. goods of a certain description, to be delivered in instalments. The first instalments were delivered & paid for. Defts. then refused to accept any further deliveries on the ground that their sub-purchasers would not take them, owing to previous commitments. No further deliveries were tendered by plffs., who brought this action for damages for repudiation of the contract. Defts. then alleged & proved that the goods delivered & accepted were in fact slightly inferior to the contract description, & claimed that they were entitled to repudiate the whole contract:—Held: (1) plffs.' breach of contract in respect of the instalments delivered & accepted under the contract was not a repudiation of the whole contract, but a severable breach, giving defts. a right to claim compensation under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 31, & not a right to treat the whole contract as repudiated; (2) defts. were not entitled to reject future deliveries before they were tendered, on the plea that plffs. could not have made good deliveries of the remainder if requested to do so.—TAYLOR v. OAKES, RONCORONI & Co. (1922), 127 L. T. 267; 38 T. L. R. 517; 66 Sol. Jo. 556; 27 Com. Cas. 261, C. A.

Effect on liability for price—Goods not as represented.]—A. sold to B. for £95 two pictures, representing them as "a couple of Poussins," they were, in fact, not originals, but very excellent copies; B. did not offer to return them:—Held: if the jury thought that B. believed, from the representation of A., that they were originals, he was not bound to pay the price agreed upon; but as he kept them, he was liable to pay such sum as the jury might consider to be the value.—LOMI v. TUCKER (1829), 4 C. & P. 15; 172 E. R. 586, N. P.

1930. ——— Goods returned as condition of obtaining further credit.]—A trader, being in insolvent circumstances, applied to a creditor, to whom he owed £2,500 for goods supplied in the way of his business, to supply him with more goods on credit. Creditor refused to supply any more goods unless debtor paid £200 on account of the goods previously supplied. Debtor said he could not pay the money, & on being pressed by creditor, he offered to return goods to the amount of the £200, which he did not want. Pltf's. shipped the goods accordingly, but G. becoming shortly afterwards insolvent, an agreement was made between him & pltf's. to rescind the contract of purchase, & an order was signed by G. for a redelivery of the goods to pltf's. Pltf's. accordingly demanded the goods of deft., offering to pay all reasonable charges, & every lawful claim in respect of the same. Deft. refused to redeliver, as the goods had been put on board for a particular voyage, & afterwards carried the goods on the voyage:—Held: (1) as G. had not become bkpt. or taken the benefit of Insolvent Act, the property in the goods revested in pltf's. by operation of the agreement to rescind & the order to redeliver, & the right to the possession was in pltf's. at the time of the conversion; (2) as the charterer had a right to take the goods out of the vessel before the stipulated sum for the hire of the vessel had become due, the refusal by deft. to redeliver the goods after the demand of pltf's. was a wrongful conversion.—*THOMPSON v. 1945. Common agent of both parties—Entry of bill to credit of seller—Effect on principal's right to recover.—A. at the Cape, ordered 300 bags of coffee of B. at Rio, to be shipped & sent to the Cape. R. & co., at London, were the general agents of both buyer & seller. The coffee was to be paid for by a bill drawn by B. on R. & co. for the amount. A bill of exchange for the amount was accordingly drawn by B., on & accepted by R. & co. The coffee was received by the buyer. R. & co. on the receipt of the bill of exchange, credited the account of B. in their books with the amount, & debited the account of A. with a like sum. Before the bill of exchange arrived at maturity, R. & co. stopped payment:—Held: the entry of the amount of the bill of exchange to the credit of B. in the books of the mutual agents was not a payment for the coffee; & B. did not, by such entry, accept in satisfaction of his demand the credit opened by the purchaser with R. & co.—*MAXWELL v. 1946. Sale subject to discount—Omission of discount in contract—Liability of broker.—D., deft. entered into the following contract with R., pltf.:—"Mar. 22, 1860, From J. D., Corn Broker, To Messrs. R., Liverpool. Dear Sirs,—I have this day sold to you two cargoes of French maize, to consist of 800 to 1,000 quarters, shipment all Apr., from the port of Bordeaux, at 33s. 3d. per 480 lbs. cost & freight, payment in London, less 60 days' interest & 1 per cent. brokerage. Mr. J. Walker, London, will send contracts." On the following day W. forwarded contracts for the two cargoes on behalf of T. of Bordeaux, the owner of the maize, but omitting the stipulation as to the brokerage. Pltfs. remonstrated, & deft. said he would write to W., but pltfs., in order to obtain the cargoes, were subsequently compelled to pay the 33s. 3d. without any deduction for brokerage:—Held: deft. was responsible for the failure of W. to send the contracts stipulated for. Semble: deft.'s liability was not affected by the fact that pltfs., instead of returning the contracts sent by W., accepted the maize under them.—REID v. DREAPER (1861), 6 H. & N. 813; 30 L. J. Ex. 268; 4 L. T. 650; 7 Jur. N. S. 1125; 158 E. R. 335.

1947. Agent buying as apparent principal—Entrusted with purchase-money—Seller delaying to obtain payment—& electing to treat agent as debtor.—When goods are sold to an apparent principal for ready money, the seller must at his peril obtain immediate payment, & if the buyer is only an agent contracting in his own name, & receives the price forthwith from his principal, the seller who omits to enforce immediate payment cannot at a subsequent time recover the value of the goods from the principal upon the failure of the agent to pay over to the seller their price. The seller of goods to an apparent principal upon discovering that the buyer is only an agent may so conduct himself by demanding payment from, & taking proceedings against, the agent that he will be deemed to have elected to look to the agent only for payment, & will be debarred from any remedy against the real principal.

Defts. instructed R. to buy 700 pieces of cloth. R. obtained the cloth from pltf., who made out the invoices to him. The terms of sale to R. were "cash on delivery." R. forwarded the cloth to defts. making out the invoice in his own name. The value of the cloth was £271 17s. 6d. Upon receipt of the cloth defts. sent R. £55 & defts. were allowed by R. on account of some silk £19 10s. R. afterwards drew a bill for £200 in favour of pltfs. upon defts., which was duly paid to pltfs. Pltfs. charged R. with interest, & not obtaining payment of the balance requested by letter payment of it by defts., defts. replied by letter repudiating liability. After receiving defts.' letter pltfs. twice demanded payment of the balance from R., & took proceedings in bkpcy. against him. R. having become insolvent, pltfs. afterwards sued defts. to recover the sum of £71 17s. 6d. the balance due after payment of £200:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to recover, (a) because the goods were sold for ready money, & pltfs. having failed to enforce immediate payment from R. could not hold defts. liable, who had meanwhile paid R. the value of the goods; (b) because by demanding payment from R. & taking proceedings in bkpcy. against him after they knew him to be only an agent, they had made a final & irrevocable election to treat him as their debtor instead of defts.—MACCLURE v. SCHEMEIL (1871), 20 W. R. 168.

1951. — Order amounting to equitable assignment.—The following letter, sent to the holders of the fund out of which payment is to be made, does not require a bill stamp:—"We now authorise you to pay to Messrs. R. & co., having revoked the former order in their favour, after you have paid yourselves the balance we owe you from the net proceeds of our shipments to your foreign establishments to the present date, one half of the remainder of the proceeds of shipments, provided the same shall not exceed the sum of £5,000.—H. & J."

Defts. carried on business as a commission house at Liverpool, & were connected with several houses abroad in which they were partners, but the foreign partners were not partners in the Liverpool house. H. & J. were in the habit of consigning goods to defts., to be sent abroad to their foreign houses for sale, & the proceeds were remitted to defts. on account of H. & J. H. & J. being indebted to R. & co., wrote the above letter to defts., on which defts. wrote to R. & co., stating they would pay the money accordingly on receiving their guarantee, which R. & co. thereupon gave. Before the proceeds were received by defts., H. & J. became bkpts., & their assignees gave defts. notice not to pay any thing on account of bkpts.:—Held: on the goods being afterwards received & sold by defts., the proceeds were not recoverable by the assignees, as the letter of H. & J. contained a specific appropriation or an equitable assignment to R. & co., which was not revocable by bkpts. or their assignees.—*HUTCHINSON v. 1952. Order acted upon.—Pltf., a merchant at Sunderland, having given an order to B. & co., at Dantzic, for a cargo of wheat, wrote to request that B. & co. would hold it at the disposal of defts., merchants of Liverpool, who would lodge the necessary credits for the remaining balance, & communicated this to defts. A few days afterwards, & before the wheat was shipped from Dantzic, pltf. wrote to deft. as follows:—"We request you will account to Mr. J. S. of Newcastle for the proceeds of the wheat we have consigned to you, lying at Dantzic, in Messrs. B.'s possession, which we wrote about to you a few days ago." Defts. assented to this order, & informed S., who was largely indebted to them, that they held the wheat to his account; & on its arrival, they rendered accounts of the sale of it to S., & placed the balance of the proceeds to the credit of his account with them:—Held: pltf.'s order to account to S. was an order transferring the proceeds to him, & not a mere order to pay to him, & was not revocable after defts. had acted upon it.—*DICKINSON v. T. deals with his share through their means, & H. then revokes his directions to carry to T.'s separate account in consequence of T.'s default in meeting a bill, of which he was joint acceptor with H. H. files a bill for a decree that he has a lien on T.'s share in the hands of Messrs. G., & for an account & lien on the balance. Bill dismissed with costs.—HOLROYD v. GRIFFITHS (1856), 3 Drew. 428; 4 W. R. 225; 61 E. R. 966.

1954. — Assented to by all parties.—In 1842, W. & S., type foundry, were indebted to G., pltf.'s testator, in £6,000 for money lent. Deft., who was a member of the firm of E. & S., printers, had been accustomed to purchase of W. & S. large quantities of type, for which quarterly accounts used to be sent, & it was expected that those dealings would be continued. W. & S. being applied to by G. for payment, delivered to him the following order, signed by them, & directed to deft.: "We hereby authorise you to pay on our account to the order of G. £6,000 at the following periods, deducting the amount from the quarterly accounts for type furnished to you & to Messrs. E. & S., viz. Nov. 11, 1843, £1,000; Nov. 11, 1844, £1,000; Nov. 11, 1845, £1,000; Nov. 11, 1846, £1,500; Nov. 11, 1847, £1,500." Deft., on receiving this order, wrote underneath, "Having received the foregoing authority from Messrs. W. & S., I undertake to make you the payments as above stated." The instalments were paid up to Nov. 11, 1844, but no other part of the £6,000 was paid. W. & S. continued to furnish deft. with type, the quarter's account of which, up to Dec. 31, 1845, amounted to £651 0s. 9d. On Dec. 18, 1845, deft. wrote to W. & S. stating that he considered himself bound to see all the amounts due from him to them applied in payment of the debt due to G.:—Held: the documents amounted to an agreement, that, if any of the specified portions of debt mentioned therein were at any time unpaid by W. & S. to G., & if, after that event had occurred, & come to the knowledge of deft., any quarterly accounts for type should become due from deft. to W. & S., deft. would, so far as those accounts would extend, pay the debt due from W. & S. to G., & such agreement, when assented to by all parties, was irrevocable, & consequently pltf. were entitled to recover the £651 0s. 9d.—*HAMILTON v. 1956. Payment of balance on resale.]—In a contract for the sale of 641 hogsheads of tobacco, then on board a vessel bound from A. to B., it is stipulated "that one-fifth of the contract price shall be paid in ready money, & that for the other four-fifths the sellers are to look to their correspondents, D., of B. to whom the property goes consigned. It is nevertheless understood between the parties, that interest is to be calculated as if the sale was made at two & three months from final delivery; the buyers to have the benefit of the sellers' policy in case of average." One-fifth of the contract price is paid in ready money. On the arrival of the tobacco at B., it meets with an unfavourable sale, & a loss of two-fifths of the estimated value takes place:—Held: the buyer is liable to the seller upon this contract, for the amount of such loss.—HOFFMAN v. HEYMAN (1822), 1 B. & C. 7; 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 74; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 3; 107 E. R. 3.

1957. Admissibility of evidence of custom.]—By the custom of trade, when timber is sold in bond at a sale by auction in London, the buyer contracts to buy at a price including the duty payable, & he may, by giving notice on the following day so to do, elect to take the timber in bond, & if he does so, he is then only bound to pay the price less the duty. On Feb. 10, 1860, deft. bought timber in bond at a sale by auction at a price including duty, the contract to be completed within fourteen days, & the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the evening of that day gave notice that a resolution would be moved to reduce the duty on timber, & he accordingly moved & carried such a resolution on Mar. 8. An Act of Parliament passed to that effect on May 5, the reduction commencing from Mar. 8. On Feb. 11 deft. gave notice to the seller that he elected to take the timber in bond, & on Feb. 24 offered the price less the then duty, which plffs. refused to take, & they also refused to give a delivery order for the timber. In an action by plffs. to recover the price of the timber:—Held: the custom was receivable in evidence.—CLARK v. SMALLFIELD (1861), 4 L. T. 405.

I have an account for a large amount of goods not purchased, & a demand made for payment, opposed to treaty. This allowance was according to an usage in that particular branch of trade, but above the legal rate of interest. The contract being a bond fide sale is not usurious. Otherwise, if it had been merely colourable, to cover a loan & evade the statute.—FLOYER v. EDWARDS (1774), 1 Cowp. 112; Lofft. 595; 98 E. R. 995.

The jury having found a verdict for the sum demanded, with interest, the ct. refused to set aside the verdict, or to reduce the damages.—HARRISON v. In the contract, & also in the declaration thereon, this additional percentage is called "interest" upon the instalments. Neither the instalments nor the additional percentage are paid as they become due, nor is any bond given:—Held: the purchaser is chargeable with interest upon the last four instalments until actual payment of those instalments, but the jury are not bound, either at common law or under Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (c. 42), s. 28, to give interest upon the additional percentage treated by the parties as "interest."—ATTWOOD v. A trader here gives an order to his correspondent abroad to ship him certain goods, which the latter procures upon his own credit, without naming the trader here, & ships to him at the original price, charging only his commission:—Held: the correspondent abroad is so far a vendor as between him & the trader here that on the bkpcy. of the latter he may stop the goods in transitu by procuring the bill of lading from bkpt.'s brother; & this though the trader here had before his bkpcy. accepted bills drawn on him by his correspondent for the amount of the goods; such acceptances proveable under his commission amounting at most to part payment for the goods, which does not take away the vendor's right to stop in transitu.—*FEISE v. The only question is whether H., having a right

He could not do this more efficiently & correctly than by the general mode of transferring a bill of lading (BEST, C.J.).—MORISON v. GRAY (1824), 2 Bing. 260; 9 Moore, C. P. 484; 3 L. J. O. S. C. Surety of purchaser.]—B., a trader in London, ordered goods to be shipped to him by D. & co., his correspondents at Dantzic, who were to draw for the amount on F. at Hamburg, who had agreed to accept the bills upon receiving commission on the amount, & the bills of lading & invoices were to be transmitted to D. & co. from Dantzic to F. at Hamburg, who was to forward them to B. in London; & F. accordingly accepted the bills of exchange drawn upon him & on the receipt of the bills of lading transmitted the same, which were made out to the order of the shippers & not indorsed, to B., in London, who received them, together with the invoices & letter of advice, five days after an act of bkpcy. committed by him. F. also became bkpt., & the bills of exchange drawn on him by D. & co. were obliged to be taken up & paid by themselves:—Held: (1) F. had no right to stop the goods in transitu, being no more than a surety for the price & not vendor or consignor; (2) one who was general agent of F. in London having obtained the bills of lading from bkpt. after his bkpcy. upon an agreement when the goods arrived to dispose of them, & to apply the net proceeds to the discharge of such bills as had been drawn against the goods, had no authority to retain the proceeds against the assignees of B. the bkpt., either in respect of F. or in respect of a stopping in transitu on behalf of D. & co., the shippers, who after his possession of them & after trover commenced by B.'s assignees for the value sent a letter to him approving of his having obtained possession of the bills of lading & the goods; for at any rate there was no adverse stopping in transitu, but the goods were obtained by agreement with the vendee after his bkpcy.; even if deft. could be considered as agent for the shippers at the time by relation.—SIFFKEN v. WRAY (1805), 6 East, 371; 2 Smith, K. B. 480; 102 E. R. 1328.

2036. —.]—According to the usage of the London dry goods market, a broker who buys for an undisclosed principal is personally liable to the seller for the price of the goods.

D., a broker, bought of C. for undisclosed principals a quantity of gum sandrac then lying at the St. Katharine's Dock, to be paid for on Saturday, Mar. 18, & obtained a delivery order from C., which he indorsed & gave to his principals on the faith of their representation that the goods were wanted for immediate shipment. D.'s principals, however, pledged the delivery order with a bank, & on the evening of Mar. 17 they stopped payment. On the morning of Mar. 18 the bank sent the delivery order to the dock office in the city with a request for a warrant, which, they were told, would be ready on Monday. Notice of the delivery order having been lodged was sent by the dock co. in due course to their warrant office at the dock, where through a mistake of the messenger it did not arrive until three p.m., & in the meantime a clerk of D., who had, in accordance with the usage of the trade, paid the price of the goods to C. that morning, applied at the warrant office in C.'s name for a warrant for the goods, which was made out & given to him, as the goods were clear in the cargo ledger. C. indorsed the warrant to D., & in consequence of what had happened, the dock co. on the Monday refused to act on the bank's delivery order. In an action by the bank against the dock co., D. & co.:—Held: D. was entitled to the goods, for the bank had never obtained either actual or constructive possession of the goods, & D., having paid the price of the goods as surety for his principals, was, notwithstanding his prior application for the delivery order & endorsement thereof, entitled, by virtue of Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 97), s. 5, to the benefit of the unpaid vendor's lien subsisting in C.

What was the position of the Imperial Bank? They had a modified ownership in the goods, but they were not the actual owners. They were pledgees of the goods, they were armed with the delivery order, & they had a right, . . . to require one of three things from the Docks co. They might go to the Docks co. & say: "Here is our delivery order; deliver us the goods standing in the name of Messrs. C.," who had given a delivery order. Of course, if nothing had intervened, that is, if there had been no stop & nothing to prevent the Docks co. delivering the goods, they would have delivered the goods. . . . Or they might say to the Docks co.: "We do not want you to deliver the goods; we want you to hold them for us, & be our bailees (that is, instead of making actual delivery), & so to make a constructive delivery to us by entering them in our name in your books, by which we should become owners to the same extent as if they had been delivered to us, & you to be our warehousemen or bailees of the goods for us." Or they might have super-added to this second proposal a third thing; they might have said: "Besides entering our names in your books, give us a dock warrant, which will show our title to the goods, & enable us to confer a title by indorsement on the buyer of the goods" (JESSEL, M.R.).—IMPERIAL BANK v. Before the goods were sold or the proceeds ascertained, the latter shipped three cargoes of timber to the former, to credit in account. Two of them arrived. Against the third, the consignor drew a bill for the amount, whilst it was in transitu. In the interval, the consignee dishonoured the bill & became insolvent:—Held: the consignor had a perfect right of stoppage in transitu, & was not bound to wait until the mutual accounts between him & the consignee were finally adjusted.—WOOD v. JONES (1825), 7 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 126.

2042. — Acceptance of composition by seller.]—A. sold to B. a butt of wine, which was not delivered. B. compounded with his creditors, & the amount of the wine was, by A.'s consent, included in the composition. The composition money was secured by bills, & A. had a claim against B. beyond the price of the wine. Before the whole of the composition was paid, B. demanded the wine of A., who refused to deliver it:—Held: he was bound to deliver it, as he had undertaken to do so; & the doctrine with respect to stoppage in transitu did not apply under the circumstances.—NICHOLS v. Whilst the bill was running the vendor sold a part, which, by his direction, was delivered by the vendor to the sub-vendee whom the vendor charged with warehouse rent for the part, which he paid. Subsequently the vendee became bkpt., & the bill was dishonoured:—Held: the assignee of bkpt. vendee could not without paying the price maintain trover against the vendor for the residue of the goods which had remained in his hands.—MILES v. GORTON (1834), 2 Cr. & M. 504; 4 Tyr. 295; 3 L. J. Ex. 155; 149 E. R. 860.

The vessel having been taken to the docks, was there entered in the name of one of the engineers; & whilst shipwrights & other agents of debtor were occasionally or constantly on board, the vessel remained in the possession of the engineers till the boat was ready to make a trial trip. 2063. — Sale to sub-purchaser.—D. bought of Y. forty-six puncheons of rum, lying in the warehouse of Y., at Liverpool, & sold them to C., who was a clerk of Y., but carried on business for himself. D. gave C. an invoice, specifying the marks & numbers of each puncheon, & took his acceptances for the price. The rum, & the samples which had been taken, remained in Y.'s warehouse. The invariable mode of delivering goods sold while they are in warehouses at Liverpool, is by the vendor's giving a delivery order to the vendee. D. was asked by C. for delivery orders, but declined giving any, except for two or three puncheons, which C. received. C. marked, coopered, & gauged the casks. While the bills were running, C. sold twenty-six of the puncheons to K., who paid him for them, & who, by C.'s permission, without the knowledge of D., gauged & coopered the casks in the warehouse of Y., & marked them with his initials. C. gave an invoice to K., stating the marks & numbers of the casks, & by whom the rum was bonded. C. also, while the bills were running, sold eighteen puncheons of the rum to two other parties, to whom he gave similar invoices, & samples; & who afterwards obtained three of the puncheons, on a delivery order signed by themselves, but not by D. They paid C. for the whole. The bills given by C. for the price of the forty-four puncheons were dishonoured:—Held: C. never had acquired the actual possession of the rum, & on his dishonouring his acceptances, D. had a lien on it for the price; & C.'s sub-vendees could not claim against D. the rum which remained undelivered to them.

The very appropriation of the chattel is equivalent to delivery by the vendor, & the assent of the vendee to take the specific chattel, & to pay the price, is equivalent to his accepting possession (PARKE, J.).—*DIXON v. 2065. Whether lien exists over remainder—Dependent on intention governing delivery.—A part delivery of goods to vendee, will not vest the absolute right of possession to the whole in him, unless it be done in progress of the delivery of the whole; but if it be clear that the intention was to separate the part delivered from the rest, the original right of lien which the vendor had will still remain.

Deft. employed an agent to sell a certain quantity of hay in a stack, which he did, to one C., & took his promissory note, payable at three months, to the agent himself, for the price. The agent immediately discounted the note with pltf's. his bankers. The purchaser at several times within the three months, carried away several tons of the hay, & afterwards sold the remainder to pltf's., allowing the note given by him to the agent to be taken as part payment, & receiving a further sum. The agent afterwards became bkpt., & upon demand being made by pltf's., after the three months had elapsed, to be allowed to take away the rest of the hay, deft. refused. In an action of trover for the hay:—Held: (1) the fact of part having been delivered did not take away deft.'s lien; but (2) deft. could not be considered as an unpaid vendor, so as to revive the right of lien upon the expiration of the time for which the note was to run.—*BUNNEY v. 2072. — — — — —.]—Goods were consigned to pltf's. order to a station on defts.' railway, & the usual advice note was sent them by defts. On Apr. 12 pltf's. sold these goods to one J., payment half by cash, half by bill at three months due July 13; & handed over the advice note to J. with an indorsement directing defts. to deliver the goods to J.'s order. On Apr. 24 J. handed over this delivery order to D. as collateral security for the payment of money advanced to him by D. with a second indorsement ordering defts. to deliver the goods to D.'s order. But neither this delivery order nor that made by pltf's. was stamped in accordance with Stamp Act, 1870 (c. 97), s. 89. J. becoming insolvent, D. on May 14 wrote defts., inclosing the delivery order, & directing them to hold the goods to his order. To this he received the following reply from defts.' goods manager, dated May 15: "I have yours of yesterday inclosing transfer of rails & beg to say I hold them to your order; but you will please produce this order when applying for the rails, & which order must also bear a transfer stamp by both parties transferring the goods, in accordance with the Act of Parliament. You will be aware they remain here at owner's risk & subject to our usual rent-charges." On May 19 D. affixed an adhesive stamp to each transfer, but omitted to cancel the stamps as required by Stamp Act, 1870 (c. 97), ss. 24, 89, & the same were never up to trial so cancelled. On May 23 defts. wrote to pltf's. asking if they consented to the goods being delivered to D., to which pltf's. replied on June 23 & 30, giving defts. formal notice to hold them to their, pltf's., order; but upon indemnity being given by D. the goods were handed over to D. The bill given to pltf's. by J. in part payment of these goods not being met at maturity, pltf's. claimed the goods as partial unpaid vendors, & brought an action against defts. for wrongfully parting with the possession of them:—Held: (1) the condition in defts.' letter of May 15 as to the transfer stamp was no qualification of their admission that they held the goods to D.'s order; (2) the letter was an absolute attornment by the defts. to D., by which pltf's. right of possession as unpaid vendor was destroyed, & pltf's. were, therefore, not entitled to recover.—POOLEY v. GREAT EASTERN RY. By the custom of the trade the charges of warehousing were to be paid by the vendor for fourteen days after the sale:—Held: the vendee had taken possession of the whole & the vendor had no right to stop what remained in the hands of the wharfinger.—HAMMOND v. ANDERSON (1803), 1 Bos. & P. 2076. — — — — —.]—On Sept. 12, G. wrote to defts. as follows: "I will agree to purchase your oak timber at L. wharf, to be delivered free to boats when required, at so much per foot, naming the sum. Payment by bill at four months date from measurement." On Sept. 21, the contract was completed, & the following note signed by defts. the vendors: "Sold to G. the oak timber at the prices mentioned in his letter of Sept. 12, delivered to boats. Payment, £100 by bill at one month, & balance by bill at four months from measurement." The timber had been brought by defts. to the wharf at L., belonging to a wharfinger on the canal where defts. were in the habit of conveying & depositing their timber to remain until sold, when it would be carried away by canal. On Oct. 7, G.'s agent measured the timber on the wharf, & marked it with G.'s initials, which were "scribed" & "punched" upon each piece, & G. also employed men to "square" it for his trade purposes, & paid them £5 for so doing. On Oct. 15, whilst the squaring was going on, the bills were given to defts., & the first bill for £100 was duly paid, but before the four months bill became due, & whilst the timber remained at the wharf, G. became bkpt., & assigned all his estate to trustees, pltf's., who thereupon demanded possession of the timber, which was refused by defts., who then removed the whole of it from the wharf into their own custody, except enough to cover in value the £100 paid bill. An action was brought by pltf's., as trustees of bkpt.'s estate against defts., for detention of the timber, when a verdict was found for them with leave to move, & upon a rule to set aside the verdict & enter a nonsuit or a verdict for defts. on the ground that defts. were entitled to stay in transitu, the ct. having power to draw inferences of fact:—Held: it was not a question of stoppage in transitu, but whether the lien of the vendors had ceased by their allowing the vendee to deal with the timber, while it was in the custody of the wharfinger, as he had done, which was a question of fact upon the evidence; & as an inference of fact, there was an actual transfer of the possession of the timber to the vendee, & the vendors' lien was gone, & they had no right to meddle with the timber.

The vendee had taken actual possession of the timber. He had sent his agent to the place where the timber lay, who had measured & marked it with the initials of the vendee's name; he had expended money upon it in having it "squared," as it is termed, for the purposes of his business, & I think that he had thereby taken a possession of it, which excluded the vendors from afterwards saying that they still had a lien on the goods. . . . The case is answered by saying not that the transitus was or was not at an end, but that the vendors had parted with their lien by allowing the vendee to take possession of the goods, the same being at the time out of the vendors' possession, & in the possession of a third person, the wharfinger (POLLOCK, C.B.).—COOPER v. 2077. — Holding as bailee of seller.]—Pltfs., through T., who was acting for them in the matter, bought three old boilers which belonged to & were in the possession of a paper co. While the boilers still remained on the premises of the paper co., T. sold them to H. for £60, on the terms that £20 should be paid before the removal of the first boiler & the balance of £40 by Dec. 1909, & in Oct. 1909, T., by letter, informed the paper co. of the sale to H. Subsequently H. sold the boilers, which still physically were in the paper co.'s possession, to defts. & paid £10 on account to T., but paid no more. There was no acknowledgment by the paper co. to H. that they held the boilers on his behalf:—Held: pltfs. were not precluded from setting up their right of lien as unpaid sellers by the fact that they had through T. informed the paper co. of the sale to H.

I agree that it is not necessary to have an acknowledgment to pass the possession. . . . It may be done by something in the nature of a delivery order (VAUGHAN-WILLIAMS, L.J.).—POULTON & SON v. ANGLO-AMERICAN OIL CO., LTD. (1911), 27 T. L. R. 216, C. A.

B. sells a specific & ascertained portion of these goods to C. in London who pays for them, & transmits B.'s order to A. for the delivery of them. On the fourth day after A.'s receipt of the order B. becomes bkpt., & then & not before, A. refuses to deliver the goods to C., insisting that he has a lien upon them for the price. F.'s cheque having been dishonoured, defts. refused to give delivery of the seed to pltfs.:—Held: (1) the delivery order was a document of title to the goods which had been "transferred" by defts. to F. within the meaning of Factors Act, 1889 (c. 45), s. 10, & Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 47, & having been transferred by F. to pltfs., who took it in good faith & for valuable consideration, defts.' right of lien as unpaid vendors was defeated; (2) the delivery order was valid notwithstanding that it related to goods which were not specific.—ANR. JURGENS MARGARINEFABRIEKEN v. 2095. Election to appropriate payment—To particular purchase.]—A factor in London purchased from time to time silk for R., & paid for the same. Remittances were made by R. generally, & not on account of any particular purchase. A general account current was kept by deft., & then rendered to & checked by R., & the next account began with the balance of the preceding one. After the purchase of a certain lot of silk by the factor, which R. sold shortly afterwards to pltf., two such accounts were delivered & balances struck in favour of R., showing that the factor had, subsequent to the purchase of this silk, received remittances from R. amply sufficient to cover both its price & also the preceding items of the amount against him. Subsequently, the balance being much against R., the factor sold this lot of silk, among others, to recoup himself:—Held: the accounts showed an election by the factor to appropriate the remittances about the time of the purchase of this lot of silk in payment of the advance on account thereof, & they were therefore not entitled to sell it, as against pltf., to recoup

They sent the invoice of the goods to B. The goods were loaded by L. Before the day of payment for the goods or the repacking, B. became bkpt. 2107. — — — — — C. purchased goods of pltf. in London, & ordered them to be forwarded to Guernsey, by the care of deft., C.'s shipping agent at Southampton. Deft. took the goods from the warehouse of a London & Southampton waggoner, by whom they had been brought from London, paid the waggoner's charges, & shipped the goods for Guernsey in deft.'s name. C., who was insolvent, wrote at the request of pltf. to deft. to reland the goods without saying why; deft.'s clerk, in his master's absence, obtained a custom-house order for that purpose, but before he had relanded the goods, the vendor of other goods sold to C., & shipped in the same vessel, although a stranger to & without authority from pltf., ordered deft.'s clerk to stop the goods sold by pltf. to C.; when deft.'s clerk promised that deft. should hold them for the owner:—Held: deft.'s having taken these goods from the waggoner, & having paid the waggoner's charges & shipped the goods, was not such a determination of the transitus to Guernsey as to authorise deft. to hold the goods in assertion of a lien for a general balance due to him from C.—*NICHOLLS v. The vendors' agents accordingly delivered the goods to the railway co. for carriage to the buyers. The vendors had paid all freight & charges in respect of the carriage of the goods. While the goods were still in the possession of the railway co. as carriers the vendors, being unpaid & having been informed that the buyers were insolvent, gave notice of stoppage in transitu to the railway co. The buyers, who had meanwhile become owners of the goods by indorsement & delivery of the bill of lading, were indebted to the railway co. in the sum of £1,170 on a general account. The co. claimed, under the condition in the consignment note, that they had a lien as against the vendors in respect of the £1,170 due from the buyers:—Held: the condition did not confer on the railway co. a right to assert a general lien on the goods in respect of the debt of the buyers in priority to the vendor's right of stoppage in transitu.—*UNITED STATES STEEL PRODUCTS CO. v. Right of the shipper in such cases limited to insolvency, etc. When a vessel is chartered by the consignor, & goods are put on board, those goods are considered as in transitu; & when the consignor has not received payment, he has a right to stop & divert the delivery of those goods, & has what a proprietary lien upon them. . . . If the person, to whom the goods are consigned is not insolvent; if, from misinformation or from excess of caution, the vendor has exercised this privilege prematurely, he has assumed a right that did not belong to him, & the consignee will be entitled to the delivery of the goods, with an indemnification for the expenses that may have been incurred. . . . It is not an unlimited power that is vested in the consignor, to vary the consignment at his pleasure in all cases whatever. It is a privilege allowed to the seller, for the particular purpose of protecting him against the insolvency of the consignee. Certainly it is not necessary that the person should be actually insolvent at the time. If the insolvency happens before the arrival, it would be sufficient to justify what has been done, and to entitle the shipper to the benefit of his own provisional caution. But if the person is not insolvent, the ground is not laid on which alone such a privilege is founded (SIR W. SCOTT).—THE CONSTANTIA (1807), 6 Ch. Rob. 321; 165 E. R. 947.

bonded warehouse of Messrs. F. & C. at Bristol, & subsequently on the same day verbally agreed to sell them to A. in exchange for other goods, & promised to give him the transfer order when received back from Dublin; & A., in pursuance of such arrangement, then sold & delivered to W. & co. goods to the value of £90. On Sept. 9, plffs. being ignorant of the spirits having been moved to F. & C.'s customs warehouse, sent by post to W. & co., in answer to their request of Sept. 7, a transfer order, dated Aug. 31, addressed "To the principal Officer, Customs Warehouse, Bristol." On Sept. 7, plffs. drew a bill on W. & co. at five months' date, for £99 odd, the invoice price of a portion of the spirits, which bill W. & co. accepted & returned to them. The excise authorities threatening to seize the spirits unless they were passed through the excise warehouse, W. & co., on Sept. 27, wrote to plffs. for a fresh transfer order for that purpose, which order, also dated Aug. 31, plffs. sent to W. & co. by post on Sept. 29. On Oct. 4, the day before the spirits would have been liable to seizure for non-payment of duty under the bond, they were removed from F. & C.'s customs warehouse to deft.'s duty free excise warehouse, by direction of A., who had obtained W. & co.'s delivery order to F. & C. for that purpose. On Oct. 5, the transfer order of Aug. 31 from plffs. to W. & co. was handed to the excise officer; & on the same day, W. & co.'s effects were seized by the sheriff in execution at the suit of a creditor, whereupon plffs., on Oct. 7, telegraphed to the excise collector at Bristol not to transfer, until further notice, the spirits which were still in the plffs.' names in the excise duty free warehouse. On Oct. 8, a transfer order from W. & co. to A., dated Sept. 8, but actually signed on Oct. 8, & the transfer order of Aug. 31, from plffs. to W. & co., were presented to the collector, pursuant to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 114, s. 122, but, having heard of the execution & received plffs.' telegram, he declined to allow the transfer. On Oct. 12, W. & co. were adjudged bkpts., & on Oct. 15 notice of claim to the spirits on behalf of the assignees was given to defts., but the claim was subsequently abandoned. On July 5, 1865, A. cleared a portion of the spirits, & paid the duty thereon, & on July 29 plffs. gave deft. notice that they claimed the spirits, & not to part with the same except to them. Subsequently, & down to the commencement of the present action deft. has delivered several more of the original number of the casks of whisky to A. In trover by plffs. against deft., the proprietor or tenant of the excise warehouse:—Held: the spirits were in the possession of W. & co., the vendees, & the transitus was at an end, & the right of plffs. as vendors to stop in transitu was consequently gone, at the moment the spirits were taken by the vendees from the vessel, a proceeding which plffs. either authorised or subsequently ratified, & the fact of the spirits being first taken to the customs, instead of to the excise, warehouse was immaterial.—JAMESON v. WILLS (1867), 17 L. T. 380; 3 Mar. L. C. 12.

should have them as soon as they could be got at. In the meantime, before the ship broke bulk, A., by their agents in this country, served notice upon the captain & agents of the ship to stop the delivery of the goods to any person other than themselves:—Held: by the mere promise to deliver them to C. when they could be got at, the goods were not brought into the actual or constructive possession of B., so as to prevent A., the unpaid vendor, from exercising his right of stoppage in transitu; & accordingly A. was entitled, as against the assignees in bkpcy. of B., to the surplus proceeds of the goods after satisfying the charge of C.—COVENTRY v. GLADSTONE (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 44; 37 L. J. Ch. 492; 16 W. R. 837.

Shanghai. The freight to London was paid by W. The packer in advising L. of the despatch of the goods, told him that they were "at his disposal." L. accepted a six months' bill of exchange drawn upon him by W. for the invoice price. The railway co., in advising L. of the arrival of the goods at their Poplar Docks Station, told him that they remained at his order & were held by the co. as warehousemen at his risk, but added, "will be sent to the Gordon Castle." The goods were shipped on board that vessel. The bills of lading were by L.'s direction made out to the order of himself or assigns, but they were never delivered to him by the shipowners, inasmuch as he did not pay the freight. The ship sailed for Shanghai with the goods on board. A few days previously L. had stopped payment, & shortly after she had sailed he committed an act of bkpcy. upon which he was adjudicated a bkpt. The bills of lading were still in the possession of the shipowners in London, of whom they were claimed by W. & by the trustee in the bkpcy. It was arranged that the goods should be sold by the agent of the shipowners at Shanghai, & the proceeds of sale paid to the person who should be entitled to them:—Held: (1) the agreement did not deprive W. of the right to stop the goods in transitu; (2) the transit was not ended till the goods arrived at Shanghai, & the demand by W. of the bills of lading from the shipowners was an effectual stoppage in transitu. Consequently, W. was entitled to have the bill of exchange satisfied out of the proceeds of sale.—Re LOVE, Ex p. WATSON (1877), 5 Ch. D. 35; 46 L. J. Bcy. 97; 36 L. T. 75; 25 W. R. 489; 3 Asp. M. —Goods having been purchased by merchants in London of manufacturers in Wolverhampton, the purchasers wrote to the vendors asking them to consign the goods "to the Darling Downs, to Melbourne, loading in the East India Docks." The goods were accordingly delivered by the vendors to carriers to be forwarded to the ship. The vendors being subsequently informed of the purchasers' insolvency gave notice to the carriers to stop the goods, but too late to prevent their shipment on board the Darling Downs. The ship sailed with the goods on board for Melbourne, but before she arrived the vendors claimed the goods from the shipowners as their property:—Held: the transit was not at an end till the goods reached Melbourne, & therefore the vendors had till then a right to stop them in transitu.—BETHELL v. 2165. ——W. & co., commission agents, having received an order from Australia to buy certain goods on commission, made contracts with six vendors at Manchester for the purchase of the goods, & so far as the vendors were concerned, W. & co. were the principals. The goods were to be sold, delivered at Manchester, & the property passed on delivery to the carriers in Manchester. W. & co. instructed the vendors to mark the goods

N.X.Z. Adelaide, & forward them so marked to Liverpool to the order of defts., who were forwarding agents, for shipment per the ship S., & on Jan. 1, 1908, W. & co. advised defts. that they had instructed the vendors to forward the goods for shipment per the ship S. & directed defts. to include all the parcels in one bill of lading deliverable to the order of W. & co., at Adelaide. The goods were delivered on board by Jan. 11, & the ship sailed on Jan. 18. On Jan. 15, W. & co. became insolvent, & the vendors purported to stop the goods in transitu & obtained from defts., under an indemnity, bills of lading making the goods deliverable to their order. In an action by the trustee in bkpcy. of W. & co. to recover from defts. the value of the goods:—Held: the transit did not end, & the vendors' right to stop in transitu was not determined, on the receipt of the goods by defts. at Liverpool, & the action could not be maintained.—KEMP v. It is not necessary, in order to divest the consignor's right to stop in transitu, that the goods should have been taken by the very hands of the consignee himself.

A. had no warehouse at Manchester, & the vendor delivered the goods to the commission agent, who was to forward them to Lisbon:—Held: the transitus continued until they reached Lisbon, the place named by the vendee to the vendor as the place of ultimate destination, & the latter had a right to stop them in the hands of the agent, the vendee having become insolvent.—*COATES v. 2171. ——A commission agent in London was employed by merchants at Kingston, Jamaica, to buy goods for them in England. He ordered the goods of manufacturers "for this mark," there being in the margin of the letter which gave the order a mark consisting of two letters, with "Kingston, Jamaica," added. The manufacturers knew from previous dealings that this mark had been used by the Jamaica firm. The goods were to be paid for by six months' bills drawn by the manufacturers on the commission agent & accepted by him. On Sept. 11, the commission agent wrote to the manufacturers, telling them to pack the goods & mark them with the mark previously mentioned, & to forward them to specified shipping agents at Southampton, for shipment by a particular ship, "advising them with particulars for clearance." On Sept. 13, the manufacturers sent the invoice of the goods to the commission agent, telling him that they had that day forwarded the goods by railway to the shipping agents "with the usual particulars for clearance." The same day the manufacturers wrote to the shipping agents, sending them the particulars of the goods, & adding, "which please forward as directed." The particulars described the goods as marked with the letters originally given by the commission agent, & the words "Kingston, Jamaica," & numbered with specified numbers, but the columns for "consignee" & "destination" were left in blank. The cost of the carriage to Southampton was paid by the manufacturers. On Sept. 14, the commission agent sent to the shipping agents particulars of the goods, giving the name of the Jamaica firm as consignees, & stating the destination of the goods to be Kingston, Jamaica. The goods were shipped on board the vessel, the bills of lading describing the commission agent as consignor, & the Jamaica firm as consignees. After the ship had sailed, but before her arrival at Jamaica, the commission agent stopped payment, & the manufacturers, who had not been paid for the goods, gave notice to the shipowners to stop them in transitu:—Held: as between the commission agent & the manufacturers, the transit was at an end when the goods arrived at Southampton, & the notice to stop was given too late.—*Re ISAACS, Ex p. 2174. ——Pltf. sold to defts., who carried on business at Hamburg, ten tons of wagon brass ex York stores to be forwarded to the Co-operative Wholesale Society at Goole. Defts. at the same time wrote to the Co-operative Society, who were shipping agents, informing them that they would receive the brass, & directing them to forward it by steamer to Hamburg. Pltf., who knew that the goods were going to be forwarded by steamer, but had received no instructions where they were to be sent after arrival at Goole, forwarded them to the Co-operative Society at Goole, who received them & sent them on to Hamburg. When the brass arrived at Hamburg pltf., who had not been paid, telegraphed to the Co-operative Society's branch there not to deliver it:—Held: as pltf. had only received instructions to send the goods to the Co-operative Society at Goole, the goods were received there by the society as agents in that behalf for defts., & fresh instructions to the society as to the further destination of the goods were necessary; therefore the transit was at an end at Goole, & the notice to stop was too late.—*JOBSON v. 2175. — Forwarding agent.—Goods were purchased of B. in London by A., residing at Falmouth. On Oct. 27, 1876, B. delivered the goods for shipment on a steamer calling at Falmouth, & on the same day posted an invoice to A. On Oct. 29 the steamer left London, & on Oct. 31 arrived at Falmouth, where the goods were discharged on the quay & taken to the warehouse of C., who was the agent of the Steam Packet co., & in the habit of holding goods landed from the steamers at the risk & subject to the order of the consignees, & also with the exclusive right as between himself & the Steam Packet co. of delivering goods to the consignees. On Oct. 30, A. committed an act of bkpcy. by absconding from Falmouth, & on Nov. 4, 1876, he was adjudicated bkpt. On Nov. 4 B. telegraphed instructions to C. not to deliver the goods:—Held: the transitus had not ended on the arrival of the goods at Falmouth, & transfer to the warehouse of C., who, in the absence of instructions, held them as forwarding agent, & not as an agent for B. to keep the goods; & accordingly, that the right of B. as unpaid vendor, to stop the delivery of the goods prevailed as against the claim of A.'s trustee in bkpcy.—*Re WORSDELL, Ex p. 2176. — Utterior destination intended.—When goods have been sent by an unpaid vendor through a carrier to a forwarding agent, who has been appointed by the vendee, & who receives the necessary orders from the vendee & not from the vendor, the transit of the goods upon reaching the hands of the forwarding agent is at an end & the right to stop in transitu is lost, even although the goods may have been intended to be sent to an ulterior & subsequent destination. L. bought certain goods of W. at Bolton, saying nothing as to the place of delivery. L. afterwards arranged with M. that the goods should be sent by steamer from Garston to Rouen. L. then instructed W. to send the goods to M. at Garston. W. accordingly dispatched the goods by railway. The railway co. gave notice to M. of the arrival of the goods, & further gave notice that they would hold the goods as warehousemen. L. then filed a petition for the liquidation of his affairs by arrangement;

he had not paid W. for the goods. W. thereupon stopped the delivery of the goods, & M. returned them to him. The trustee in liquidation of L. having brought an action against M. & W. to recover the value of the goods:—Held: the transit of the goods had ceased when the goods reached Garston & came into the possession of M., as forwarding agent for L., the right to stop in transitu was then at an end, & the trustee was entitled to recover the value of the goods.—KENDALL v. On Aug. 16, W. sent his cart & took away ten of the mats.

On Aug. 18, H. & co. sold to W. twenty other mats of flax, & a quantity of other goods. The flax was sent by railway to Leeds & arrived duly at defts. warehouse; the other goods were sent by sloop to Boroughbridge. On the arrival of this flax at defts.' warehouse, notice was given to W. by letter which stated that unless the goods were sent for, they would remain there at warehouse rents. On Aug. 23, W. sent his cart & took away ten of the latter mats, & left there ten of the mats last sent, & ten of the former. On Sept. 8, W. having become insolvent, the goods which had been shipped for Boroughbridge were stopped in transitu at Hull; & on the same day the ten mats of flax of the second parcel were also stopped at Leeds by H. & co. On Sept. 11, the sheriff entered, & seized all the flax in defts.' warehouse sent by H. & co. under an execution against W. On Sept. 15, there was also a stoppage by H. & co. of the remaining ten mats of the first parcel. It was found by the jury at the trial that the parties contemplated that the goods were to be used for the purpose of manufacture at Mickley Mills:—Held: (1) under the above circumstances, the transitus was at an end on the arrival of the goods at defts.' warehouse; (2) the stoppage of the goods which had been shipped to go to Boroughbridge had not the effect of revesting the property in the parcel of flax which had been sent to defts.' warehouse at Leeds, although comprised in one joint contract with the other goods. (3) Semble: the effect of a stoppage in transitu is not to rescind the contract, but only to replace the vendor in the same position as if he had not parted with the possession of the goods.

(4) At all events, the vendor had no right to retake that part which had arrived at its journey's end.—WENTWORTH v. OUTHWAITE (1842), 10 M. & W. 436; 12 L. J. Ex. 172; 152 E. R. 541.

On the morning of Saturday, May 9, the carman of P. brought a bulk sample from the station, & P. having examined it, & found it equal to sample, said "Don't cart the wheat to the mill at present." In the afternoon P. found himself in difficulties, & on Monday morning stopped payment. On Monday P. gave the vendor an order for the wheat, which he took to the railway station. On an issue to try whether the wheat was the property of the assignees of P. or of the vendor:—Held: (1) there was no acceptance of the wheat by P. within Stat. the necessity of landing them. After some days, B. wrote to the captain, stating that A. was from home, but he, B., thought he had better land the goods on A.'s account. 2195. —[—]—The forbearance or release of an antecedent claim is not a good consideration for an indorsement of a bill of lading, so as to defeat an unpaid vendor's right of stoppage in transitu. L. & S., carrying on business in London & Hong Kong, bought goods of L. & others, merchants at Manchester, to be shipped to their firm at Hong Kong. The goods were on a ten months' credit, & it was agreed that remittances of proceeds of the sales should be made from Hong Kong to meet the acceptances of L. & S. given for the price of the goods, on receipt of the bills of lading. L. & S. contracted for the carriage, & shipped the goods in a vessel they engaged, & the bills of lading deliverable to their firm in Hong Kong, or their assigns, were signed by the master & handed over to L. & S., who accepted the draft of the vendors for the amount of the purchase. Before the goods or bills of lading reached Hong Kong, L. S. & co., being insolvent, & pressed by two banking firms at Hong Kong, to whom they were largely indebted, in consideration of their debt to the bank, assigned to them the "whole of their property, premises, & chattels, specified in a schedule thereto, with all the estate, right, title, interest, claim, or demand of L. S. & co. arising thereout or therefrom." The schedule (inter alia) enumerated "All goods & bills of lading or other documents, for all goods now on the way hither." In pursuance of this agreement the bills of lading were indorsed & handed over to the banking firms, to whom the insolvent circumstances of L. S. & co. at that time were well known:—Held: (1) the pre-existing debt was not a valuable consideration for the assignment, so as to defeat the right of the unpaid vendors to stop the goods in transitu; & (2) the transitus had not ended before the arrival of the goods at Hong Kong, as the transitus continued while the goods were in charge of a third party, contracted with as carrier for the purpose of forwarding them.—RODGER v. 2197. —[—]—Where goods have not been delivered to the purchaser, or to any agent of his, to hold for him otherwise than as a carrier, but are still in the hands of the carrier as such, & for the purposes of the transit, then, although such carrier was the purchaser's agent to accept delivery so as to pass the property, nevertheless the goods are in transitu & may be stopped. The right to stop under such circumstances is not affected by the facts that the purchaser has handed to the shipping agents the bills of lading received by him from the vendor, & has received from them a fresh bill of lading; & that the purchaser is himself a passenger by the vessel on board which the goods are shipped as cargo for conveyance to their ultimate destination.—LYONS v. HOFFNUNG (1890), 15 App. Cas. 391; 59 L. J. P. C. 79; 63 L. T. 293; 39 W. R. 390; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 551, P. C.

structive possession.]—(1) A notice of stoppage in transitu, to be effectual, must be given either to the person who has the immediate custody of the goods, or to the principal whose servant had the custody, at such a time, & under such circumstances, as that he may by the exercise of reasonable diligence communicate it to his servant in time to prevent the delivery to the consignee. Therefore, where timber was sent from Quebec, to be delivered at Port Fleetwood in Lancashire, a notice of stoppage given to the shipowner at Montrose, while the goods were on their voyage, whereupon he sent a letter to await the arrival of the captain at Fleetwood, directing him to deliver the cargo to the agents of the vendor, was held not to be a sufficient notice of stoppage in transitu.

(2) The vessel arrived in port on Aug. 8, on which day, before the captain had received his owners' letter, the agent of the assignees of the vendee, who had become bkpt., went on board, & told the captain he had come to take possession of the cargo. He went into the cabin, into which the ends of timber projected, & saw & touched the timber. When the agent first stated that he came to take possession, the captain made no reply, but subsequently, at the same interview, told him that he would deliver him the cargo when he was satisfied about his freight. They then went on shore together. Shortly afterwards the agent of the vendor came on board, & served a notice of stoppage in transitu upon the mate, who had charge of the cargo, & a few days afterwards received possession of the cargo from the captain:—Held: under these circumstances, there was no actual possession taken of the goods by the assignees; &, as there was no contract by the captain to hold the goods as their agent, the circumstances did not amount to a constructive possession of the goods by them.

(3) Qu.: whether the act of marking, or taking samples, or the like, without any removal of any part of the goods from the possession of the carrier, even though done with the intention of taking possession, will amount to a constructive possession, unless accompanied by circumstances denoting that the carrier was intended to keep, & assented to keep, possession of the goods as the agent of the vendee.

(4) Before the consignor knew of the bkpcy. of the consignee, he had sent three letters to the manager of a bank in Liverpool, inclosing bills drawn by himself upon certain parties, & he referred therein to defts. as persons who would settle any irregularity that might occur respecting the acceptances. These letters were communicated to defts., & assented to by them. Another letter to the same party inclosed a bill drawn upon the consignee for the price of the timber in question:—Held: the letters were admissible in evidence, & were some evidence to show an authority in defts. to stop the cargo in transitu.

(5) The consignor, before the stoppage in transitu, wrote a letter to defts., in which he assumed that they had stopped the cargo, & gave directions as to the sale of it. This letter did not reach defts. until after the stoppage. Qu.: whether it gave authority to them to stop the cargo at the time of the stoppage, or amounted to a valid ratification of that act.—*WHITEHEAD v. 2206. ———.]—The "acceptance" of goods, required by Stat. Frauds, s. 17, in order to make the contract of sale good, may be prior to the "actual receipt," & need not be contemporaneous with or subsequent to it.

Deft., on Oct. 24, having examined at Liverpool several of a lot of 156 firkins of butter, verbally agreed with plffs. to purchase the whole of them, & directed that they should be sent, by carriers whom he named, to Fenning's Wharf, London. The butter was accordingly delivered by plffs. to the carriers, & by them delivered at Fenning's Wharf, in two lots, on Oct. 26 & 27. Fenning was in the habit of receiving & warehousing butter for deft. until he sold it. Plffs. sent an invoice to deft. in London, on Oct. 25, with a letter apprising him that the butter had been sent as he had directed. There was no direct evidence that deft. inspected the butter at the wharf; but on Oct. 27 he telegraphed to plffs. that he should send it back as not according to sample, & it was redelivered, on the same day, by Fenning to the carriers under an order from deft.:—Held: (1) there was ample evidence that the goods when placed in the wharf were put under the control of deft.,

2207. — Delivery order by buyer—Transfer in books of wharfinger.—When the purchaser of goods has lodged an order to deliver them with the wharfinger in whose warehouse they lie, & the latter has transferred them in his books into the name of the purchaser, the vendor's right to stop them in transitu is gone & the wharfinger is bound to hold them as the agent of the purchaser. 2208. — What constitutes agency.—Goods were forwarded in bales by ship to London, deliverable to B. & co., or their assigns, who were factors for sale; & were landed at defts.' wharf. B. & co. gave defts. orders to "weigh & deliver" the goods to M. who had contracted with B. & co. for the purchase of them. They were accordingly weighed & an account of the weights sent to B. & co. who made out invoices to M. accordingly. M. resold several bales of the goods, which were delivered by defts., upon his order, to his vendees; the rest remained on defts.' wharf until they were stopped by B. & co. as unpaid vendors. They were never transferred in defts.' books from the names of B. & co. to that of M. nor was any warehouse rent paid by him:—Held: (1) upon these facts, defts. never stood in the relation of wharfingers to M., so as to be liable to an action on the case by him for the non-delivery of the goods to his order; (2) under these circumstances B. & co.'s right of stoppage in transitu was not determined by the part delivery to M.'s vendees.—*TANNER v. Goods not landed—No application by buyer.—The shippers, acting for G., purchased, & paid for with their own money, flour at Stockton, which was sent by a vessel to London, & the invoice forwarded to G. A manifest of the flour was also forwarded by the shippers to a wharfinger in London, whose practice it was to deliver goods to the consignee named in the manifest upon application, & till application to keep it on board the vessel; if not applied for before the vessel returned, he landed it, & kept it in his warehouse, to the order of the shipper; if the goods were to be delivered to order, he delivered them to persons producing either bills of lading or the shipper's invoices. G. was in the habit of having flour consigned to him at the wharf, & sometimes sold it on board, sometimes when it was landed, & kept for him in the wharfinger's warehouses. The flour in question arrived at the wharf on Apr. 12, but was not landed till Apr. 22; on Apr. 17, before any application by G., who had become bkpt., the flour was claimed under an order from the shippers:—Held: the flour not having been landed, nor any application having been made by G., the shippers might stop in transitu.

2214. Packer—As agent of buyer.—On Mar. 16, 1802, goods were forwarded from Manchester, addressed to A. at the Bull & Mouth Inn, London, in consequence of a previous order from him. On Mar. 23 the goods were sent to deft.'s house as the packer of A., the latter having given no direction at the Bull & Mouth Inn respecting these particular goods; but having given a general order that all goods addressed to him should be sent to deft.; A. having no warehouse of his own. On Mar. 11 A. committed an act of bkpcy. When the goods arrived at deft.'s they were booked to the account of A., & deft., not knowing of A.'s bkpcy., unpacked the goods to ascertain the contents. On Mar. 31 the goods were claimed by the consignees, & on the day after by the assignees of A. against whom a commission had been taken out:—Held: the transitus of the goods was at an end when they arrived at deft.'s house; & consequently, plffs., as the assignees of A., were entitled to recover them in an action of trover.—*SCOTT v. One of the bills is immediately transmitted to B., who, before the arrival of the ship at the place of destination, sells the goods, & indorses the bill of lading to C. 2235. ——— ————A cargo of 80 quarters of wheat was shipped in London, on Dec. 6, 1839, on board a vessel bound to Barmouth & Tremadoc, & by the bill of lading was to be delivered at the port of Barmouth & Tremadoc to L., or to his assigns, on his paying freight, etc. The cargo was paid for by L. partly in cash, partly by his acceptance at two months.

On Jan. 28, 1840, L. by deed assigned all his estate & effects to pltf. & A. in trust for the benefit of themselves & his other creditors. L. was at that time insolvent, to pltf.'s knowledge. The bill of lading was indorsed by L. to pltf. as follows, the indorsement being without date: "I do hereby order that Captain J. do deliver the possession of the within-mentioned quantity of wheat to R., pltf., being one of my assignees, to be disposed of as he may think proper." On Feb. 4, the vessel arrived at Barmouth with the wheat on board, & pltf. there went on board & took samples, & sold 70 of the 80 quarters, for which he paid the freight, & they were delivered to the purchasers: & he directed the master to take forward the remaining 10 quarters to Tremadoc. On Feb. 9, L.'s acceptance became due & was dishonoured, & on Feb. 10, the shippers gave notice to the captain, at Barmouth, not to deliver the wheat, but to hold it to their use. On Feb. 23, the vessel arrived at Tremadoc, where pltf. demanded the remaining 10 quarters, tendering the freight, but the master refused to deliver it:—Held: even supposing pltf. to be in the same situation as L., the right of stoppage in transitu was determined, as to the whole of the cargo, by the acts done by pltf. at Barmouth; semble: if the composition deed contained a release to L. pltf. was an indorsee for value of the bill of lading, & no right of stoppage in transitu therefore existed as against him.—*JONES v. ordered, but declined to take the residue, amounting to 1,442½ sacks, or to accept the bill drawn against them. D. consented to take the residue of the beans, & A. thereupon wrote a letter to him, acknowledging such residue to be his, & inclosed an order to the captain to deliver to the bearer the 1,442½ sacks. D. thereupon handed over the bill of lading to A. D. accepted the bill drawn against the residue of the cargo, & paid it at maturity. Before the arrival of the ship D. sold the residue to E., who accepted a bill for the amount, drawn by B., who happened to be in London, & D. handed to E. A.'s letter & delivery order. E. afterwards applied to F. for an advance of cash, & handed him over as a security (inter alia) such letter & delivery order; & F. gave his acceptance to E. for the amount of cash required; which acceptance was honoured at maturity. Before E.'s acceptance became due, & before the arrival of the ship, E. stopped payment. When the ship arrived, the portion of the cargo which A. had accepted the bill was delivered to him:—Held: (1) D. might exercise the right of stoppage in transitu as to the residue; (2) the delivery order given by A. was not equivalent to a bill of lading.

(3) An unpaid vendor of an interest in a contract for the delivery of goods may, on the insolvency of the purchaser, stop the goods in transitu.

After 30 tons of the cargo had been delivered to the purchaser the vendor gave notice to stop the unloading of the ship. At this time only part of the freight had been paid to the master of the ship. Soon afterwards the purchaser filed a liquidation petition, & a receiver was appointed. The balance of the freight was paid by the receiver, & the remainder of the iron was placed in medio:—Held: inasmuch as it could not be supposed that the master intended to abandon his lien for the unpaid freight, the delivery of the 30 tons did not operate as a constructive delivery of the whole cargo, & consequently, the transitus was not at an end as to the remainder of the cargo, & the vendor's notice to stop in transitu was given in time. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, it must, as a general rule, be assumed that the delivery of part of a cargo is intended only to operate as a delivery of that part. But, if the cargo consisted of the different parts of one entire machine, semble: the delivery of an essential part of the machine would operate as a delivery of the whole.

(2) When goods are placed in the possession of a carrier to be carried for the vendor & to be delivered to the purchaser, the transit is not at an end so long as the carrier holds the goods as carrier, nor until by agreement between him & the purchaser he holds them, not as carrier, but as the purchaser's agent.

(3) The purchaser was also a partner in the vendor's firm:—Held: this did not affect the right of the vendor to stop in transitu.—Re McLAREN, Ex p. COOPER (1879), 11 Ch. D. 68; 48 L. J. Bey. 49; 40 L. T. 105; 27 W. R. 518; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 63, C. A.

Pltfs. entered into a contract with defts. to purchase 70 tons of slates. At the request of pltfs. defts. chartered a ship, & loaded her with the slates for Southampton, taking bills of lading by which the slates were deliverable "to the vendees or their assignees." Before the arrival of the ship at Southampton defts. heard of the insolvency of pltfs., & gave orders to the master to stop the slates in transitu. 2253. Whether goods in transit—Goods delivered to wharfinger.]—A. living at N. in Devonshire, ordered goods of B. in London, who sent them by ship via Exeter, consigned to A., & advised him thereof. On their arrival at Exeter they were delivered to C., a wharfinger who received them on A.'s account, & paid the freight & charges; after their arrival A. wrote to B. informing that in consequence of his affairs being deranged he should not take the goods, & telling him that they were at Exeter; at this time A. had committed an act of bkpcy., upon which he was afterwards declared bkpt. B. applied to C. for the goods, & tendered him the freight & charges due; upon which C. promised not to deliver them out of his custody, but afterwards did deliver them to the assignees of A. though indemnified by B.:—Held: (1) B. had a right to stop the goods in the hands of C.; (2) he might maintain trover for them against C.—*MILLS v. The attorney, on Nov. 3, gave the wharfinger an order not to deliver them to the consignee, which order the consignor wrote to confirm on Nov. 6; on Nov. 7 the goods were claimed under an execution at the suit of A.:—Held: the contract between P. & the consignor was rescinded; the transitus was not ended by the arrival of the goods at the wharf & the order given by P.; & the consignor had a right to stop in transitu.—*BARTRAM v. The goods were, by B.'s direction, landed at the wharf, & there stopped in transitu by the vendor. In trover for the goods by the assignees in bkpcy. of A. against the wharfinger:—Held: the declarations so made by A. to B. were admissible in evidence, although they were not communicated to the vendor or to the wharfinger; & they showed that A. had not taken possession of the goods as owner, & therefore the transitus was not determined.—*JAMES v. 2258. ——— Goods delivered to carrier.]—On July 12, 1864, W. sold P. 11 skips of cotton twist, then lying at defts.' station at S., to be delivered for P. at B. station. 3 of the skips were delivered on July 22, & paid for; but P., objecting to the weight & quality, declined to take any more of them. On Aug. 17, 4 more were sent to B. station, & an invoice of the 8 was sent to P., with an intimation to him that 4 had been forwarded, & that the remaining 4 were lying at S. station waiting his instructions. P. immediately returned the invoice, & wrote to W., saying that he declined to take any more of the twist. On Sept. 1, W. sent an order to S. station, directing defts. to deliver the remaining 4 skips to P. These were accordingly forwarded to B. station, & were taken by P.'s carman to his mill, but were immediately returned by P.'s orders: & the whole 8 were sent back by him to S. station to the order of W. They were again returned by W. to B. station; but P. refusing to have anything to do with them, they remained there until P.'s bkpcy. on Oct. 19, when W. claimed them. Upon a special case stated in an action of trover by P.'s assignee against the railway co., in which the ct. were to

My view of the facts makes it unnecessary for me to deal with the point as to whether the goods were effectually stopped in transitu. I desire to say, however, that, in my opinion, if this had been a fraudulent preference it would have been void, & would not have affected the rights of the parties. The right of G. & co. [vendors] to stop the goods in transitu, as soon as they knew that the bills which had been given in payment for them would not be met, was, in my opinion, not at an end, & they had the right to put the goods into their own disposition (BIGHAM, J.).—*Re JOHNSON, Ex p. Defts. were not the agents of I., nor had they received any authority from I. to make the stoppage. On May 11 pltf., the official assignee of C. & T., demanded from the masters & consignees the cargoes which were then on board the vessels in port, & undelivered, but delivery of them was refused. Agency established at time of buyer's insolvency.]—R., a merchant, resident in Jamaica, in Feb. 1860, ordered from P. & G., merchants residing at Baltimore, in America, goods to be shipped to him at Kingston, in Jamaica, at his risk & expense. The goods were shipped & sent on Mar. 28 following. On Mar. 31 while the goods were on their voyage, a fiat of insolvency was issued against R., & II. was appointed official assignee. Previous, however, & on the 28th of that month, P. & G. were advised of the failure of R. by a letter from a firm in Jamaica, & on the 29th of the same month, by a letter from R. himself, who, at the same time, informed them that he had handed the goods to R. N., one of resp.s., as agent for P. & G., for whose firm R. N. had previously acted as agent & transacted some business. The letters of Mar. 28 & 29 reached P. & G. on Apr. 16 & on that day they executed & sent a letter & a power of attorney to R. N. to do & transact on their behalf, whatever was necessary for their interests in the matter of the consignment of the goods to R. The power of attorney was not received by R. N. until May 5. The vessel containing the consignment arrived at Kingston on Apr. 21 & on that day, R. N. demanded, on behalf of P. & G., & obtained possession of the goods, which he afterwards disposed of. An action of trover having been brought by II., applt., the official assignee of R., against resp.'s firm of R. & B. N. for the value of the goods, the jury found for pltf. for the amount the goods had sold for: leave, however, was reserved to defts. to set aside the verdict & enter a nonsuit, which was afterwards directed, on the ground, that as R. had signified to R. N. his refusal to receive the goods before his insolvency, the property in them had reverted to P. & G., & consequently, had never passed to pltf., the official assignee:—Held: (1) resp., R. N., being by the evidence sufficiently proved to have been the agent of P. & G., before the insolvency of R., the possession taken by him of the cargo on Apr. 21 was an effectual stoppage in transitu on behalf of P. & G.; (2) the letter & power of attorney sent by P. & G., though not received until after the stoppage of the goods, ratified & confirmed the act of R. N., as P. & G.'s agent.—HUTCHINGS v. NUNES (1863), 1 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 243; 9 L. T. 125; 10 Jur. N. S. 109; 15 E. R. 692, P. C.

2279. General rule—Only against goods themselves.]—A contract was entered into by timber merchants in London for the purchase of timber, the property of pltf., in Sweden. Under the contract the vendor shipped the goods on board a vessel chartered by the purchasers. The bill of lading was made out in the vendor's own name, to order or assigns, & was by him indorsed in blank & handed to the purchaser. The purchasers secured the timber, & deposited the policy & the bill of lading with a creditor. The cargo arrived damaged; the creditor sold it, but part of the proceeds was claimed & recovered by the owners of other goods carried in the same ship. The creditor received two sums for general & particular average. The vendor had received a dividend under the purchaser's bkpcy., on condition that it should not prejudice his claim under the stoppage in transitu, & that if he recovered anything under the stoppage the dividend should be returned, the vendor being allowed to prove for the balance of his debt:—Held: (1) the vendor had a right to stop in transitu; (2) the right to stop in transitu conferred only a right to stop the goods in the state in which they arrived, whether damaged or not; & accordingly, the vendor was not entitled to the policy moneys, & had no right to claim from the creditor anything beyond the balance of the money realised by the damaged timber.—*BERNDTSON v. 2289. Intention to stop must be shown.]—A firm at Liverpool & a firm at Pernambuco employed B. as their agent at New York. According to their course of business the firm at Pernambuco received orders from persons there to purchase goods at New York. The firm instructed the Liverpool firm, who instructed B. B. then purchased the goods in New York & shipped them to the firm at Pernambuco with the bills of lading. B. drew bills on the Liverpool firm to pay for the goods, but not for the precise amount of the shipments, & sold the bills in New York. B. advised the Liverpool firm of the bills, & with the advice forwarded a statement of his account with them. To each bill was attached a counterfoil headed "Advice of draft," & containing a memorandum of amount of the bill & the name of the drawer, with the words "Against shipments per, naming the vessel. Please protect the draft as advised above." The Liverpool firm on the bills being presented to them for acceptance detached the counterfoils & kept them in their own possession. Pltfs. were the holders for value of bills drawn on the Liverpool firm in accordance with this course of dealing, the goods having been shipped by B. to the Pernambuco firm & the bills of lading being also sent to that firm. On June 10, 1879, the Liverpool firm stopped payment, & on the same day B. telegraphed to the Pernambuco firm as follows: "Having pledged documents & shipments (naming the vessel) hold proceeds for P. & co. (pltfs.)." The ship arrived on June 11, but the bill of lading had been previously delivered to the purchasers of the goods. The three bills having been dishonoured by the Liverpool firm, pltfs. brought an action against the Pernambuco firm claiming to have the bills paid out of the proceeds of the goods as having been specifically appropriated to meet the bills; & also relying on the telegram as having stopped the goods in transitu:—Held: (1) there was no specific appropriation of the goods either by the course of dealing or by the "advice of draft" attached to the bills; also (2) the telegram to the Pernambuco firm was not effectual to stop goods in transitu.

Stoppage in transitu is a right given to an unpaid vendor at any time while the goods are still in transitu. . . . It is a retaking by the unpaid vendor . . . at any time while the goods are in the hands of the carrier & have not reached the hands of the purchaser or consignee & when they are not in his possession. . . . On the mere construction of that document [the telegram] it is not a declaration that the vendor intends to retake possession (COTTON, L.J.).—PHELPS, STOKES & Co. v. COMBER (1885), 29 Ch. 2290. Pledge of goods—Pledgee holding other securities—Right of seller to marshal.]—A firm in Ceylon employed a firm in England as their agents & factors, the course of business being that the Ceylon firm consigned cargoes to the English firm for sale on their account, & drew bills on the English firm against the consignments. Consignments of coffee having been made in this manner, & bills accepted by the English firm against them, the English firm pledged the coffee, together with certain securities of their own, with T., their broker, to secure a large debt due from them to him. The English firm became insolvent & executed a creditors' deed under Bankruptcy Act, 1861 (c. 134), & then T. sold the coffee, which produced more than sufficient to cover the bills drawn against it, & enough of the other securities to satisfy his debt:—Held: the Ceylon firm were entitled, as against the English firm in liquidation, to have the remaining securities in T.'s hands marshalled, & to have a lien thereon for the balance due to them upon the coffee transaction.—Re HOLLAND, Ex p. 2294. — Unless third party acquires title for value.]—The mere fact that the purchaser of goods has resold them, & that the bill of lading has been made out in the name of the sub-purchaser, does not put an end to the transitus, or destroy the right of the original vendor to stop the goods in transitu. The rule being that effect will be given to a vendor's right of stoppage in transitu, so far as the exercise of that right will not interfere with the rights of third parties acquired for value, it follows that an unpaid vendor, who has given a valid notice to stop in transitu before his vendee has received the purchase-money of the goods from his sub-purchaser, is entitled to have the original purchase-money satisfied out of the unpaid purchase-money of the sub-purchaser.—Re KNIGHT, Ex p. 2296. — Entry of sub-buyer's name in seller's books.]—A. purchased from D. certain goods, lying at D.'s bonded warehouse under the charge of D.'s warehouse keeper, & entered at the custom house in D.'s name; A. paid D. by bills at three months. On the same day A. sold part of the goods, still lying at D.'s warehouse, to P., & gave him a delivery order on D. for specific goods. D., on receiving it, placed it on the file, & unknown to P., put P.'s name, as purchaser, opposite the entry of the specified goods in the sale book, in which he had originally entered A.'s name as purchaser. P. afterwards, on several occasions, gave to D. delivery orders for portions of the goods. D. thereupon signed a delivery order to his warehouse keeper, & those portions were delivered to P., he paying the duty. Without a delivery order by D. & payment of duties, the goods would not be delivered from the warehouse. A. afterwards, & before the bills given by him were due, became insolvent; & the bills were dishonoured. D. refused to deliver the remainder of the goods to P., alleging that he was entitled to detain them till A.'s debt to him was paid:—Held: he had no such right; by accepting the delivery order given by A. to P., without giving notice to P. of any contingent claim upon the goods in respect of A., D. must be held to have recognised P. as entitled to the absolute right in the property and the possession of the goods, & could not, as against P., set up any subsequent claim in respect of A.—PEARSON v. 1. Contract to deliver logs at specified time—Assignment of contract by purchaser.]—A., the purchaser of saw logs to be delivered at certain specified times, assigned the contract, & the vendor delivered one year's supply of the logs to the assignee. Afterwards A., becoming insolvent, absconded, & the vendor refused to complete the contract, asserting a right to stop the goods in transitu, or to retain them in consequence of A.'s insolvency. The assignee commenced an action at law in A.'s name against the vendor, in which he recovered judgment; & a bill by the vendor to restrain proceedings at law was dismissed with costs.—WAIT v. SCOTT (1857), 6 Gr. 154.—CAN.

2297. ————.]—(1) By Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 47, it is declared that the unpaid seller's right of lien or retention or stoppage in transitu is not affected by any sale or other disposition of the goods which the buyer may have made, unless the seller has assented thereto:—Held: the mere assent of an unpaid seller to a sale by the buyer of an unascertained portion of the goods is not such an assent as is contemplated by Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 47, as affecting the unpaid seller's right of lien. To affect the lien the assent must be given in such circumstances as to show an intention on the part of the unpaid seller to renounce his right against the goods sold by the buyer.

(2) Defts. sold oil to certain merchants. The merchants sold a portion of this oil to plffs., giving them delivery orders addressed to defts., & directing the latter to deliver to plffs. or their order "ex our contract." Plffs. presented these orders to defts., who either sent word that they were in order, or retained them without comment, & in either case they entered in their books the names of plffs. While the merchants were punctual in their payments to defts. the latter regularly delivered oil on these orders to plffs. or their sub-purchasers. The merchants fell into arrear with their payments, & defts., claiming to exercise their right of lien as unpaid sellers, refused to make any further deliveries against the merchants' delivery orders:—Held: defts. had not assented to the sales by the merchants to plffs. so as to preclude them from exercising their right of lien as unpaid sellers. *MORDAUNT BROTHERS v. No particular sacks were appropriated to M., but the barley remained at the granary subject to his orders. M. sold sixty quarters of it to pltf., who paid him for them & received from him a delivery order addressed to the station master, as was usual in such cases. Pltf. sent this order in a letter to the station master, saying, "Please confirm this transfer." The station master showed the delivery order & pltf.'s letter to deft., who said, "All right, when you get the forwarding note I will put the barley on the line." M. became bkpt., & deft., as unpaid vendor, refused to deliver the barley when the forwarding note was presented to him by the station master acting for pltf.:—Held: deft. was estopped by his statement to the station master from denying that the property in the goods had passed to pltf.; for, by making such statement, he induced pltf. to rest satisfied under the belief that the property had passed, & so to alter his position by abstaining from demanding back the money which he paid to M.—*KNIGHTS v. On the arrival of the oil, L. having previously become bkpt., & W. not having been paid for it, W.'s agents claimed it of the master of the ship; but the latter delivered it to H., who afterwards sold the goods of L. as well as the oil of W. The net proceeds of the goods belonging to L. were sufficient to satisfy the debt due from L. to H. H. paid himself his debt, & deposited the net proceeds of W.'s oil with a third person, to abide the event of the award of an arbitrator to whom all disputes between W. & the assignees of L. were referred. The arbitrator having stated the above facts on his award for the opinion of this ct.:—Held: W., the unpaid vendor of the oil, had, at the time when his agents claimed it, no right to take possession on the insolvency of L., because the property in & the right to the possession was then vested in H., the indorsee of the bill of lading for value; & further, W. had not, by reason of such claim, any legal right to the possession of the goods after H.'s lien was satisfied: but in a ct. of equity, such transfer to H. would be treated as a 2306. ————.]—Defts., merchants resident in Ireland, wrote to A., a merchant resident in London, authorising him "to take for us two cargoes" of Ibraila corn 1,000 to 1,500 quarters at 24s. to 24s. 3d., "payment by our acceptance at two or three months," & in postscript added, "You may go to 24s. 6d., if you find you cannot do the work at 24s. or 24s. 3d." A. made a bargain with R., a merchant resident in London, for a cargo by the "C.," & sent him a note commencing "Sold by order & for account of R. to our principals the cargo" of Bulgarian corn per "C." at 24s. 6d. per quarter, freight & insurance, "Sellers to pay a commission of 2 per cent. Payment in cash" in one week after receipt of documents. On the same day R. in his books debited A. with the price of the cargo, & sent A. the shipping documents with the bill of lading indorsed, & an invoice headed "A. bought of R." On the same day, A. wrote to defts. "to advise having purchased for your account the cargo of Bulgarian corn per 'C.' at 24s. 9d. per quarter C.F. & I., which is 3d. per quarter over your limit for Ibraila, but proportionately cheaper." In this letter were inclosed the shipping documents of the "C.," including the indorsed bill of lading, & an invoice headed "Invoice of a cargo, etc., bought by order & for account & risk" of defts.; & a draft for the price at 24s. 9d., drawn by A. on defts. Defts. returned the draft accepted, stating in the letter, "We note purchase of corn per 'C.' at 24s. 9d.

We would much rather have had Ibraila at 24s. or 24s. 3d." After this, whilst the bill was still current, & before the arrival of the "C.," A. failed. R. stopped the cargo of the "C.," treating A. as the purchaser, & claiming to be an unpaid vendor to him. Defts., on receiving an indemnity from R. against the bill, paid him the price less discount, at the rate of 24s. 6d., being less than the sum for which the bill was accepted, which was at the rate of 24s. 9d. The assignees of A., who had become bkpt., sued defts. on the bill. R. defended the action for them, on the ground that the consideration for the bill had failed. A case was stated for this ct., in which the correspondence, containing as above stated, was set out, & the ct. had power to draw inferences of fact:—Held: the indorsed bill of lading being assigned to defts. for value, R. had no right to stop in transitu; consequently, the payment of R. by defts. was in their own wrong; & the consideration for the bill of exchange had not failed, & pl'tfs. were entitled to judgment.—PENNELL v. ALEXANDER (1854), 3 E. & B. 283; 23 L. J. Q. B. 171; 22 L. T. O. S. 274; 18 Jur. 627; 118 E. R. 1146.

2307. ————.]—A bill of lading for the delivery of goods to order & assigns, is a negotiable instrument, which by indorsement & delivery passes the property in the goods to the indorsee, subject only to the right of the unpaid vendor to stop them in transitu. The indorsee may deprive the vendor of this right by indorsing the bill of lading for valuable consideration, although the goods are not paid for; even if bills have been given which are certain to be dishonoured, provided the indorsee for value has acted bona fide & without notice. A firm, M. & D., in France sold, through their agent in England, to S. & T. a lot of linseed cake, payable by bill at three months' date, & shipped the same. A bill of lading, signed by the master & indorsed by M. & D., was delivered to S. & T. in exchange for their acceptance at three months' date. Afterwards the bill of lading was redelivered to M. & D.'s agent to hold as security against the acceptance. T., a member of the firm of S. & T., subsequently obtained the bill of lading from M. & D.'s agent, by a fraudulent misrepresentation, & indorsed & delivered it to P. & co., for value, without notice of the fraud. Before the goods arrived in England, S. & T. became insolvent:—Held: (1) the firm of S. & T. acquired no new title to the goods by the fraud of T., as it merely invested them with the temporary power of transferring their property in the goods; (2) the right of M. & D., the vendors, to stop in transitu was gone, as the transfer to P. & co. was bona fide, & for a valuable consideration in ignorance of T.'s fraud.

An ownership which was at the time perfect in law, though voidable as to part, viz. the possession, cannot in principle be treated differently from an ownership voidable as to the whole, but is in the interim protected by the interposition of a bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.)—*PEASE v. 2308. ————.]—Where notice to stop in transitu is given to shipowners, they are bound to forward it with reasonable diligence to the master of their ship. A notice so forwarded & received by the master is a valid & sufficient notice to him.

The purchaser of goods, shipped by the vendor, consigned them abroad, & indorsed the bill of lading to a bank as security for an advance. Afterwards & before the arrival of the ship the consignees sold the goods "to arrive" to sub-purchasers, to whom they were delivered. The purchaser having become bkpt., the unpaid vendor gave notice to the master, after the sub-sales, but before delivery & before payment of the freight, to stop the goods in transitu. The consignees remitted the proceeds of the sub-sales to the bank, who after repaying themselves their advance handed to the trustee of bkpt. the balance, which was less than the original purchase-money:—Held: the principles established by Re Westzinthus, No. 2304, ante; & Spalding v. Ruding, No. 2305, ante, were applicable; the right of stoppage in transitu was not at an end when the notice was given; & the vendor was entitled to the balance after satisfaction of the bank's claim.

It is not consistent with my idea of the right of stoppage in transitu that it should apply to anything except to the goods which are in transitu (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—*KEMP v. Bill obtained by fraud of purchaser.—A. has some rum in the West India Docks, which he sells to B. The rum is to be shipped by A. in a vessel chartered by B. Before the rum is delivered on board the vessel, B. gets a bill of lading from the captain; he then sells the rum in question to C., who pays B. for it, upon an indorsement of the bill of lading. A. being unpaid, & suspecting the solvency of B., takes some part of the rum forcibly from out of the vessel, & countermands the delivery of the rest. In trover by C. against A. to recover the rum:—Held: C. gained no good title under the bill of lading; such bill being fraudulent, inasmuch as B. procured it to be signed by the captain before the rum was delivered on board the ship.—OSEY v. GARDNER (1816), Holt, N. P. 405; 171 E. R. 286, N. P.

Before the vessel sailed, & before the bill of lading had been given to pltfs., Messrs. D. became insolvent, having previously indorsed the bill of lading to H. for valuable consideration without the knowledge of pltfs.:—Held: pltfs. had not parted with the control over the goods; & an injunction was granted to restrain the ship from sailing with the goods on board.—NEWTON v. HUBBACK (1854), 2 W. R. 339.

2314. ————.]—Bill indorsed in blank.—B., a Dantzic merchant, sold wheat to W., an Amsterdam merchant, to be paid for by drafts, to be drawn by B. on C., a London merchant, against bills of lading. W. was in fact, though that was not disclosed to B., acting for P., another London merchant. W. wrote to C. opening a credit, on account of P., in favour of B., to be drawn on against bills of lading, P. to be debited with the amount. B. forwarded a bill of lading, indorsed by him in blank, to C. in a letter stating that, "according to instructions from W.," we hand you bill of lading, "& request you to follow" his instructions respecting the document "by whose order, & for whose account," we draw on you, "which drafts we recommend to your kind protection." On the day after C.'s receipt of this letter, the draft was left with C. for acceptance. P., on the same day, being in actual possession of the bill of lading, pledged it with G., who bonâ fide gave value for it. On the evening of the same day, P. was arrested on a criminal charge; & he afterwards became bkpt. C. did not accept the draft; & on the ensuing day, became bkpt. W. also failed. B. stopped the cargo in transitu. G. brought trover against him for the cargo. On a case stating the above facts, with power for the ct. to draw inferences of fact:—Held: B. primâ facie had the right to stop in transitu; & G., though a bonâ fide transferee for value of the endorsed bill of lading from P., was not entitled to the cargo, unless P. had, not merely possession of the bill of lading, but a right to transfer it; inasmuch as bills of lading are not negotiable to the same extent as bills of exchange; but C. was entitled to hand over the bill of lading to P.; the letter from B. not imposing any condition to prevent C. from doing so, & the ct., as an inference of fact, thought that C. had so handed it over to P.—*GURNEY v. 2328. —.]—A bill in equity will lie to enforce a right of stoppage in transitu. Goods were shipped by a vendor on board a ship belonging to the purchaser, but employed as a general trader. Four bills of lading were made, under which the goods were deliverable to the purchaser or assigns; three of the bills were kept by the vendor, & one by the master of the ship:—Held: the delivery on board the purchaser's ship was delivery to the purchaser so as to preclude stoppage in transitu before the delivery of the goods at the port of consignment.

If the goods are actually delivered to an agent of the vendee, employed by him to receive delivery, the vendor is divested of his right of stoppage in transitu. On the other hand, although there is an actual delivery to the vendee's agent, the vendor may annex terms to such delivery, & so prevent it from being absolute & irrevocable. In this case the goods were shipped on board the consignee's own ship & delivered into the possession of his own servant, the master, who signed bills of lading making the goods deliverable to the consignee or assigns. There was therefore a delivery to the agent for his principal & no control over the delivery was in terms reserved to the vendor. . . . Supposing pltf. to have been ignorant of the fact that the vessel . . . belonged to the consignee a question might have arisen whether the delivery could properly be held to be complete (LORD CHELMSFORD, L.C.).—*SCHOTSMAN v. (2) The vendor on his part, although he is not a party to the contract of affreightment, is bound to take the goods or give directions for their delivery on arrival & to discharge the carrier's lien for freight, & if he refuses to perform this obligation he is liable in damages to the carrier for the amount of the freight.

Before the execution of the order, one of the ships, the Royal Sovereign, was transferred to pltf's. Defts., through their Calcutta house, executed the order, & having no notice of the transfer to pltf's, shipped part of the cotton on board the Royal Sovereign, the master, who also had no notice of the transfer, signing bills of lading to defts.' order "freight for the goods free on owners' account." 2337. Duty to redeliver.—(1) A merchant who purchases goods on his own credit for another, to whom he indorses a bill of lading of the goods, stands, for the purpose of stoppage in transitu, in the position of vendor; & the indorsement by him of one bill of lading to the vendee does not, of itself, defeat his right to stop in transitu.

The vendor claiming to stop need not represent to the master that the bill of lading is still in the hands of his vendee.

(2) Upon the vendor asserting his right to stop in transitu, the master, unless aware of some legal defeasance of such right, is bound to deliver the goods to him, & his refusal so to deliver constitutes a "breach of duty" within Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 6, for which the stop will be liable.

2350. Notwithstanding partial delivery.—On Oct. 30, 1857, deft. entered into a written contract to sell & deliver to pltf. 400 tons of iron "to be delivered to any usual South Staffordshire district immediately, terms of payment, bill at four months date down." For this price pltf. gave his acceptance at four months, which deft. indorsed & paid to his bankers, & 100 tons of the iron were delivered by defts., & a written order on a party of whom he had purchased it to deliver 300 tons to pltf. on his order was given by deft. On Nov. 17 deft. suspended payment. On Nov. 19 pltf. indorsed & delivered deft.'s order for the iron to his own bankers as security for advances, & informed deft. he had done so. The order for the delivery of the iron was dishonoured.

On Feb. 10, 1858, pltf. was adjudicated a bkpt., & his acceptance, which became due on Mar. 4, was dishonoured, & deft.'s account debited with it by his bankers. The bank had not proved against pltf.'s estate, but claimed to be creditors of pltf. in respect thereof, & deft. had paid 8s. in the pound to them on pltf.'s acceptance. Pltf.'s estate had paid no dividend. At the time pltf.'s bill became due, the liabilities of deft. to pltf. exceeded those of pltf. to deft., pltf., as a bill broker, having indorsed bills bearing deft.'s name to an amount exceeding the balance due to deft. After the dishonour of pltf.'s acceptance this action was commenced:—Held: in accordance with the decision in Valpy v. Oakeley, No. 2604, post, the insolvency of pltf. gave deft. a right analogous to stoppage in transitu to stop the goods before they came to pltf.'s hands, & a partial delivery did not take the case out of that rule: it was immaterial whether the goods were specific or not; & ex post facto facts might be taken into consideration in reduction of damages; under the circumstances of the case, pltf. was only entitled to nominal damages.—GRIFFITHS v.

2364. Non-payment within customary time—Custom in hop trade.]—A., a hop merchant, on several days in Aug., sold to B., by contract, various parcels of hops. Part of them were weighed & an account of the weights, together with samples, delivered to the vendee. The usual time of payment in the trade was the second

Saturday subsequent to the purchase. B. did not pay for the hops at the usual time, whereupon A. gave notice that unless they were paid for by a certain day they would be resold. The hops were not paid for, & A. resold a part, with the consent of B., who afterwards became bkpt., & then A. sold the residue of the hops without the assent of B. or his assignees. Account sales of the hops so sold were delivered to B., in which he was charged warehouse rent from Aug. 30. The assignees of B. demanded the hops of A., & tendered the warehouse rentcharges, etc.; & A. having refused to deliver them, brought trover. The jury found that deft. had not rescinded the contract of sale:—Held: the assignees were not entitled to maintain trover to recover the value of the hops, inasmuch as in order to maintain that action, the party must have not only a right of property but a right of possession, & although a vendee of goods acquires a right of property by the contract of sale, yet he does not acquire a right of possession to the goods until he pays or tenders the price.—BLOXAM v. After they have acted some time under this agreement B. becomes bkpt. being under acceptances to a great amount. A., being ignorant of the bkpcy., sends a quantity of goods of the same kind together with other bills to B. for the purpose of discharging those acceptances which come into the hands of the assignees. A. afterwards himself discharges the acceptances. Under these circumstances B. is to be considered as the factor or banker of A. & as having only a qualified property in the goods & bills which were so sent for a particular purpose, the general property being in A. Therefore that purpose not being answered, A. may recover back from the assignees of B. the amount of those goods & bills.—HOLLINGWORTH v. TOOKE (1795), 2 Hy. Bl. 501; 126 E. R. 670, Ex. On the day that A. went to prison, he sent a note authorising the delivery of the 2 original horses & the 3 new ones to deft. Any 2 of them were worth £30. In trover by the assignee for the 3 horses, deft. pleaded a sale of the 5 original horses to A., & an agreement that deft. might retake them, or any of them, at any time, if any part of the price was unpaid, & that £22 was still unpaid. No pressure or demand from deft. was shown:—Held: there was no evidence to show that there had been a bona fide transfer of the property in the 3 horses subsequently purchased to satisfy the debt of £22; & if there was any transfer, there was sufficient prima facie evidence that it was voluntary.—*BOLTON v. 2384. Effect of retaking possession—Whether amounting to rescission of contract—Rights of parties to recover sums unpaid—Hire-purchase agreement.]—Pltfs. as “owners” of omnibuses & horses agreed to let them to G., the “hirer,” who paid a large sum of money in advance, the balance to be paid by monthly instalments. The agreement was, that in case of breach or default, the default in making payments as stipulated by the contract of sale. Defts. paid a commission to an agent for making the re-sale. The agent was not paid a salary & if he had not made the re-sale the commission would not have been paid:—Held: the amount paid should be allowed to defts. in owners might seize the chattels, & in that event all money already paid under the agreement was to belong to them. Default was made in payment of an instalment & the owners seized the chattels. In consideration of the chattels being returned to the hirer, deft. paid the amount due, & became guarantor of the remaining instalments due. Upon two more instalments becoming in arrear, pltf. again seized & resumed the possession of the chattels. The owners then sued deft., the guarantor, for the amount of the two unpaid instalments & recovered judgment. On appeal by deft., the guarantor, from a judgment recovered against him in the county ct.:—Held: the hire-purchase agreement was primarily a sale & purchase agreement, & was determined by pltf., the owners, resuming possession of the chattels. By so doing they lost their right to sue G., the hirer, & therefore could not recover the unpaid instalments from deft., the guarantor. They could not resume possession & still recover unpaid instalments from the surety. — HEWISON v. RICKETTS (1894), 63 L. J. Q. B. 711; 71 L. T. 191; 10 R. 558, D. C.

2385. ——— Possession wrongfully retaken.—In an action by the payee against the acceptor of a bill of exchange drawn for the balance of purchase-money of articles bought at a sale, it is no defence that two months after delivery of the goods to the vendee, the vendor forcibly retook possession of them; for the vendee cannot treat that act as a rescinding of the contract, but must bring trespass.—STEPHENS v. WILKINSON (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 320; 9 L. J. O. S. K. B. 231; 109 E. R. 1162.

2386. ——— ——Where the seller of goods, which have not been paid for according to the contract, retakes them from the buyer without his consent, although under circumstances inducing a suspicion of fraud in the buyer, such retaking would be no answer to an action by the seller for the price. Therefore, in an action of trespass by the buyer against the seller, for so taking the goods, pltf. is entitled to recover their full value, & the jury cannot, in estimating the damages, take into consideration the debt due to deft., nor treat it as being diminished pro tanto by the value of the goods retaken.—GILLARD v. BRITTAN (1841), 1 Dowl. N. S. 424; 8 M. & W. 575; 11 L. J. Ex. 133; 151 E. R. 1168.

2387. ——— ——Action to recover the difference between the original price bid at public auction & the sum realised upon a resale, for the hull of a stranded vessel, sold by the master & purchased by deft., upon conditions of sale, which were appended to the memorandum of purchase, & signed after the sale by deft.'s agent on his behalf, which conditions differed materially from those appended to the catalogue of sale, & which were the conditions read out at the time of sale. Deft. paid the deposit upon the terms of the conditions of sale read at the auction, & took possession of the vessel, without having any formal transfer made to him. The vessel was laden with rice, which was soon afterwards, by order of the Board of Health, destroyed as a nuisance. Deft., having declined to complete the purchase, the vendor resumed possession of the vessel, & resold it at a loss. The form of the action was by libel, according to the Roman Dutch law. Deft., in his answer, among other defences, denied that he had purchased under the conditions appended to the memorandum of sale, & prayed the dismissal of the action with costs; & in re-convention, for payment of the amount of the deposit, & damages he had sustained, to the amount of £1,000, for loss of profits & advantages from the vessel, her tackle, & implements. The judgment of the District Ct. was in favour of pltf., the judge of that ct. being of opinion that deft. purchased on the conditions of sale appended to the memorandum of purchase, & that, according to those conditions, pltf. had rightly resumed possession, & resold the vessel. The Supreme Ct., on appeal, reversed that judgment, & ordered judgment to be entered for deft., being of opinion, that pltf. having founded his claim upon an agreement which gave, among other things, a right of resale, with conditions different from those read at the auction, & having in consequence repossessed himself of the vessel & resold her, had thereby deprived himself of the right to recover from deft., & awarded deft. the damages claimed by his answer:—Held: (1) though the merits of the case were with pltf., neither the judgment of the District nor Supreme Ct. could be sustained, as there was no other agreement between the parties than the one founded on the conditions read out in the auction room at the sale; & pltf. having sued upon a different contract, was not entitled to recover, & ought to have been nonsuited; & (2) in the absence of any evidence of damage, deft. was not entitled to any judgment for damages; (3) although the act of pltf. in retaking the hull of the ship & selling her was wrongful, & entitled deft. to bring an action of trover, it did not amount to a rescission of contract. If, before the actual delivery, the vendor resells the property while the purchaser is in default, the resale will not authorise the purchaser to consider the contract rescinded, so as to entitle him to recover back any deposit of the price, or to resist paying any balance which may be still due. The rule applies where there has been a delivery, & the vendor afterwards takes the property out of the possession of a purchaser, & resells it.—PAGE v. COWASJEE EDULJEE (1866), L. R. 1 P. 2388. ——— Hire with option of purchase—Right to recover arrears.—The owner of furniture agreed to let it on hire on the terms of the hirer paying a lump sum in consideration of an option to purchase it at any time during the period of hiring, & further paying a monthly sum by way of rent. The agreement provided that the hirer might at any time terminate the hiring on giving a week's notice & delivering up the goods without prejudice to the owner's right to recover any arrears of rent, & that if the hirer did not duly perform the agreement the owner might retake possession of the furniture. The hirer being in arrear with the rent the owner retook possession under the agreement:—Held: the owner by so retaking possession had not abandoned his right to sue for the arrears of rent.—*BROOKS v. Agreement between parties—Declared not to be legally binding—Effect of.]—By successive arrangements made before 1913 between an American firm & an English co. the American firm were constituted sole agents for the sale in the United States & Canada of tissues for carbonising paper supplied by the English co. The greater part of these tissues was manufactured for this English co. by another English co. By an arrangement made between the American firm & both English cos. in 1913 the English cos. expressed their willingness that the existing arrangements with the American firm, which were then for one year only, should be continued on the same lines for three years & so on for further periods of three years, subject to six months' notice. This document, after setting out the understanding between the parties, including several modifications of the previous arrangements, proceeded as follows: "This arrangement is not entered into, nor is this memorandum written, as a formal or legal agreement, & shall not be subject to legal jurisdiction in the law cts. either of the United States or England, but it is only a definite expression & record of the purpose & intention of the three parties concerned, to which they each honourably pledge themselves, with the fullest confidence, based on past business with each other, that it will be carried through by each of the three parties with mutual loyalty & friendly co-operation. This is hereinafter referred to as the 'honourable pledge' clause." Disputes having arisen between the parties, the English cos. determined this arrangement without notice. Before the relations between the parties were broken off the American firm had given & the first mentioned English co. had accepted certain orders for goods. In an action by the American firm for breach of contract & for non-delivery of goods:—Held: (1) the arrangement of 1913 was not a legally binding contract; (2) at the date of the arrangement of 1913 all previous agreements were determined by mutual consent, but the orders given & accepted constituted enforceable contracts of sale.—*ROSE & FRANK CO. v. A. In General.

2391. Action by assignees of seller—Previous agreement by seller to sell goods to nominee of particular creditors.]—A. & B., creditors of a trader, who had committed a secret act of bkpcy., pressed him for payment, when he offered goods, if a customer could be found. The creditors procured deft., to whom they were indebted, to purchase the goods, who with the assent of the trader credited A. & B. in account. In assumpsit by the assignees of the trader for the price of these goods:—Held: if the appropriation of the money to A. & B. was merely in consequence of the direction of the trader, it was revocable, & pltf. might recover; but if it was part of the contract that the payment should not be revocable, it was then a question whether this was a payment within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82, which, semble, it was not.—BRADBURY v. ANDERTON (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 486; 5 Tyr. 152; 4 L. J. Ex. 21; 149 E. R. 1171.

2392. Joinder of claims—By seller & indorsees of dishonoured bill given by purchaser—Embarrassment.]—A claim in which the vendor of goods & the indorsees of a bill given by the purchaser to the vendor for the price jointly sue the purchaser to recover the price & also upon the dishonoured bill is embarrassing, & may therefore be struck out.—*SMITH v. g. Reduction of price on proof of sheriff's deed.]—Where, on the sale of a chattel by pltf. to deft. for $130, it was agreed that the price should be reduced to $65, if deft. produced a deed from the sheriff showing that he had previously sold the chattel to deft. under an execution, pltf. may recover the price in an action for goods sold & delivered. It is deft.'s duty to produce the sheriff's deed, if he claims to reduce the price to the lesser sum.—WOODS v. MCCANN (1885), 25 N. B. R. 253.—CAN.

Pltf. having sued in debt for goods sold & delivered, & having merely proved the delivery & acceptance of clothes:—Held: (1) he could not recover, but on nunquam indebitatus he was bound to prove a settlement of accounts on which the balance was in his favour. (2) Semble, had there been no stipulation as to the settlement of accounts, it would have been sufficient for pltf. to prove the delivery & acceptance, & would have lain on deft. to prove a percentage due to him to the amount of what was so delivered.—GAREY v. PYKE (1839), 10 Ad. & El. 512; 2 Per. & Dav. 427; 113 E. R. 193.

2421. — Agreement for barter & sale.—Pltf. had sold saddlery to be paid for partly in money & partly in goods. It did not appear whether or not deft. had delivered the goods; & in an action of debt by pltf., on the common count for goods sold & delivered, the jury returned a verdict for the amount of the money only:—Held: under these circumstances it was no objection to the declaration, that pltf. had not declared upon the special contract.—BULL v. PARKER (1842), 2 Dowl. N. S. 345; 12 L. J. Q. B. 93; 7 Jur. 282.

2422. — Agreement for barter—Default of one party.—Where two parties agreed to barter goods for goods, & the balance being in favour of pltf., deft. omitted for nearly three years to send goods to meet it, upon which pltf. brought an action for goods sold & delivered:—Held: the lapse of time did not entitle pltf. to maintain such an action, but his remedy was by action against deft. for not delivering the goods pursuant to the contract between them.—HARRISON v. LUKE (1845), 14 M. & W. 139; 14 L. J. Ex. 248; 5 L. T. O. S. 130; 153 E. R. 423.

By a written contract A. agreed to buy of B. a digging machine, if it fulfilled certain conditions, one of which was that it should be capable of excavating a given quantity of clay in a fixed time on a “properly opened up face” at the C. railway cutting. The machine failed at another cutting to excavate the required quantity, & on its being removed to the “C.” cutting & tried at a face not “properly opened-up” one, & breaking down, after a few days work, A. refused to give it any further trial or to pay the price of the machine:—Held: B. was entitled to a decree against A. for payment of the price of the machine.—MACKAY v. DICK (1881), 6 App. Cas. 251; 29 W. R. 541, II. L.

The wines were not to be paid in money, but were to be bartered against a bill of exchange, & it was expressly stipulated, that the buyer was not to be liable in case the bill should be dishonoured. Therefore he never was indebted to pltf. for the price of the wines, & the law cannot imply a promise on his part to pay for them. . . . 2426. —Sale from bulk—No appropriation.]—A. sold to B., by sample, 24 sacks of flour, part of a lot of 217 sacks belonging to A., which were lying at the warehouse of one M. & he also gave B. a delivery order on M., in pursuance of which M. transferred 24 sacks of flour to B.'s name in his books; & afterwards delivered 12 sacks of the flour to B., which B. paid for. No appropriation of any particular 24 sacks was ever made for B. The flour contained in the 12 sacks delivered was found, on examination, not to correspond with the sample, & B. consequently refused to accept or pay for the remaining 12:—Held: A. could not recover the price of these 12 sacks in an action for goods sold & delivered; qu.: whether in such a case, goods bargained & sold would lie.—*ELLIOTT v. D. By Whom Maintainable.

(a) In General.

2430. Effect of resale by seller to third party.]—Deft. bought goods by auction upon the condition that they were to be cleared away at the buyer's expense in fourteen days & the price paid on or before delivery; if any lots remained uncleared after the time allowed the deposit money should be forfeited the goods resold & the loss on resale made good by the present purchaser. The broker gave a bought note which allowed fourteen days for receiving & delivery:—Held: (1) only the buyer had fourteen days to deliver, but the seller was bound to deliver instantly. (2) Semble: after a resale of goods by a vendor as upon default made by the first purchaser he cannot recover against the first purchaser for goods bargained & sold.—HAGEDORN v. LAING (1815), 6 Taunt. 162; 1 Marsh. 514; 128 E. R. 996.

Annotation:—As to (2) Refd. Lamond v. Davall (1847), 9 Q. B. 1030.

2431. Effect of resale by buyer to third party—Before payment.]—A purchaser at an auction can, before payment, make a complete bargain & sale of the article which he has bought, to a third party, so as to maintain an action for goods bargained & sold.—SCOTT v. ENGLAND (1844), 2 Dow. & L. 520; 14 L. J. Q. B. 43; 4 L. T. O. S. 141; 9 Jur. 87.

2432. Whether by party having no property in goods.]—Goods of deceased husband remained in the wife's, pltf.'s, possession, who was not his extrix., nor ever took out letters of administration. The wife married again, & while living with the man as wife, the man sold the goods to deft., & received the price with the wife's knowledge, who apparently concurred in the sale. After the sale the man was convicted of bigamy, he having a wife living at the time he married pltf. of which pltf. was not aware. Pltf. then sued deft. for the price of the goods:—Held: she was not entitled to recover.

Pltf. does not show that she had any property in the goods (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—WALLER v. DRAKEFORD (1853), 1 E. & B. 749; 22 L. J. Q. B. 274; 17 J. P. 663; 17 Jur. 853; 118 E. R. 616; sub nom. DRAKEFORD v. WALLER, 1 Saund. & M. 114; 21 L. T. O. S. 87.
Annotation:—Refd. Richards v. Johnson (1859), 5 Jur. N. S. 520.

2433. Whether new owner of business—Execution of order for goods directed to late owner—Buyer unaware of change in ownership.]—Defts., who had been in the habit of dealing with B., sent a written order for goods directed to B. Pltf., who on the same day had bought B.'s business, executed the order without giving debts. any notice that the goods were not supplied by B.:—Held: pltf. could not maintain an action for the price of the goods against debts.

The admitted facts are, that debts. sent to a shop an order for goods, supposing they were dealing with Brocklehurst. Pltf., who supplied the goods, did not deceive them. It pltf. were now at liberty to sue debts., they would be deprived of their right of set-off as against Brocklehurst. When a contract is made, in which the personality of the contracting party is or may be of importance, as a contract with a man to write a book, or the like, or where there might be a set-off, no other person can interpose & adopt the contract. As to the difficulty that debts. need not pay anybody, I do not see why they should, unless they have made a contract either express or implied. I

K. took delivery of, & paid for, only one bale, but rejected the others. R. brought a suit for the price of the four bales rejected:—Held: the property in the goods did not pass to deft. by the terms of the contract, nor was the delivery that was taken by him of the one bale a delivery of "part of the goods" within Contract Act, ss. 78 & 92: the suit, therefore, did not lie.—MITCHELL REID & Co. v. BULDEO DOSS KHETTRY (1887), 1 L. R. 15 Calc. 1.—IND.

Gas Coals, equal in quality to a cargo before shipped on trial, as one steam vessel to be sent by deft. could fetch in nine months from S. to L. Breach: that deft. refused to send a steam vessel to fetch divers cargoes of coals. Third plea: that, before any breach by deft., pltf. broke the contract by delivering coal which was no part thereof gas coal equal in quality to the cargo shipped on trial, but was inferior thereto, & wholly unfit for deft.'s purposes, as pltf. well knew. Fourth plea: that, before any breach by deft., pltf. broke the contract by detaining an unreasonable time, & beyond the time permitted by the contract, the vessel sent by deft. to receive the coal:—Held: neither of the pleas was an answer to the declaration.—*JONASSOHN v. indebted; (b) “& for a further plea deft. says,” that the goods were sold under a warranty that when delivered they did not correspond with the warranty & thereupon before suit, disputes arose between pltf. & deft. in respect of the alleged breach of warranty; & after the commencement of the suit & after the last pleading it was agreed that pltf. should accept from deft. £60 in settlement of the debt sought to be recovered in the action; & deft. thereupon paid & pltf. accepted £60 in satisfaction & discharge of their said debt. On demurrer to the second plea:—Held: the plea being pleaded generally, must be taken to be pleaded to the whole causes of action; & as it alleged the payment after action to have been in satisfaction of the debt only, it was bad for leaving unanswered any damages to which pltf. might be entitled.—ASH v. POUPEVILLE (1867), L. R. 3 Q. B. 86; 8 B. & S. 825; 37 L. J. Q. B. 55; 16 W. R. 191.

2464. — Mistake in telegram of acceptance—By telegraph clerk.]—Deft. wrote to pltf. inquiring upon what terms they could supply him with 50 rifles. Pltf. having answered, stating terms, they received a telegram from deft. directing them to forward “the rifles.” They accordingly forwarded 50 rifles. It turned out that the message as directed to be sent by deft. was for “three” rifles, but the telegraph clerk had mistaken the word “three” for “the.” Deft. refused to the machine to deft.'s field where, in the course of a trial which he proceeded to make, a wheel became broken which pltf. promised to replace. Five witnesses swore that the wheel was a material part of the machine, & there was some evidence that it was not:—Held: pltf. could not recover the price, as the machine was never delivered in a satisfactory working condition.—*LAWLOR v. 2465. When action lies—Sale by auctioneer—Failure to take away goods.—In an action on the case, for not taking away goods sold by public auction, & for a loss on the resale, pltf. may recover on the count for goods bargained & sold; & it is no objection to his right to recover on that count, that he has not the goods then to deliver, in case he had a verdict.—*MEERTENS v. a. Failure to recover for whole of goods—Whether new action lies for amount disallowed.—Where in assumption for goods sold & delivered, pltf. has recovered the value of part of the goods contained in his bill of particulars, but not the whole, some of the items being disallowed by the jury, under the judge's direction, as not proved, no new action can be maintained for such items.—*HAMSAY v. The committee did not order the amounts specified in the schedule to the tender form, & the contractors claimed that they were entitled to supply goods to the full amount therein specified:—Held: on the true construction of the contract contained in the document of tender, the Asylums Committee were under no obligation to order any of the goods, but the firm of contractors were bound to deliver the goods specified as & when they obtained orders for them from the committee.—*PERCIVAL, LTD. v. C. engaged to receive the slate, not exceeding 200 tons per month; & the agreement was to be in force till Jan. 1, 1838:—Held: pltfs. might sue the administrator of C. for refusing to receive slate sent, in pursuance of the contract, after C.'s death & before Jan. 1, 1838.—*WENTWORTH v. count for not accepting or paying for machinery made for debts., according to a special contract, & also a count for goods bargained & sold. Defts. were members of a provisional committee of a co., which had entered into a written contract for the machinery before M., one of defts., joined the committee. Under this contract pltf. was to have monthly payments on account of the work while in progress, not exceeding the price of the work done & materials supplied for the time being. After M. joined the committee, several payments were made on account of the work, & alterations suggested & adopted, with his sanction; & he also took an active part in superintending the work & making experiments with it:—Held: there was no ground for implying a new contract after M. joined the committee; & his acquiring an interest in the subject-matter of the contract previously entered into would not make him liable on such contract; he was not liable on the count for goods bargained & sold, because, if the property in successive portions of the machinery, while the work was in progress, did pass from time to time by the payments on account, it passed according to the terms of the special contract, to which he was not a party.—*BEALE v. Joinder of third party—Sub-purchaser—Alleged breach of warranty by vendor.—To a claim by pltfs. for not accepting 183 chests of shellac according to contract, defts., among other defences, raised the defence that the shellac was not of the quality contracted for. Defts. had contracted with Messrs. R. & Messrs. T. respectively for the sale to them of 50 chests on the same terms as their contract with pltfs., & defts. cited Messrs. R. & T. under R. S. 2484. Plaintiff suing under different contract.—PAGE v. COWASJEE EDULJEE, No. 2387, ante.

2485. Arbitration clause—Award made—Plaintiff not heard by arbitrators.—Deft. contracted to buy of pltf. certain cotton to arrive in Liverpool, per ship or ships, from Bombay, Mar. or Apr. shipment, on the terms of the rules of the Cotton Brokers' Assocn. of Liverpool, by which it was stipulated that the name of the ship should be given to the buyer within two calendar months "after the date of shipment named in the contract," & that in default thereof the buyer might cancel the contract; & also that "in case of any dispute arising out of any contract" the matter should be referred to two members of the Cotton Brokers' Assocn. for settlement. Pltf. gave the name of the ship, on which the cotton was shipped within two calendar months after Apr., but not within two calendar months after Mar., when the cotton was actually shipped. Deft. therefore disputed his liability to accept the cotton, & caused arbitrators to be appointed in the mode provided for by the rules, who, upon having the documents, but neither of the parties, before them, & without giving pltf. any opportunity of being heard, made an award in favour of deft., on the ground that the shipment was not declared in time. Pltf., however, sued deft. for not accepting the cotton, & deft. pleaded the award in bar to such action:—Held: (1) the dispute, though involving the question as to the construction of the contract, was one which by the rules the parties agreed to refer; (2) the fact of pltf. not having had any opportunity of being heard before the arbitrators was no answer to the plea of the award, but was only a ground for applying to the equitable jurisdiction of the ct., to have the award set aside.—THORBURN v. BARNES (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 384; 36 L. J. C. P. 184; 16 L. T. 10; 15 W. R. 623; 2 Mar. L. C. 459.

2486. — Conflict of laws.—A vendor resident in Scotland, & a purchaser resident in England, agreed for the sale & purchase of goods to be delivered in Scotland. The agreement contained a clause that any dispute should be "settled by arbn. by two members of the London Corn Exchange, or their umpire, in the usual way." The vendor brought an action against the purchaser in the Scottish ct. for non-acceptance of the goods according to contract. The purchaser pleaded the arbn. clause. The Scottish ct. held that the arbn. clause, not being good according to Scottish law, afforded no defence to the action:—Held: the intention of the parties gathered from the whole contract, was that it should be governed by English law, & the arbn. clause, being good in English law, & not fundamentally opposed in principle to the law of Scotland, was a good defence to the action.—HAMLIN & CO. v. TALISKER DISTILLERY, [1894] A. C. 202; 71 L. T. 1; 58 J. P. 540; 10 T. L. R. 479; 6 R. 188, H. L.

2487. Failure of plaintiff to tender documents—No agreement or trade usage.—By a contract in writing, dated Sept. 17, 1915, pltf's. agreed to sell & defts. to buy "about 12,000 dressed sheepskins for prompt shipment & about 33,000 ditto for shipment as quickly as possible . . . c.i.f. London or Liverpool. Payment: Net cash against documents on arrival of the steamer." The goods were shipped by three different steamers. The first two shipments were taken up & paid for, but defts. refused to take up the documents for the third shipment on the ground that they had never been tendered to them, & that they were not informed of the vessel's arrival until a date outside the contract date for delivery:—Held: in these circumstances defts. had been guilty of breach of contract.

It is said that pltf's. should have tendered the documents to defts. at deft.'s office. In the absence of any express stipulation to this effect or some trade usage or course of business between the parties importing such a stipulation, I doubt whether the obligation on the vendor exists (ATKIN, J.).—*STEIN, FORBES & CO. v. Linseed oil was one of the articles specified in the schedule.

During the operation of the Order pltf. sold to deft. a quantity of linseed oil. Pltf. had a licence under the Order, & before entering into the contract he asked deft. whether he had a licence under the Order, & deft. told pltf. that he had. Deft. in fact had not a licence. The licence to pltf. provided that sales for delivery within the United Kingdom were only to be made to persons holding a licence. Pltf., being induced by the misrepresentation of deft. & in the honest belief that he had a licence, entered into the contract of sale. Deft. subsequently refused to accept delivery of the linseed oil on the ground that the contract was illegal, as he, deft., had no licence under the Order. In a claim for damages for non-acceptance of the oil:—Held: as deft. had no licence, the contract of sale was prohibited by the Order & was therefore illegal, & as the prohibition was in the public interest no claim could be made under the contract.—Re MAHMOUD & ISPAHANI, [1921] 2 K. Impossibility of performance—Government restrictions on export.—By contracts dated Nov. 1 & 2, 1917, a firm of jute manufacturers contracted to sell to a firm of merchants certain quantities of jute goods, one half to be delivered in Jan. & the remainder in Feb. 1918, delivery to be f.o.b. Dundee. On the passing of the Jute (Export) Order, dated Nov. 27, 1917, the sellers wrote the buyers asking for a guarantee that the goods would not be exported from the United Kingdom, or if the goods were for export for the necessary permit from the War Office. Application was made for a permit, but it was refused. The buyers then cancelled the contracts. In an action for damages at the instance of the sellers for breach of contract:—Held: the Jute (Export) repudiated the contract on one ground, viz. that the goods were not tendered within the time agreed, could not plead non-liability on another ground, viz., that the goods were not of the agreed quality.—*NANNIER (alias RAMIER) v. justified his repudiation if it had been based upon them.

(2) In a contract for delivery by instalments the ct. must see whether each party was ready & willing to perform his part of the contract at the time for delivery of each instalment (COLLINS, M.R.).

A contract provided for the sale of rosewood for shipment in 1903, to be delivered at Hull in instalments during that year, cash payable against bill of lading. While the first consignment of rosewood was on the sea, the buyers repudiated the contract & refused to accept any rosewood under it upon the ground that the seller had committed a breach of a collateral oral agreement not to supply rosewood to any other person in the trade during 1903. When the bill of lading for the first consignment was tendered to the buyers they refused to accept it or to pay for the rosewood comprised in it; the rosewood was therefore sold by the seller as against the buyers, & the seller claimed as damages from the buyers for their refusal to accept the consignment the difference between the contract price & the price at which it was sold as against the contract. The second consignment, consisting of the balance of the rosewood, was likewise refused by the buyers on the same ground & sold as against them. It subsequently came to the knowledge of the buyers that a portion of the rosewood in the first consignment did not answer the description of the quality of rosewood in the contract, & it was admitted that there was some inferiority in a portion that would be compensated for by an allowance of about 6 per cent. on the value of the consignment. The second consignment was in accordance with the contract. The seller having sued the buyers for damages for not accepting the rosewood, the judge at the trial found as a fact that the collateral oral agreement relied upon by the buyers had never been entered into:—Held: (3) the original repudiation of the contract by the buyers was wrongful, & by refusing to take delivery of the consignments on arrival on the ground that they had already repudiated the entire contract the buyers had waived the performance of conditions precedent on the part of the sellers; (4) the sellers were entitled to damages based upon the difference between the contract price of the rosewood & the price at which it had been sold by them as against the contract.—*BRAITHWAITE v. The vendor then put it up at auction as "in dispute," & without a warranty, when it was sold for about £40 less than the contract price. In an action for the difference between the price realised at the auction & the contract price:—Held: (1) this was not the proper form of action; (2) the action must be for damages; (3) the conditions of the auction sale were not a test of the value of the horse, the auction being of a horse "in dispute," & without warranty, & quite different from the original contract conditions; (4) plff. was not entitled to more than nominal

2500. — Difference between contract price & cost of production—Sale of coal.—Pltf. co., colliery owners, contracted to supply, & deft. co., dealers in coal, in London, contracted to purchase, 3,250 tons of old Silkstone coal, at 19s. a ton, to be delivered to & taken by defts. at the pit's mouth in equal monthly quantities, extending over a period of nine months. During several of the months defts. failed to send waggons forward to accept the full quantity they were bound to accept, & which plffs. were ready & willing to supply in such months, & defts. therein made default. The coal of plffs.' colliery was a perishable coal, deteriorating rapidly in quality if stacked or stored above ground, & it was not the ordinary course of business, nor a reasonable course for the colliery owner, to raise such coal, except to supply contracts previously entered into, & it was raised as far as possible from day to day to supply the waggons arriving to receive it, into which it was delivered direct from the pit's mouth. Such coal already raised could be, & frequently was, sold in small quantities in the London Coal Exchange by colliery owners, when a truck of coal had been refused by a customer, or had been sent astray, or when from any other reason coals already raised were left on their hands, but not otherwise.

An action was brought by plffs. to recover damages from defts. for breach of contract in failing to take the full monthly quantity of coals:—Held: the amount of damages plffs. were entitled to recover was the difference between the cost of raising the coal, added to the value of the coal itself remaining unraised in the mine, whatever those two heads of calculation might amount to, & the contract price of 19s. a ton, & such amount could be accurately calculated & ascertained by persons familiar with the subject, without actually raising & selling the coal which, being of a perishable nature, was not readily or profitably to be so disposed of, & plffs. were not bound to have so raised & sold it.—*SILKSTONE & DODSWORTH COAL & IRON CO., LTD. v. doing what he ought to do, as a reasonable man, & he on the other hand not being bound to do otherwise than in the ordinary course of his business.

Pltfs. contracted to sell to deft. 15,000 tons of cannel coal in weekly quantities, the deliveries not to commence before June, at 26s. per ton, payable by monthly instalments, deft. not to sell in certain specified places.

Deft. repudiated the contract in July, but pltfs. attempted to come to terms with him, & did not treat it as broken until Sept., when, there being no regular market for cannel coal, they tried without advertising to find another purchaser, according to the ordinary course of their own business. After several failures, the coal was sold at 19s. per ton:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to the full amount of the difference between the contract price & that which they obtained.—*DUNKIRK COLLIERY Co. v. 2502. ———.]—The Vic co. were in voluntary liquidation. Before the winding up they had ordered certain machines to be made by a firm of engineers, which, owing to the winding up, they were unable to accept. The creditors put in a claim for damages for £1,167 13s. 6d., being the amount of the profits which they estimated they would have made, if the contract had been carried out. The liquidators rejected this claim, & the judge referred the matter to the district registrar for an inquiry for what sum, if any, appcts. should be allowed to prove in the winding up in respect of the items of machinery included in their claim, ordered by the co. but not delivered. The registrar divided the machines as to which claims were made into two classes: (a) Machines which had been completed by the creditors before the date of the winding up, retained by the creditors for a time, & then somewhat altered & sold to other customers at a price less than the contract price. On these he allowed the difference between the price realised & the contract price plus the estimated cost of the alterations, a sum amounting to £28 instead of £162 19s. claimed. (b) Machines which would have been wholly or partially manufactured by the creditors, on which they had done no work, but for some of which they had purchased subordinate parts ready made, which they had afterwards used in fulfilling other orders. On these the registrar thought that the creditors were entitled to have the loss of profits taken into account; but he held that the actual loss directly or naturally resulting from the breach of contract did not amount to anything approaching the whole of such prospective profit, & he assessed the damages at £280 instead of the £1,002 1s. 3d. claimed. There was no available market for the goods & no evidence that claimants could not have carried out the contract as well as all their other contracts:—Held: claimants were entitled to the whole of the profits which they claimed.—Re VIC MILL, LTD., [1913] 1 Ch. 465; 82 L. C. having subsequently sued A. for the price, A. offered to give evidence in mitigation of damages that the wheel was worthless & of no value to him:—Held: such evidence was inadmissible, for that the facts offered in mitigation might have, & for all that appeared had, formed a ground for the recovery of damages in the action on the warranty, & therefore could not be set up in this action.—*CHURCH v. 2509. ———.]—Unless repudiation treated as breach.—By a contract, made on May 24, 1895, defts. purchased from plffs. a cargo of maize, to be shipped from a port in the Argentine Republic about July 15. The market was then falling, & on May 28, the buyers repudiated the contract, & on July 24 plffs. brought this action for damages for non-acceptance of the goods. The prices at that time were falling continuously, & there was no prospect of their recovery. If plffs. had resold about July 24, when they brought this action the loss on the the contract price of the cargo would have been £1,557, but they did not resell until the vessel & cargo arrived at her port of call on Sept. 5, when the loss was £3,807:—

Held: the measure of damages was the sum of £1,557, being the difference between the contract price & the market price on July 24, when plffs. accepted defts.' repudiation by bringing this action, as, having regard to the falling prices, plffs. ought to have resold at that time, & ought not to have waited until the arrival of the cargo on Sept. 5.—*ROTH & Co. v. On Oct. 20 pltf. brought his action for non-acceptance of the goods in accordance with the terms of the written contract. It was contended by defts. that by reason of the arrangement to postpone delivery & acceptance made before any breach of the contract, pltf. could not recover upon the original contract, there never having been readiness & willingness to deliver or any tender of delivery on pltf.'s part under such contract; & that pltf. could not rely on any new or substituted contract to accept at a later date, such contract being verbal only:—Held: the true effect of what took place between the parties being that pltf. voluntarily withheld delivery at the request of defts., no new contract being substituted for the original written contract, pltf. was entitled to maintain his action; & the damages must be estimated according to the market price of iron at a reasonable time after the last request of defts. to withhold delivery.—HICKMAN v. Deft., by his defence, pleaded, first, that pltf. failed to deliver the goods in good condition, & therefore, did not fulfil his contract; & secondly, that if he did deliver them in good condition, he committed a breach of an implied term of his contract so to pack the goods that they should be reasonably fit to stand the ordinary risks of transit by rail. He also raised the same point against pltf. by way of counterclaim, & claimed damages. To that counterclaim he joined the G. W. Ry. co. as defts., & alleged against them that the goods having been delivered to them at P. Station in good condition, they, in breach of their duty as carriers, so treated them that when they arrived at their destination they were in bad condition, & claimed damages against them. He further pleaded that if the goods at the date of their delivery to the railway co. were in a good condition he claimed to recover damages against them, & alternatively, in the event of its being found that the goods at the date of their delivery to the railway co. were in bad condition, he claimed to recover damages against pltf. On an application by pltf., the judge at chambers refused to order that the counterclaim, in so far as it joined the railway co. as defts. to the counterclaim, should be struck out:—Held: the claims were not strictly alternative, so as to be mutually exclusive; but the relief claimed against the railway co. was sufficiently "connected with the

Liability of seller for faulty construction of goods—Measure of damages—Costs of action by sub-vendee against purchaser.]—Pltfs. having undertaken the repairs of a steamship for the owners, employed defts., an engineering co., to construct a new crank shaft. Defts. agreed to do so, upon the terms of their not being responsible for failure of material or workmanship beyond the replacement of faulty work supplied by them. In an action by pltfs. against the shipowners to recover the price of the shaft which had been supplied by defts., the shipowners counterclaimed for damages for breach of contract in consequence of the shaft having broken down on a voyage. Pltfs., after communicating with defts., who thereupon repudiated all responsibility, defended the counterclaim. The shipowners succeeded on their counterclaim, the shaft being found to have been of faulty workmanship. In an action by pltfs. to recover from defts. the costs of the shipowners' counterclaim, as damages resulting from defts.' breach of contract:—Held: the terms on which defts. had supplied the shaft did not relieve them from paying these costs; & pltfs. were entitled to recover the costs of the counterclaim except so far as they were increased by any issue other than the faultiness of the material or workmanship of the shaft.—*PRINCE OF WALES DRY DOCK CO. 2519. Failure of seller to perform condition—To provide adequate machinery—Damages.]—Pltf. contracted with a mining co. to remove waste rock then lying in the waste dump at the mine within a period of two years, provided it did not exceed 50,000 tons, the co. to provide a crusher, & the rock so crushed to be put on rails & made available for sale. The crusher provided was capable only of crushing 3 tons per hour, & as the co. never did anything to put it in a condition to do more, the work, owing to the incapacity of the crusher, had to be stopped. Pltf. claimed damages:—Held: as it appeared from the written contract that both parties had agreed that something should be done, which could not effectually be done unless both concurred in doing it, although there were not express words to that effect in the contract, it must be construed as meaning that each party had agreed to do all that was necessary to be done on his part for the carrying out of the work. Defts. had failed to provide an adequate crusher, & had therefore failed to carry out their part of the contract.—KLEINERT v. AROSIO GOLD MINING CO., LTD. (1913), 58 Sol. Jo. 45, P. C.

2520. Rule of Produce Brokers' Association—Whether bar to exercise of common law rights.]—

By two contracts made in Nov. 1918, the sellers, W. H. & co., sold to the buyer 3½ tons of Ceylonese essence of citronella, c.i.f. Marseilles. The contracts contained (inter alia) provisions as follows: "Delivery: shipment from Ceylon beginning of Dec. Terms: terms of the General Produce Brokers' Assocn., London." One of the terms of the Assocn. Rule 9 (f.) provided that "whenever . . . the seller had failed to fulfil the terms of the contract the buyer shall close by invoicing back the produce to the seller at once, at a price & weight to be fixed by arbn., which price shall be not less than 2 per cent. & not more than 10 per cent. over the estimated market value of the shipment contracted for on the day on which the default occurs, the difference to be due in cash in seven days."

The sellers committed a breach of both contracts by failing to ship the citronella at the time agreed. Negotiations took place between the parties; the buyer informed the sellers that he had already resold the citronella to buyers in France, but that he would be willing to extend the time for shipment if his buyers in France would consent to such extension. The French buyers agreed that, subject to their being allowed an abatement of the price, they would accept delivery if shipment was made not later than Jan. 23, 1919, & on this being communicated to them the sellers undertook to ship by that date.

The sellers again made default. The parties went to arbn., the buyer claiming as special damages what he would have made if he had been able to carry out his contract of resale to his buyers in France, & the sellers contending that no special damage was recoverable, & that in any event a sum of money was payable to them by the buyer in consequence of the operation of Rule 9 (f.). The umpire stated a case under Arbitration Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 7, & submitted three questions for the ct.'s opinion:—Held: (1) in the circumstances the buyer was entitled to recover the special damage claimed; (2) Rule 9 (f.) was not an exclusive remedy & did not prevent the buyer from exercising his ordinary legal rights at common law; (3) in a case in which a buyer was entitled to recover special damage Rule 9 (f.) did not operate to give a defaulting seller the right to recover a sum from the buyer which could be set off against the sum payable as special damage.—*Re FL. 2521. Time for making claim.]—By a contract between sellers in London & buyers in New York a quantity of sodium cyanide was sold f.o.b. Havre, payment to be by net cash against documents in London by confirmed irrevocable credit. The contract provided by condition 4: "After the delivery order or any other document of title has been issued to the buyers, all risks are for account of buyers," & by condition 5, "Any claims in relation to weight, quality, or otherwise must be made in writing & delivered to the sellers within ten days of the date of delivery to the purchaser of the delivery order or other documents of title. Claims after such period will not be recognised." The goods were defective & the buyers made a claim more than ten days after the delivery of the documents to the buyers' bankers in London against cash, & they contended that, as both parties knew that condition 5 could not be complied with, it had no effect:—Held: condition 5 did not refer to the original issue of the documents of title under condition 4 to the buyers' London bankers, who for that purpose would be their agents, but to the handing over of the documents for the purpose of their coming into the possession of the person who was to take delivery as the ultimate purchaser, & therefore, as a proper effect could be given to condition 5, & as the buyers' claim was out of time under condition 5, even when so construed, the buyers' claim failed.—*TAYLOR (G. 2522. — Two weeks from delivery of goods—C.i.f. contract—Delivery of documents not sufficient to bar claim.]—A contract for the sale of goods on c.i.f. terms contained a clause which provided that "no claims shall be valid unless made in writing within two weeks after the goods are delivered." The buyers made a claim under the contract. At the time when the claim was made more than two weeks had elapsed since delivery of the documents, but two weeks had not elapsed since delivery of the goods to the buyers from the ship. The sellers contended that the claim was out of time:—Held: the delivery contemplated by the contract was delivery of the goods from the ship to the buyers, & the claim was therefore within the time allowed.—*SCRIVEN BROTHERS v. 2523. When action lies—Agreement for barter—Sufficiency of pleading.]—If A. & B agree to exchange horses, & B. give a sum of money to A. to bind the bargain, A. may maintain an action against B. for not delivering his horse, without alleging any delivery of, or offer to deliver, his own to B., for the payment of earnest money vests

the property of pltf.'s horse in B. But in such an action A. must allege a demand on B. for his horse; stating that B. did not deliver, though often requested so to do, is not sufficient; & such a defective allegation may be taken advantage of on a general demurrer.—*BACH v. The purchase was made in their own names, but the vendor was told that there was an unnamed principal. Pltfs. afterwards, under a general authority from H., contracted to sell the same goods, which deft. had not yet delivered. H., on hearing of the latter contract, told pltfs. that he would have nothing to do with the goods, either as buyer or seller; & in this they acquiesced. Deft. then refused to deliver the goods, & pltfs. sued him for damages sustained by them in consequence:—Held: the renunciation of the contract by H., & pltf.'s acquiescence in it, formed no objection to the right of pltfs. to recover.—*SHORT v. 2527. — Sale of specific goods.]—Where in an action against a party for not delivering certain sacks of flour to arrive by a ship at a certain port, it appeared, from the terms of the contract, that a specific thing was contracted for:—Held: it was not enough for pltf. to show that the ship arrived with an equal quantity of flour on board to that contracted to be delivered, but he must show that the specific flour contracted for arrived in that ship.—HINCKER v. JAMES (1846), 7 L. T. O. S. 65.

2528. — Goods warehoused—Delivery order to vendee—Refusal of warehouseman to deliver.]—Where goods stored in a warehouse are sold, & a warrant for them delivered to the vendee upon payment of the purchase-money, & the warehouseman refuses to deliver the goods to the purchaser upon presentation of the warrant, an action lies against the vendor for the non-delivery of the goods.—THÖL v. HINTON (1855), 4 W. R. 26.

2529. How far contract to be set out.]—(1) It is not necessary, in an action for non-delivery of goods sold, to set out more of the contract than relates to the breach.

(2) Demand of delivery of the goods sold is sufficient proof of an averment that pltf. was ready & willing to perform his part of the contract, although that demand was made by his servant when he was not himself present to have done so, if required on the spot. Special assumpsit is the proper form of such an action.—SQUIER v. HUNT (1816), 3 Price, 68; 146 E. R. 193.

2531. Agreements to grant lease with proviso for supply of goods—Whether grant of lease condition precedent to supply.]—By an agreement under seal between defts. & pltf., after reciting that pltf. had erected a factory & works on land belonging to defts. for the purpose of carrying on the manufacture of patent fuel, & that defts. had made advances to pltf. towards their erection, & had agreed to grant a lease of the land & buildings to pltf., “& to enter into certain other arrangements for the supply of coal for the manufactory & otherwise, on the terms & conditions thereafter mentioned,” it was agreed, amongst other things, that defts. should grant a lease of the land & buildings to pltf. for the term of twelve years from Mar. 25 then last, at a peppercorn rent, & that immediately on such lease being so granted, pltf. should mortgage the same to defts. as a security for their advances; that all the coal consumed & used by pltf. for the purpose of his manufacture during the term of twelve years should be bought of defts., provided defts. could & should supply him with the quantity that should from time to time be required by him, or to such extent as the defts. could supply, & defts. should charge for the same a certain price, & no more; & pltf. should use & consume no other coal at the factory during the term than that which was bought & purchased of defts., excepting in the event of pltf. requiring more coal than defts. could & should supply him with: that defts. should not be compelled to supply more than 500 tons per week; & that in case defts. should, from some substantial cause, be unable to supply small coal to the extent agreed upon, defts. should give to pltf. six months’ notice of the same, & pltf. should then be at liberty to obtain his supply from any other source: that in the lease to be granted there should be covenants by pltf. not to use the premises for any other purpose than for the manufacture of patent fuel; & that the agreement, to be determinable as aforesaid, should continue for the term of twelve years from the date thereof. In an action for breach of the implied covenant by defts. in the agreement to supply 500 tons of coal to pltf. weekly:—Held: (1) the granting of the lease by defts. was not a condition precedent to pltf.’s right to the coal; (2) the inability of defts. to supply the coal did not exonerate them from liability on the covenant, unless the six months’ notice had been given according to the agreement; (3) the covenant of defts. was limited to the supply of coal for the purpose of the patent fuel manufacture.—*WOOD v. 2534. — Statement of purpose for which goods required—Necessity for.]—(1) By an agreement under seal, reciting, amongst other things, that pltf. had erected a factory, etc., for the purpose of carrying on the manufacture of patent fuel, etc., & that defts. had agreed to grant a lease of the land, etc., to pltf., & to enter into certain other arrangements “for the supply of coal for the manufactory,” & otherwise, on the terms therein mentioned, it was agreed, amongst other things, that all the coals consumed by pltf. for the purpose of his manufacture during a certain term, should be purchased of defts., & that defts. should not be compelled to supply more than 500 tons weekly. In an action against defts. for a breach of the implied contract to deliver 500 tons of coal weekly, the declaration averred that pltf. was at all times, etc., ready to receive that quantity, of which defts. had notice, & required defts. to deliver the same, & that “he had done all things on his part, & all things had happened, to entitle him to have the said 500 tons of coals in each week delivered to him,” etc.:—Held: the declaration was sufficient, although it contained no specific averment that the supply was required by pltf. for the purpose of the manufacture of patent fuel.

(2) Defts. by their third plea alleged, that, before the accruing of the causes of action, & from thence hitherto, pltf. had wholly discontinued & abandoned the manufacture of the said fuel upon the terms of the agreement:—Held: a good plea, upon the assumption that it meant a permanent abandonment of the works, & not, as pltf. in his replication averred, a mere temporary suspension thereof in consequence of defts.’ failure to deliver the stipulated quantity of coal.—WOOD v. COPPER MINERS’ CO. (1856), 17 C. B. 561; 25 L. J. C. P. 166; 139 E. R. 1195.

2535. Joinder of third party—Embarrassment of plaintiff.]—In an action against defts. for non-delivery of certain iron rods of the quality contracted for, defts. proceeded to bring in H., a foreigner, as a third party, under R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 18, on the ground that they had contracted with him in respect of the iron rods so supplied & upon the same terms. It was not denied that the clause as to quality was the same as between pltf. & defts. on the one hand & defts. & H. on the other. Pltf., however, relied upon certain admissions made by defts. as regards the subject-matter of the contract, which showed that the action was, as between pltf. & defts., an undefended one. It further appeared that the case had already been set down for trial, & would be reached in a day or two. Upon application made by defts., under R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 21, to give directions as to the mode of trial:—Held: the ct. had power to consider whether the case was one in which a third party ought to be allowed to come in, & ought to refuse the application where the effect of such third party being introduced would be to embarrass & delay pltf.—*SCHNEIDER v. Deft. wrote to pltfs. to say, that he proposed to supply the workhouse with meat, according to advertisement, for the ensuing three months, at 6d. per pound. This tender was accepted by pltfs., & deft. was informed, that he was appointed butcher; but, immediately afterwards, he wrote to pltf. to say, that he declined the appointment:—Held: as a written contract was to be executed, the acceptance of the tender did not form a binding contract, so as to render deft. liable for refusing to supply the workhouse with meat, in accordance with his tender.—KINGSTON-UPON-HULL GOVERNOR, ETC. Two days later defts. sent back the contract signed by them, agreeing to deliver the quantity by the day fixed, but adding the words "Weather & other circumstances permitting." Four days later pltfs. wrote to defts. acknowledging the receipt of the signed contract, but pointing out that they, pltfs., had erased the words "other circumstances." On the same day defts. wrote to pltfs. that they had put the order in hand. Four days later pltfs. affixed their common seal to the contract. Defts. did not execute any part of their contract by the day specified, alleging that want of ships & stress of weather had prevented them from so doing. After a month's delay pltfs. were obliged to purchase granite spalls at a higher price than that tendered by defts., & brought their action for damages for breach of the agreement:—Held: as defts. had assented to the alteration in the contract made by pltfs., there was mutuality between the parties at the time the seal was affixed, & pltfs. were entitled to succeed in their action.—DARTFORD UNION GUARDIANS v. aforesaid, in full satisfaction & discharge of the causes of action in the declaration mentioned, so far as they related to 143 loads of timber in the contract mentioned; & that deft., within a reasonable time, tendered plaintiffs the residue of the timber to complete the contract:—Held: the plea was neither good as a plea of accord & satisfaction, for want of an averment of satisfaction; nor as a plea of performance, there being no averment, express or implied, that the substituted agreement was accepted in satisfaction.—*GABRIEL v. 2545. Extension of time of delivery.—Declaration, in assumptit, stated that pltf. agreed to buy, & deft. to sell, a cargo to be delivered "on the 20th to the 22nd instant," to be paid for by acceptance three months from delivery; & that afterwards, before the 22nd, pltf., at request of deft. gave time for the delivery to the 24th; breach, that deft., though requested, on 24th, to deliver, had not, on 24th or any other time, delivered; special damage by rise of price between the agreement & breach. Plea, that the giving of time was part of a contract for the sale of goods at the price of above £10; & that there was no part acceptance, or earnest, or note or memorandum in writing. Replication, that the giving of time was not part of the contract, etc. It appeared that there was a written contract, as stated in the declaration, for the delivery "on the 20th to the 22nd"; but, the 22nd falling on Sunday, pltf., at deft.'s request, verbally agreed to enlarge the time to the 23rd or 24th. The price fluctuated between the time of the agreement & the 24th, being higher on the last day. It was understood that the enlargement of time would postpone the delivery of the three months' acceptance:—Held: on these facts deft. under Stat. Frauds, s. 17, was entitled to the verdict, the enlargement of time having materially varied the contract, substituting for it a new contract on a similar consideration, & not being merely a dispensation from performance on a particular day.—*STEAR v. 2547. ———. — In Sept. 1913, defts. by their representative contracted to sell to pltf. 50 dozen red Welsh roller skins at 27s. per dozen "delivery as required." Between the middle of Nov. 1913, & the end of Sept. 1914, defts. delivered 20 dozen skins at the request of pltf. in 4 lots of 5 dozen each, but no further deliveries took place nor were any requested by pltf., their manager having forgotten the existence of the contract. In June, 1915, defts.' representative left their employ, & in July, 1915, pltf. gave him a personal order for & accepted delivery of 50 dozen skins of the same kind & at the same price as that specified in the contract with defts. Between June, 1915, & Apr. 1916, another representative of defts. called upon pltf. for orders, but was told there was nothing for him. In Nov. 1915, defts. by letter offered pltf. 20 to 30 dozen skins similar to those previously supplied to them & at the same price, but pltf. replied that they had bought some time ago their requirements for the next year. In July, 1917, pltf. requested the delivery of the remaining 30 dozen skins under the contract, but defts. refused to deliver them, alleging that the contract was no longer in existence. Pltf. having brought an action in the county ct. to recover damages for defts.' breach of contract in refusing to deliver the remaining skins, the county ct. judge held that pltf. had abandoned the contract, but whether he was right or wrong on that point that they behaved in such a way that defts. reasonably believed that pltf. considered the contract was at an end, & gave judgment for defts.:—Held: (1) an inordinate delay on the part of both sides having taken place it was not necessary, in order to put an end to the contract, for defts. to give notice to pltf. that if they did not request further deliveries defts. would cancel the contract, & there was evidence upon which the county ct. judge could find that the contract had been abandoned; (2) upon the facts the county ct. judge was justified in finding that pltf. were estopped from denying that the contract had come to an end.—*PEARL MILL CO. v. Part of goods wrongfully taken by purchaser—Trespass.—To a declaration on a contract for the sale of growing trees, alleging for breach, that, although deft. had permitted pltf. to fell & carry away certain of the trees, he refused to permit him to fell & carry away the residue, deft. pleaded, that, after the promise & before breach pltf. fraudulently felled & carried away trees which were not sold to him, exceeding in number & value the residue which trees so fraudulently felled & carried away were taken by pltf. in fraudulent substitution of the trees purchased by him as in the declaration mentioned; that pltf. kept the trees so fraudulently felled & carried away by him; & that therefore deft. refused to permit him to fell & carry away the residue of the trees contracted for:—Held: the plea was bad, inasmuch as it showed not a rescission or abandonment of the contract by pltf., but a mere act of trespass, or wrongful act, for which deft. might have a remedy.—LEWIS v. CLIFTON (1854), 14 C. B. 245; 2 C. L. R. 1350; 23 L. J. C. P. 68; 22 L. T. O. S. 259; 18 Jur. 291; 2 W. R. 230; 139 E. R. 101.

2556. — Failure of supply—Contract to supply timber for repairs.—Pltf. declared against defts. for not delivering, for the repairs of certain premises, sufficient timber growing thereon, according to their covenant. Defts. pleaded, that there was not timber growing on the premises sufficient & proper for the repairs:—Held: the plea, though informal for not stating that there was not timber sufficient for the repairs or any part thereof, was good, except on special demurrer.—*SNELL v. 2557. — Goods requisitioned by government.—Deft. entered into a contract for the sale to pltf. of 50 tons of Blairgowrie raspberries. Deft. was the agent of K. & H., & both parties expected that the raspberries would be K. & H.'s raspberries. K. & H. had sold a quantity of raspberries to buyers on behalf of the govt., as well as to private buyers. As the crop was not sufficient to satisfy all the orders which K. & H. had received, the Army Council served upon K. & H. a requisition, requiring them to place at the disposal of the Army Council 363 tons of raspberries, & to deliver the same to such persons & in such quantities as the Director of Army Contracts might direct. K. & H. delivered to the Govt. all the raspberries that were gathered subsequently, & pltf. only obtained 9 tons under their contract. In an action by pltf. for breach of contract:—Held: (1) deft. was liable as a contracting party, although both parties intended that the raspberries should be K. & H.'s raspberries; (2) the requisition served upon K. & H. was a valid requisition under the regulation 2b. of the Defence of the Realm Regulations Consolidated, as being a notice of intention to take possession of the raspberries when gathered; an exercise of the powers of the Army Council under the regulation for the purpose of procuring a necessary supply for the use of the troops was an exercise of their powers for the purpose of securing the public safety or the defence of the realm; & therefore deft. was protected by Defence of the Realm (Amendment) No. 2 Act, 1915 (c. 37), s. 1 (2), against liability in respect of the non-fulfilment of the contract, as far as it was due to the interference of the Army Council & he was only liable in respect of the balance.—*LAPTON, LTD. v. 2558. — Express proviso relating to impossibility.—By agreement in writing defts. sold to pltf. 250 bales of Manila hemp, shipment to be made from a port or ports in the Philippine Islands sailer or sailers between May 1 & July 31, 1898;

he agreement contained a clause that if the goods did not arrive from loss of vessel or other unavoidable cause the contract was to be void. In consequence of the Spanish American war it was in a business sense impossible for defts. to ship hemp by sailer between the specified dates, but in Sept. they shipped hemp, which would otherwise have satisfied the contract, by steamer, & on Oct. 27 declared it against the contract; pltf. refused to accept this declaration, & returned it to defts., who, on Nov. 4, wrote that it was the only declaration that they were in a position to make:—Held: (1) the stipulations as to shipment by sailer or sailers between the specified dates were conditions precedent & the declaration was bad; it was not an implied condition of the contract that it should be possible to ship by sailer between these dates; defts. were not protected by the express condition as to non-arrival of the goods, the non-arrival not having been occasioned by any unavoidable cause within the meaning of the contract; (2) the damages were to be ascertained by reference to the market price on Nov. 4, the day on which defts. finally notified their inability to make a declaration in accordance with the contract.

A slip, however, was attached to the contract, which provided that, "notwithstanding the war clauses in the attached contract . . . depots, will supply during the present hostilities . . . & should circumstances arise to further interfere in any manner with the supply, shipment, carriage, or delivery of coals, this contract is subject to cancellation by the suppliers":—Held: the difficulty of obtaining vessels owing to the shortage of ships, & the rise of freights, which was evidence of such shortage, were an "interference" within the meaning of the slip, & the suppliers were entitled to cancel the contract.—*SCHIEPVAART MAATSCHAPPIJ GYLSEN v. shall be delayed by fire, strike, or lock out, or any other unpreventable cause . . . shall be completed ready for trial by Oct. 30, 1914."

By agreement the date of completion was subsequently extended to Jan. 30, 1915. By clause 12: "In case the builders become bkpt. or insolvent or fail or be unable to deliver the steamer within eight months from the date agreed by this contract, thereupon the contract shall become void, & all moneys paid by the purchasers shall be repaid to them with interest at 5 per cent. . . . except only in the event of France becoming engaged in a European war, when the above limit of eight months shall be extended equal to the duration of the war, but in no case to exceed eighteen months in all."

The builders contended that in the events which had happened the clauses became operative on July 30, 1916, & the contract then became void. The purchasers claimed the ship or damages for non-delivery, & contended (inter alia) that the builders were not entitled to say the contract was void, but that it was only voidable at the purchaser's option:—Held: clause 12 became operative on July 30, 1916, & as the inability to perform the contract was not due to any default of defts., the contract was void except for the repayment of the money already paid by pltf., & was not merely avoidable at their option.—*NEW ZEALAND SHIPPING CO. v. 2561. — "Unforeseen contingencies excepted"—Source of contingencies not specified.]—A contract provided for the delivery of goods "unforeseen contingencies excepted." No particular source from which they were to come was stipulated. Unforeseen political complications prevented the supply of the goods from the source contemplated by the sellers, but it was not shown that the goods could not have been procured from other sources:—Held: the above clause did not protect the sellers from liability to deliver the goods.—*WILLS (GEORGE) & SONS, LTD. v. 2562. — Performance not naturally impossible.—Fundamental basis of contract not disturbed.]—By a contract dated Aug. 16, 1922, the sellers sold to the purchasers about 1,000 boxes of Smyrna sultanias at 60s. a cwt. c.i.f. London to be shipped from Smyrna by steamer to London during Sept. 1922. Smyrna at the date of the contract was in the occupation of the Greeks. On Sept. 9, 1922, it was taken by Turkish forces & shipment became impossible, with the result that the sellers did not ship any of the goods. The buyers claimed damages & the dispute went before arbitrators, who stated a case for the opinion of the Ct. under Arbitration Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 7.

The sellers said that they were excused from performance on the grounds that the contract became illegal when the port of shipment came under Turkish control, as a state of war at that time existed between England & Turkey; & that a state of circumstances had arisen which made the contract impossible of performance & that differed totally from the conditions with reference to which the contract was made:—Held: (1) mere impossibility of performance did not discharge a party where performance was not naturally impossible, unless such a state of affairs had arisen as displaced the fundamental basis of the contract. In the absence of any strike, war or force majeure clause, the buyers were entitled to damages for failure of the sellers to deliver; (2) as the point of illegality had not been taken at the hearing before the arbitrators, & was not raised in the case stated, it could not be taken afterwards.—*SARGANT (W. See Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 51 (2) &, generally, DAMAGES, Vol. XVII., pp. 78 et seq.

2563. Whether actual loss sustained.—The measure of damages is the damage sustained by pltf. in consequence of the breach of contract.

Defts., by their agents, contracted with pltf., & bought & sold notes were exchanged. The note was as follows:—"Bought for account of Levin & Adler, of William Bird & co. 200 tons Calder, No. 1, pig iron, at 45s. per ton, free on board at Glasgow. Cash at fourteen days against Dixon's delivery order or bill of lading, at buyer's option." Pltf. within the fourteen days, accepted one of Dixon's orders, & paid the money: the order was as follows—"I hereby undertake to deliver free on board here (at Glasgow), when required, 200 tons No. 1 pig iron, to the party lodging this document with me. For W. Dixon—John Campbell." Dixon offered other iron, but refused Calder:—Held: as the order was not inconsistent with the contract, & might have produced Calder iron, pltf. was justified in accepting it, but upon its failing to produce it, he was not bound by such acceptance, but might repudiate it & sue the defts. for the non-delivery of Calder iron, without presentment of the order.—*LEVIN v. In the course of the negotiations between pltf. & deft., deft. was informed of this contract, but neither the precise day for the delivery nor the amount of the penalties was mentioned. Delay occurred in the delivery of the 100 sets of wheels; & pltf., in consequence, had to pay certain penalties, but the Russian co. consented to take one rouble a day, amounting in the whole to £100. Pltfs., having brought an action against deft. for the delay, sought to recover as damages the £100:—Held: pltf. were not entitled as damages, as matter of right, to the amount of penalties; but the jury might reasonably have assessed the damages at that amount.

It is, no doubt, quite settled that, on a contract to supply goods of a particular sort, which at the time of the breach can be obtained in the market, the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price & the market price at the time of the breach. Shortly before Oct. 20, deft. informed pltf. that he would be unable to complete his contract by the time specified, on which pltf. endeavoured to get the shirtings elsewhere, but, there being no market in England for it, that kind of shirtings could only be procured by a previous order to manufacture it. Pltf., therefore, in order to ship according to his contract with his sub-vendee, procured 2,000 pieces of other shirtings of a somewhat superior quality, at an increase of price, which the sub-vendee accepted, but paid no advance in price to pltf. Pltf. sought to recover against deft. for the breach of his contract, the difference between what he paid for the substituted shirtings & deft.'s contract price. It was admitted at the trial that the shirtings that pltf. bought were the nearest in price & quality that could be got by Oct. 20; & the jury returned a verdict for the amount claimed:—Held: there being no market for the article contracted for, the measure of damages was the value of it at the time of breach; & pltf. having done the best thing he could, was entitled to recover the difference in the price.—HINDE v. 2569. —.]—Defts. contracted with pltf. to deliver goods to him of a particular shape & description at certain prices & by instalments at different times. When the contract was made defts. knew that, except as to price, it corresponded with & was substantially the same as a contract which pltf. had entered into with a French customer of his, & that it was made in order to enable pltf. to fulfil such last-mentioned contract. Defts. broke their contract, & there being no market for goods of the description contracted for, pltf.'s customer recovered damages against him in the French ct. to the amount of £28. In an action against defts. for their breach of contract:—Held: pltf. was not only entitled to recover as damages the amount of profit he would have made had he been able to fulfil his contract with his customer, but also damages in respect of his liability to such customer, & in estimating such last-mentioned damages the £28 which the French ct. had given might be treated as not an unreasonable one at which such damages might be assessed.—GRÉBERT-BORGNIS v. 2570. — Measure of damages unaffected.—(1) Pltfs. chartered defts.' ship for carriage of a cargo of cotton seed from Alexandria to the United Kingdom. The charterparty provided that the master was to sign bill of lading at any rate of freight & as customary at port of lading without prejudice to the stipulation of the charterparty. There was also a cesser of liability clause. A cargo was shipped under the charterparty at Alexandria by an on account of the charterers, & a bill of lading was given containing an exception, which was not in the charterparty, protecting the shipowners from liability for damage arising from any act, neglect, or default of the pilot, master, or mariners. The cargo was lost by the negligence of the master. In an action for non-delivery of the cargo the jury found that there was no special custom at Alexandria with regard to the form of bill of lading in use there:—Held: whether such finding were right or wrong, the terms of the charterparty did not authorise the giving of a bill of lading containing the before mentioned exception &, even if they did, in the absence of express provision to the contrary, as between the shipowners & the charterers only, the charterparty could be regarded as constituting the contract; & the bill of lading must be looked on as a mere receipt for the goods; & consequently defts. were liable for the non-delivery of the cargo.

(2) Pltfs. having sold the cargo "to arrive," at a price less than the market value of the goods at the port of discharge at the time when the cargo should have arrived:—Held: in estimating the damages such market value must be looked to, & not the price at which pltfs. had sold the cargo.

(3) The charterparty provided that sufficient cash for ship's disbursements should be advanced, if required, to the captain by the charterers on account of freight subject to insurance only. Pltfs. having advanced sums for ship's disbursements on account of freight as provided for in the charterparty:—Held: in estimating the damages for non-delivery of the cargo, only the unpaid freight must be deducted from the market value of the goods, not the advanced freight as well.—*RODOCANACHI v. 2571. —.—.]—The rule that the damages to which a purchaser is entitled for non-delivery of goods is the difference between the contract price & the market price at the time when they ought to have been delivered is not affected by the fact that before the date of delivery the purchaser had resold the goods for less than the market price.

Delay [in delivery] might have prejudiced him; but the amount of prejudice was no longer a matter of speculation, it had been put to the test by the goods being actually sold; & he was rightly, as I think, only held entitled to recover the difference between the market price at the date of due delivery & the price he actually got. But when there is no delivery of the goods the position is quite a different one. The buyer never gets them, & he is entitled to be put in the position in which he would have stood if he had got them at the due date. That position is the position of a man who has goods at the market price of the day, & barring special circumstances, the defaulting seller is neither mulct in damages for the extra profit which the buyer would have got owing to a forward resale at over the market price, nor can he take benefit of the fact that the buyer has made a forward resale at under the market price (LORD DUNEDIN).—*WILLIAMS BROTHERS v. The sellers failed to ship or tender any goods under the contract. They then applied to the Assocn. to declare a closing price & gave notice to the buyers that they were doing so. The market price had fallen since the date of the contract. The Assocn. declared a closing price at which if the goods were invoiced back to the sellers a balance would be found in their favour. The sellers claimed this balance; the buyers refused to pay it, & the dispute was referred to arbitrators, who awarded, subject to a special case, that the buyers should pay the balance to the sellers:—Held: (1) clause 8 applied, notwithstanding that the sellers were the party in default, & that they were entitled to the balance in their favour after the goods had been invoiced back to them by the buyers at the closing price properly declared by the Assocn.; (2) the closing price should be fixed with reference to the date on which the buyers received notice of the sellers' inability to perform their contract.

2588. General rule—Difference between market price at date of due & actual delivery.—In the case of late delivery the measure of damages in order to indemnify the purchaser is the difference between the market price at the respective dates of due & actual delivery of the goods purchased; but if the purchaser has resold them at a price in excess of that prevailing at the date of delivery he must in estimating his damages give credit therefor. In an action for damages for breach of contract dated Mar. 13, 1900, to deliver 3,000 tons of moist wood pulp between Sept. 1 & Nov. 1 of that year applt. claimed to recover 27s. 6d. a ton, the difference between 70s., the market price at the port of delivery on the due date, & 42s. 6d., the market price at the same place on the date of actual delivery; but it appeared that he had sold the goods at 65s. a ton, involving a loss to him of only 5s. a ton:—Held: he was entitled to recover only 5s. a ton. As the ct. below had on the evidence decreed that amount on 2,000 tons only, their lordships increased the amount by £250 in respect of the remaining 1,000 tons, together with a further amount as subsequently agreed between the parties.—*WERTHEIM v. l. the jury gave as damages the difference between the profits she would have earned if delivered at that time, when freights were high, & the profits she did earn when delivered seven months later, when freights were low. That being the measure of damages agreed to at the trial, the ct. refused to disturb the verdict.

Semle: as in the case of a breach of a contract to pay money, the interest of the money is the measure of damages, so in the case of a breach of a contract to deliver a chattel, the measure of damages should be the average profit made by the use of such a chattel.—*FLETCHER v. 2590. —.].—Deft. contracted to sell to pltf's. 75 tons of caustic soda,—a commodity not ordinarily procurable in the market,—at a given price, to be delivered on the rails at Liverpool for Hull, 25 tons in June, 25 tons in July, & 25 tons in Aug.; but he failed to deliver any until Sept. 16, between which day & Oct. 26 he delivered 26 tons in all. At the time of entering into the contract, deft. was aware that pltf's. were buying the soda for a foreign correspondent, but did not know until the end of Aug. that it was destined for St. Petersburg. Pltf's. had in fact contracted to sell the soda to A., a merchant at St. Petersburg, at an advanced price; & A. had contracted to sell it to B., a soap manufacturer at that place, for a still further advance. In consequence of the late delivery of the 26 tons, pltf's. were compelled to pay a higher rate of freight & insurance. This amounted to £40 17s. For their failure to deliver the remainder to A., they were called upon to pay & actually paid £159, which A. claimed as the compensation he had been obliged to pay to B. for the failure to perform his sub-contract with him. In an action by pltf's. to recover from deft. damages for the breach of his contract with them, it was conceded that they were entitled to recover the difference between the price, on the 49 tons undelivered, at which he had sold the caustic soda to them, & the price at which they had contracted to sell it to A.,—in other words, the loss of profit on the resale:—Held: they were also entitled to recover the £40 17s. the excess of freight & insurance, which was the necessary result of defts.' breach of contract; but deft. was not chargeable with the £159 which pltf's. had paid to A. to compensate B. for the loss of his bargain, —this being too remote a damage.—*BORRIES v. 2591. —.].—Goods required for special purpose—Not known to seller.—Where on the sale of a chattel, the buyer intends it for a special purpose, but the seller supposes it is for another & more obvious purpose, the buyer can recover, as damages for the non-delivery according to the contract, the loss of profit which might have been made from the purpose supposed by the seller, provided the buyer has actually sustained damages to that or a greater amount. Defts. agreed to sell & deliver to pltf's. within a certain time the hull of a floating boom derrick; but they did not deliver it till six months after the specified time. Pltf's., who were large coal merchants in the port of London, purchased the hull in order to place in it, as they in fact did, large hydraulic cranes & machinery for the purpose of transhipping their coals direct from colliers into barges. The hull was the first vessel of the kind ever built, & pltf's. special purpose was entirely novel, & was unknown to defts. Defts. believed that pltf's. were purchasing the hull for the purpose of using her as a coal store. If pltf's. had been prevented using the hull for their special purpose, they would either have sold her to be used in the hulk trade, as a coal store, or, if unable to do so, would have used her themselves as a store, & this was the most obvious use to which such a vessel was capable of being applied by persons in the coal trade; but the hulk trade is a distinct branch of the coal trade, & was no part of pltf's. business. Had the hull been purchased for this purpose, the delay in the delivery would have occasioned loss to the amount of £420. Pltf's. actually suffered damage to a much larger amount from not having the hull ready for their special purpose at the time fixed for the delivery:—Held: pltf's. were entitled to the £420 as the damages which defts. must be taken to have contemplated would result from the non-performance of their contract.—*CORY v. On May 25, pltf. made a contract to sell to M. & A. the same quantity & quality of cotton at 19½*d.* per lb., to be delivered in Aug. The supply of coal in India was subject to Govt. regulations which provided that railway waggons were to be supplied only on indents signed by the actual consumers & certified. The buyers furnished a certified indent for the coal signed by an ice factory, & providing for the coal being unloaded at B. railway station. The sellers having failed to deliver part of the coal contracted for, the buyers sued them for damages. The appellate ct. dismissed the suit on the ground that the buyers had not proved that they had suffered any loss by reason of the undelivered coal not reaching the indentors. There was a market for coal at B. at the time of the breach :—Held : the contract could not be treated as one for the delivery of coal for the purpose only of supplying the indentor, & the buyers were entitled to recover the difference between the market price & the contract price when the breach occurred.—KESHAVLAL BROTHERS & Co. v. DIWANCHAND & Co. (1923), L. R. 50 Ind. App. 142, P. C.

would have made on the resale by him, & also to all damages which he might be called upon to pay by reason of his inability to deliver to his sub-buyers. The arbitrators awarded, subject to the opinion of the ct. on a special case, that H. could recover only the difference between the price which he had contracted to pay to P. & the market price at the date of the breach. On argument of the special case the judge decided in favour of H.'s contention, holding on the facts that at the time when the contract was made it must have been in the contemplation of the parties that the cargo would be resold :—Held : the material date for ascertaining what was in the contemplation of the parties was the date when the contract was made & not the date when the cargo was appropriated to the contract, & on the findings of the arbitrators there was no material to support the decision of the judge that a resale was within the contemplation of the parties at the date of the contract, & therefore the damages payable by P. must be limited to the difference between the price which H. was to pay under the contract & the market price at the date of the breach.—HALL (R. & H.), LTD. v. (2) Where there is an anticipatory breach by a seller of a contract to deliver at a fixed date goods for which there is a market, the true rule as to the measure of damages is that the buyer, without buying against the seller, may bring his action at once, but if he does so his damages must be assessed with reference to the market price of the goods at the time when they ought to have been delivered under the contract. If the action comes on for trial before the contractual date for delivery has arrived, the ct. must arrive at that price as best it can. To this rule there is one exception for the benefit of the defaulting seller, namely, that if he can show that the buyer acted unreasonably in not buying against him, the date to be taken is the date at which the buyer ought to have gone into the market to mitigate damages.—*MELACHRINO v. No coal having been taken by plffs. in May, deft. wrote on May 31 desiring plffs. to consider the contract cancelled. Plffs. did not assent to this; but on June 11, deft. definitely refused to deliver any coal, & on July 3, plffs. brought an action for this breach. At the trial, which took place on Aug. 13, plffs. proved that the price of coal had risen during the whole period since the beginning of May, & was still rising. No evidence was given to show whether plffs. could have gone into the market & obtained a new contract for coals:—Held: in the absence of evidence on the part of deft., plffs. could have obtained a new contract on such terms as to mitigate their loss, the true measure of damages was the sum of the differences between the contract price & the market price at the several periods for delivery, notwithstanding that the last period had not elapsed when the action was brought, or when the cause was tried.—*ROPER v. 2624. ———— Time for delivery extended at seller's request.—By bought & sold notes signed by brokers acting both for pltf. & deft., the last of which was dated Apr. 25, pltf. bought of deft. 500 tons of iron, the delivery to extend over three months. None of the iron was delivered by July 25. A correspondence ensued between the brokers & deft.'s agent until Feb. following, from which a jury might properly come to the conclusion that pltf. waited for the delivery of the iron at the request of deft.; he then went into the market & bought, the price of iron being higher than at the end of July:—Held: as pltf. had not bound himself to wait, there was no alteration of the contract within Stat. Frauds, & therefore in an action for breach of contract he might recover from deft. the difference between the contract price of the iron & the market price in Feb.—OGLE v. VANE (EARL) (1868), L. By a c.i.f. contract of Nov. 20, 1925, W. bought 1,000 tons of a special wheat ex Challenger, expected to load in Dec. at Oregon. By a c.i.f. contract of Nov. 21, W. sold 500 tons of this parcel to sub-purchasers. The wheat was shipped in bulk at Oregon on Dec. 21, & a bill of lading for the 1,000 tons forwarded to W., who received it on Jan. 4, 1926. The purchase-money was due on Feb. 6, i.e. thirty-three days after sight, & on Feb. 5, although the sub-purchasers had never received any bill of lading, warrant, delivery order or any document of title representing the goods, & the 500 tons were never appropriated, they gave W. their cheque for their 500 tons less the half freight payable at destination. W. having paid this cheque to his bank & hypothecated the 1,000 tons bill of lading became bkpt. before the ship arrived. The trustee having redeemed this bill of lading claimed to retain the entire 1,000 tons leaving the sub-purchasers their remedy in damages:—Held: (1) the 500 tons were not specific or ascertained goods in respect of which specific performance of the contract of sale would be ordered as the remedy of the sub-purchasers under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 52; (2) there never was any such appropriation or identification of, or any such obligation to deliver, a particular 500 tons, as to effect an equitable assignment giving the sub-purchasers a beneficial interest therein or a lien in respect thereof.—Re WAIT, [1927] 1 Ch. 606; 71 Sol. The bill averred, that the coal was very conveniently situate with reference to the co.'s iron works, which adjoined thereto; & that the co. had the power, by means of their engines & pits, to drain the beds, & had occasion for a large quantity of coal of that particular description. Demurrer allowed, mainly on ground of laches, the co. having neglected to file their bill until eleven months after they discovered that defts. had ceased to deliver the coal, & were referred by defts. to their solrs.—*POLLARD v. 2670. Seller estopped from denying purchaser's title.]—In trover for goods, deft. pleaded that the assignees of M., a bkpt., were interested in the goods as tenants in common with pltf., & that defts., by the leave & licence of the assignees converted, etc. Replication, that the assignees were not so interested; & issue thereon. Deft. had sold the goods to pltf. as the sole purchaser, & had ordered the warehouseman, in whose hands they were, to weigh them over, which had been done, & the goods transferred into pltf.'s name in the warehousemen's books. Afterwards the assignees of M. gave notice of their claim to deft., & he ordered the warehousemen to detain the goods, which were still in their hands:—Held: as between deft. & pltf., the sale & transfer were conclusive of the latter being sole proprietor; & therefore, the alleged title of the assignees, supposing evidence of it to have been receivable under the special plea upon which pltf. had tendered issue, would not have been an available defence.—KIERAN v. SANDARS (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 515; 1 Nev. & P. K. B. 625; Will. Woll. & Dav. 267; 6 L. J. K. B. 145; 112 E. R. 197.

2672. Measure of damages—Resale by seller before delivery—Difference between contract price & market value.]—Pltf. agreed to buy of deft. a quantity of sheep, at a fixed price each, to be paid for on delivery, & to be taken away in a fortnight. Pltf. then took away 5 of the number, & paid for the 5. Before the expiration of the fortnight deft. sold the remainder to another person. In an action against deft. for breach of contract, the declaration containing also a count in trover:—Held: the proper measure of damage to be recovered was not the full value of the sheep, but only the difference between the price pltf. agreed to give for them, & their fair market value during the time he was entitled to them.

2673. — Buyer unable to deliver to sub-seller—Price of resale.—Pltf. purchased champagne lying at defts.' wharf at 14s. per dozen, & resold it at 24s. to the captain of a ship about to leave England. Defts. refused to deliver the wine & pltf. was unable to fulfil his contract, champagne of a similar quality not being procurable in the market. 2674. — Action against stranger—Full value of goods—Without deduction of price.—Pltfs., being under contract to sell waggons, employed L. to make them according to sample at a certain price. L. then employed deft. waggon co. to make them according to sample at a lower price. The co. afterwards proposed to receive payment direct from pltfs., who consented & were authorised by L. to pay them. Some waggons were delivered by the waggon co. to deft. railway co. to the order of pltfs. Pltfs. sent a complaint to the waggon co. that the waggons were unequal to sample, but did not reject them; & they informed L., & also the waggon co., that they would dispose of the waggons at the best price obtainable, & hold L. responsible for loss. L. rejected the waggons. Pltfs. gave notice to the railway co. not to deliver the waggons without their order, but the railway co. nevertheless delivered them to the waggon co., who refused to give them up. In an action against both cos. for conversion:—Held: (1) the property in the goods & the right to possession of them having passed to pltfs., both defts. were liable; (2) the arrangement for the advantage of the waggon co., that they should receive direct payment from pltfs., had not created any relationship between them which would prevent the application of the ordinary rule as to the measure of damages in trover against mere strangers; & pltfs. were, therefore, entitled to recover the full value of the goods at the time of the conversion, without deduction of the price.—JOHNSON v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. CO. & WIGAN WAGGON CO., LTD. (1878), 3 C. P. D. 499; 39 L. T. 448; 27 W. R. 459.

The value of rupee paper afterwards became considerably less, but L. held for many months what deft. had sold to him, & ultimately resold it at a loss of £43,000; —Held: the measure of damages was not the amount of the loss ultimately sustained by L., but the difference between the price which he paid for the rupee paper & the price which he would have received if he had resold it in the market forthwith after purchasing it.—WADDELL v. BLOCKEY (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 678; 48 L. J. Q. B. 517; 41 L. T. 458; 27 W. R. 931, C. A.

2676. Right to recover money paid—Partial failure of consideration—Mutual mistake.—Where deft. received from his principal abroad a bar of silver, & took it to pltfs., who melted it, & sent a piece to an assayer to be assayed at deft.'s expense, & paid a price for the bar to deft., as for the number of ounces of silver which by the assay it was calculated to contain, which number was afterwards discovered to exceed the true number:—Held: pltfs. might, after having offered to return the bar, have money had & received against deft. for the price thus paid to him under a mistake, although deft. had forwarded his account to his principal, & in it had placed the price received to the credit of his principal.—*COX v. Deft. sent to pltfs. invoices & bills of lading representing that two parcels, respective of those weights, had been shipped to their order, &, at the same time, drew bills upon them for the price, which pltfs., upon the faith of the representation contained in the invoices & bills of lading, accepted, & duly paid. Upon the arrival of the goods in London, the net weight, exclusive of packages, which consisted of baskets & leaves, proved to be 24 tons & 132½ tons only. Pltfs. took the goods, & sold them; & now brought money had & received to recover back the sum overpaid, as upon a partial failure of consideration. Upon a special case, stating it to be the custom at Singapore to purchase terra japonica by gross weight as packed, & in London to sell it net:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to recover.—DEVAUX v.

2681. ——— Breach of implied condition as to title.]—There is no implied warranty of title from the mere contract of sale itself, & a vendor is not liable for a bad title unless there be fraud on his part, or an express warranty, or what is equivalent thereto by declarations or conduct. Such warranty may be raised by the usage of trade, or by the nature of the trade carried on by the seller. Where articles are bought in a shop professedly carried on for the sale of goods, the shopkeeper must be considered as warranting that any purchaser will have a good title to keep the goods purchased.

A harp having been pledged to deft., a pawnbroker, by a party who had no title to it, deft. being ignorant of that fact, sent it for sale to an auctioneer after the expiration of the time for redemption. The auctioneer, describing the sale as consisting of unredeemed pledges & other effects, sold the harp to pltf., who having been compelled to restore it to the true owner, brought an action against deft. on an alleged breach of title to sell, & for money had & received:—Held: as the auctioneer had no authority to sell the harp, except as a forfeited pledge, deft. was to be considered as selling that right only which he himself had, & as undertaking merely that the article was a forfeited pledge, & that he was not cognisant of any defect of title. Seemle: pltf. could have recovered back the purchase-money for it on the count for money had & received, as upon a consideration that had failed, if there had been a mutual understanding that the bargain should be rescinded provided the seller should prove not to have a good title.—MORLEY v. Deft., a professed dealer in prints, bought some in his shop, & then & there resold them to pltf., who afterwards discovered that they had been stolen, & gave them up to the real owner:—Held: deft. sold as owner, & pltf. was entitled to recover from him the price he had paid for them.—EICHHOLTZ v. Pltf. sued deft. to recover back the purchase-money that he had paid as on a total failure of consideration:—Held: notwithstanding that he had had the use of the car the consideration had totally failed, & he was entitled to get the purchase-money back. The use of the car that he had had was no part of the consideration that he had contracted for, which was the property in & lawful possession of the car, whereas what he got was an unlawful possession which exposed him to the risk of an action at the suit of the true owner.—ROWLAND v. DIVALL, [1923] 2 K. B. 500 ; 92 L. J. K. B. 1041 ; 129 L. T. 757 ; 67 Sol. Jo. 703, C. A.

It proved to have been drawn in this country, & was therefore unavailable for want of a stamp, & could not be enforced against the parties. The vendor & purchaser at the time of the sale were both alike ignorant of this defect:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to recover back the price from the vendor, on the ground that the article sold as a foreign bill did not answer the description by which it was sold. Though it would have been otherwise, the sale being without any warranty, & there being no fraud, had the latent defect been one consistent with the article being a foreign bill.—GOMPERTZ v. 2687. — — — — —.]—By a contract dated Dec. 4, 1925, resp., Aronson, bought from applt. 1,000 Russian cubic fathoms of Leningrad pulpwood "now ready for shipment." The contract provided (inter alia) that if any of the goods should not be removed before the closing of the navigation season they should remain at the risk of the buyers & at the expense of the sellers. Resp. paid the price of the pulpwood on Dec. 19, 1925, but was not able to remove any of it before the navigation season closed. In June, 1926, when navigation was again open, he sent a steamer to Leningrad for the wood, & he then found that applt. had meanwhile resold half of the total quantity to other buyers. Applt. tendered fresh cut pulpwood in place of that which they had wrongfully resold. Resp.'s local agent at Leningrad protested that the fresh cut wood did not comply with the contract; but in order to avoid having to pay a large sum for dead freight he allowed the fresh cut wood to be loaded on the steamer, while reserving the right of resp. to claim damages. The claim was referred to arbn. in accordance with an arbn. clause in the contract, & the arbitrator awarded resp. £1,000 damages, subject to the opinion of the ct. on a special case. It was admitted in the arbn. that the fresh cut pulpwood which was actually shipped, although it did not comply with the terms of the contract, was equal in value to the wood which should have been shipped:—Held: the property in the pulpwood bought by resp. passed to him on payment of the price in Dec. 1925, & by subsequently reselling part of the wood to other purchasers applt. had been guilty of conversion for which they were liable in damages; or as applt. had been unable to deliver goods which they had sold, resp. could claim a return of his money on the ground of failure of consideration. The umpire had fixed the amount of the damages, of applt. were liable in law, at £1,000; & as the amount of the damages was a question of fact for him, the ct. would not interfere with his finding.—ARONSON v. MOLOGA HOLZINDUSTRIE A/G LENINGRAD (1927), 32 Com. Cas. 276, C. A.

A cargo of beans arrived in London on May 13, 1917, & on May 16, pltf., under a contract dated Apr. 18, 1917, for a part of it, was given a delivery note, & he paid the invoice price. The Order was announced in the daily newspapers on the morning of May 17, & the public were not aware of it earlier. Pltf. claimed that under this Order defts. could not give delivery, that there was a total failure of consideration under the contract, & that it should be cancelled:—Held: the day on which the Order came into operation was that on which it was made known to the public, May 17, & not, as would have been the case with an Act of Parliament, on May 16, on the first moment after midnight of May 15; & therefore pltf. was not entitled to have the contract cancelled.—JOHNSON v. SARGANT & SONS, [1918] 1 K. B. 101; 87 L. J. K. B. 122; 118 L. T. 95; 62 Sol. Jo. 88.

Pltf. afterwards purported to repudiate the contract, wrongfully, as the judge found. During the pendency of an action by him for the recovery of the deposit pltf. died, & his exors. were substituted as pltf.s., & they then discovered that at the time the contract was entered into deft. had promised, without the knowledge of pltf., to give pltf.'s chauffeur a share of the profit on the sale of the car if pltf. bought it. On the ground of that secret arrangement the exors. now sought to avoid the contract & to recover the deposit:—Held: the surreptitious dealing between deft. & pltf.'s chauffeur was a fraud on pltf.; the fact that pltf., when he purported to repudiate the contract, was not aware of the fraud, did not prevent his exors. from now relying upon it; & they were entitled on the ground of the fraud to avoid the contract & to recover the deposit.—ALEXANDER v. According to the custom of the trade, this deposit was to be retained by the seller as a security against any damages from the non-performance of the contract. The deposit was paid in bills of exchange. In June, 1846, the purchaser became bkpt. 2701. ——— Compensation to sub-purchaser.]—B. sold copra cattle cake to R., who resold it to C., who resold it to first pltf. On the sale by C. to first pltf. C. stated that the cake was “free from castor.” In fact the cake had in it so large a quantity of the deadly castor bean that the article supplied was not copra cake at all, but first pltf., having received the above statement from C., resold the cake to various distributors, & when it was given to cattle by farmers it caused serious illness. The farmers claimed damages from first pltf. who settled the claims & then claimed damages from C., & C. claimed from R., & R. claimed from B.:—Held: the damages claimed by first pltf. from C. were not too remote, & as the real character of the article was not patent first pltf. were entitled to deal with it on the assumption that it was the article contracted for, & therefore they could recover from C. all the damages claimed, including the compensation paid to sub-purchasers, & C. was similarly entitled to recover against R., & R. against B.—*BRITISH OIL & CAKE CO., LTD. v. 2702. ———.]—In an arbn. concerning a dispute between the parties to a contract of sale of certain goods, which were also the subject of a series of sub-sales, the umpire stated a special case in which he made three different awards, leaving the ct. to decide which was right. The first two awards were made on the footing that the sellers were liable to the buyers for breach of contract in that the goods did not answer the description in the contract; the second award was for a considerably larger sum; the third was made on the footing that there had been no breach of contract. The judge in the K. B. Div. having decided that the first award was right, the buyers demanded & obtained payment of the amount of that award & gave a receipt therefor. They then appealed from the decision of the judge & contended that the second award was the right one. Upon a preliminary objection to the appeal:—Held: having demanded & accepted payment under the first award appls. were precluded from contending that it was wrong.

The appeal therefore fails on this preliminary point. But it may be some satisfaction to appls. to know that in view of the materials before us the umpire seems to have been clearly right in holding that he would not accept the amount awarded in the former arbn. as the measure of damages in the present one. It is uncertain how that amount was arrived at; claimants in that arbn. had sold the goods under a description which represented them as above their agreed value; they claimed £6,000 & were awarded £3,745, but upon what grounds we do not know. In these circumstances it is impossible to apply the amount recovered by a sub-purchaser as the measure of damages recoverable against the original seller (BANKES, L.J.).—*DEXTERS, LTD. v. 2718. Rescission of contract—No intention of buyer to pay for goods.—On Nov. 23, S. was served with a debtor's summons for a debt slightly exceeding £50, & on Dec. 1, committed an act of bkpcy. by non-compliance with it. On Dec. 3, the creditor filed & served a petition for adjudication. On Dec. 5, S. bought wool at an auction, & called for it on Dec. 12. The vendor, being unaware of his embarrassed circumstances, allowed him to take it away without his paying for it, & without his making any representation as to payment. On Dec. 14, S. was adjudged bkpt., not having taken any steps to oppose the adjudication. He had not sold any of the wool, nor did it appear that he had attempted to raise money on it; semble: if it had been made out that S. did not intend to pay for the wool, the vendor would have been entitled to rescind.

If it were clearly made out that . . . he [the buyer] did not intend to pay for them, I should consider that a case of fraudulent misrepresentation was shown (MELLISH, L.J.).—Re SHACKLETON, Ex p. WHITTAKER (1875), 10 Ch. App. 446; 44 L. J. Bcy. 91; 32 L. T. 443; 23 W. R. 555, L. JJ.

2720. Damages caused by fraud—Right to set off against claim for return of purchase-money.—A sale of goods upon credit was induced by the fraud of the purchaser, who upon obtaining them pledged them with a pawnbroker. After the purchaser had paid part of the price a receiving order in bkpcy. was made against him. The vendor then discovered the fraud & disaffirmed the contract, retaking possession of the goods upon payment to the pawnbroker of the sum advanced upon them. The purchaser having been adjudicated bkpt. his trustee in bkpcy. brought an action against the vendor, claiming (a) to recover the goods or their value after giving credit for the sum paid to the pawnbroker to redeem them; or (b) in the alternative to recover the amount paid to the vendor on account of the purchase price:—Held: (1) upon the authority of Re Eastgate, Ex p. Ward, No. 2707, ante, the trustee acquired the property in the goods subject to the right of the vendor to disaffirm the contract of sale & to retake possession of the goods; the vendor had a right to disaffirm the contract after the date of the receiving order & therefore the trustee was not entitled to recover the goods or their value; (2) upon the authority of Jack v. Kipping (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 113, the vendor was entitled, under Bkpcy. Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 38, to set off the damages caused by the fraud of the bkpt., in this case the sum paid to the pawnbroker to redeem the goods, against the amount paid on account of the purchase price.—*TILLEY v. C., 1913.—BROWN v. McLEOD (1915), 8 W. W. R. 110.—CAN.

o. — Transfer of liabilities of vendor with property sold.—Bulk Sales Act (Sask.), s. 3, does not apply in a case where an owner of a stock of goods sells under an agreement providing that the purchaser should assume all the vendor's liabilities in connection with the business with two exceptions & pay the balance of the price by transferring certain real estate & the agreement is not a document within that sect.—*PEARCE BROTHERS, LTD. v. t. ——Under an execution issued on a judgment recovered against W. T. & co., Ltd., the sheriff levied upon the goods in the shops of plffs., claimed to be the property of the co. The evidence showed that at the time the goods in question were sold to plffs. the W. T. co. was in a condition of hopeless insolvency, & that the sales were made at less than cost for the purpose of raising funds to pay notes or other claims falling due:—Held: the sales were made out of the usual course of business & were clearly within Bulk Sales Act; & sects. 2 & 3 of the Act apply not merely to the sale of the whole of a stock, but to sales of parts of the stock out of the usual course of the business or trade of the vendor.—*WEBBER v. a. — Sales by manufacturers, traders or merchants—Whether job printer a "manufacturer."—A job printing co., whose general & substantial business is printing upon the receipt of orders, is not a "manufacturer" within the meaning of the term "manufacturers" in Bulk Sales Act, 1922, s. 3, defining "traders & merchants" to whom the Act applies. The fact that it makes odd sales of envelopes or quantities of paper, such sales being quite out of the line of its regular business, does not make it a "trader or merchant" within said sect.—*JOHN MARTIN PAPER CO., LTD. v. fled by statutory declaration.—Any sale falling within the Bulk Sales Act (O.), 1917, is void as against the creditors of the vendor, unless the vendor furnishes, & the purchaser obtains, a written statement, verified by a statutory declaration, giving the names & addresses of all creditors of the vendor, with the amount of his indebtedness to each, & unless the purchaser on obtaining this declaration either obtains a written waiver from the creditors or puts the whole of the purchase-money into the hands of a trustee for distribution pro rata among the creditors.—*INTERLAKE TISSUE MILLS CO., LTD. v. q. ——— Rights of creditors—On failure to claim against trustee for debt.—There is nothing in Bulk Sales Act, 1920, which precludes a creditor from claiming against his debtor a portion of his debt which he, for some reason or another, has not claimed from the trustee. A creditor who, it was admitted, was entitled to interest from debt., the debtor, on overdue accounts, but who filed his proved claim with the trustee for the amount due for principal & interest accrued up to the date of the claim, without claiming subsequent interest, was, therefore, held entitled to recover such interest from the debtor.—*J. Such an agreement merely confers a license to enter on the land & sever what is no longer a chattel so as to make it again a chattel & to remove it, & a purchaser of the realty without notice of the agreement is not bound by it, nor can the vendor of the chattel recover possession of it, or damages for its conversion from him.—*ANDREWS v. pp. ———— ——The retention of title by agreement till payment is made for goods sold & attached to the premises of the purchaser, even where the agreement contains a lease of the goods with a right to the lessee to purchase, is in no way inconsistent with the statutory lien given by Mechanic's Lien Act (Man.) on the land. The retention of title is in the nature of a specific lien upon the identical goods furnished: it is not inconsistent with the lien given by the statute upon the premises upon which the goods are placed or erected. The incorporating in the agreement of the provisions as to leasing the goods, does not in substance make the agreement other than one for sale, & the provision that it shall be regarded as a lease is for the purpose of giving the vendor an additional remedy he is not bound to exercise. The other remedies at law on the covenant or under the Act remain open to the vendor.—UNITED STATES CONSTRUCTION Co. v. RAT PORTAGE LUMBER Co. (1915), 33 W. L. R. 101; 9 W. W. R. 657; 25 D. L. sold a motor car to M. & H., a firm of dealers in motor cars, under a conditional sale agreement. The vendors assigned the benefit of the agreement to the depts.; the agreement was duly registered in accordance with Conditional Sales Act, 1914, & its regularity was not questioned:—Held: although M. & H. were dealers in cars, this car was not sold to them "for the purpose of resale in the course of business," & upon a resale by them, even to an innocent purchaser, the property in & ownership of the goods did not pass.—DULMAGE v. After the furniture had remained with deft. for some months, pltf. demanded it under the agreement, but deft. refused to deliver it up until his warehouse charges had been paid, & pltf. brought this action for damages for the wrongful detention & conversion of the goods:—Held: deft. was not entitled to retain the goods until his warehouse charges were paid.—SMITH v. consideration with notice.—Goods removed to another district without registration.]—Deft. while pasturing D.'s horse removed it, on at least implied instructions from D., & along with other horses he was pasturing, to grazing lands he owned in another registration district. Before the removal plff. had informed deft. that he held a lien note on the horse. Subsequent to the removal deft., to whom D. was indebted for pasturing, purchased the horse from D., paying the balance of the price in oats. Held: deft. was a purchaser "in good faith for valuable consideration," & owned the horse free from plff.'s claim under the lien note which had not been registered, as required by statute, in the registration district to which the horse was removed.—BARBOUR v. h. — Right of sub-purchaser against vendor.—Where sale by purchaser with consent of vendor.—Goods sold under a conditional sale agreement were sold by the conditional purchaser to defts. at a price larger than the amount due to the conditional vendor. The conditional vendor assented to the sale, & defts. agreed to pay to it the amount of its claim. Judgment was given in the conditional vendor's favour for this amount, & it was held that it was not concerned with the contention of defts. that the conditional purchaser had given to them a guarantee as to the condition of the goods & that this guarantee had been broken.—J. cc. — Whether property passes.—M. received from plffs. certain articles of furniture, under the following written memorandum, signed by her, "Received from Messrs. W. F. & Son the following articles of furniture, for which I am to pay two hundred & twenty dollars & twenty-five cents or more, in monthly payments of twenty dollars each month from date. The said furniture to remain the property of W. F. & Son, till paid for in full, & in the event of non-payment monthly the said W. F. & Son can take the furniture back".—Held: possession delivered on condition till payment should be made does not pass the property, & the part payment made will be forfeited, if the agreement be not fulfilled.—FRASER v. WALLACE (1878), 2 R. & C. 337; 2 S. C. R. 522.—CAN.

dd. — Surety for payment.—Release by surrender by purchaser to vendor of part of goods.—Where full value credited to purchaser.—Where a purchaser under a lien note, of certain chattels by agreement with the vendor, surrendered some of the chattels to him & received a credit upon the amount of the note & it was not shown that the chattels returned would under any other conditions or circumstances of sale have realized a greater price, or that if the lien note had been turned over to him & he had proceeded under it, the chattels would have brought more, the surety who signed the note was not released.—TOOVEY v. BROCK & BROCK (1916), 34 W. L. R. 973.—CAN.

ee. — Incidence of risk.—Agreement by buyer to insure for seller.—Where a lien note provides that the ownership of the goods is to remain in the seller until the note is paid, but that the risk usually incident to ownership is to be in the buyer as long as the seller has the ownership, & the goods for which the note was given are seized by the seller for default in payment of the note & while under seizure & in possession of the seller pending resale, are destroyed without fault of the seller, the buyer is liable for the amount of the purchase-price remaining unpaid. Under a conditional sale agreement the fact that the buyer agreed to insure the goods for an amount sufficient to protect the interest of the seller therein is relevant to show that it was intended that the buyer should take the risk.—HOLM v. MORGAN, [1921] 3 W. W. R. 671; 63 D. L. R. 383; 15 Sask. L. R. 83.—CAN.

ff. — Exclusion by oral agreement amounting to absolute sale.—An action on lien notes given for the purchase-price of farm machinery dismissed, on the grounds that the oral bargain between the parties was wholly different from that expressed in the notes, in the fact that it, the oral bargain, was an out-and-out sale, & the lien notes were not read to the purchaser, who was illiterate.—GILLESPIE v. TILLIE (Man.), [1922] 2 W. W. R. 350; 66 D. L. R. 779.—CAN.

gg. — Sale to which Farm Implement Act applies.—Where a conditional sale is one to which the Farm Implement Act, 1920, applies the provisions of said Act must be read together & applied with those of Conditional Sales Act, 1920, as one body of law. In the case of such a sale, Farm Implement Act, s. 22, does not impliedly override the provisions of Conditional Sales Act with respect to the rights of the seller under a lien note.—INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER CO. OF CANADA, LTD. v. POSTNICOFF (Sask.), [1925] 2 W. W. R. 769.—CAN.

hh. — ——Farm Implement Act, 1920, states exclusively the rights & liabilities of vendors & vendees under contracts & lien notes. The only right to a lien for unpaid purchase-money is that given by the Act, & the only rights & liabilities attached to or incidental to the lien are those which are created by the Act. The whole object of the Act is to define clearly & exclusively the whole agreement between the parties, & any attempt to enlarge the liabilities of the purchaser is of no effect. The statutory contract is the entire contract between the parties, & any lien notes taken by the vendor must not vary the terms of the contract in that regard.—CHURSENOFF v. BAILEY BROTHERS, [1924] 2 D. L. R. 1105; [1924] 1 W. W. R. 1105; 18 Sask. L. R. 234.—CAN.

b. ——— Assignment of lien note—Whether property in goods transferred.—In Manitoba an assignment by a vendor of a lien note or lien agreement under Farm Implement Act, 1919, does not, in the absence of express terms, transfer the vendor's right of property in the chattels therein comprised. It merely transfers the debt or chose in action. The combined effect of the lien agreement & Farm Implement Act, ss. 18 & 19, does not alter the result.—KILGOUR v. WHITE (Man.), [1923] 3 W. W. R. 229.—CAN.

c. Under Farm Implement Acts—Formation of contract—Must be in writing—In appropriate form.—Where the sale of farm machinery falls under Farm Implement Act, 1920, & is not evidenced by a contract in writing in appropriate form provided by the Act, the transaction is void.—DORSON v. BARR & BRINKWORTH (Sask.), [1923] 4 D. L. R. 562; [1923] 2 W. W. R. 260.—CAN.

k. ——— Contract must be read & explained to purchaser unable to read English.—Where a purchaser of a large farm implement does not read English, Farm Implement Act, 1920, s. 18, is not complied with unless the whole contract is read over & explained to him in his own language, even though he understands some English & after the whole contract has been read to him in English, those portions of it which he says he does not understand in English are read over & explained to him in his language, & he says he understands it all. Where said sect. has not been complied with the contract of sale is invalid.—ADVANCE RUMELY THRESHER CO. v. YORGA, [1925] 4 O. L. R. 5; 20 Sask. L. R.; [1925] 3 W. W. R. 150; affd., [1926] 5 S. q. ——— Sale of all implements—Application to sale of second-hand large implement.—Farm Implement Act, 1917, applies to the sale of all "implements" as defined by the Act, & therefore where a contract of sale of a second-hand "large implement" is not in the form which the Act prescribes it is invalid, even though the vendor be not a dealer in implements. The distinction between dealers & persons making isolated sales is of importance only in respect to those sects. 5, 7, & 8, which require dealers to file with the Minister lists of their goods & statements of the selling price.—AITKEN v. CURRIE, [1921] 2 W. W. R. 973; 14 Sask. L. R. 397.—CAN.

r. ——— Sale of second-hand small implement on credit.—On the sale on credit of a second-hand farm implement, if the contract is not in the form required by Farm Implement Act, s. 13, no action can be brought thereon, even though the implement is a "small implement" within the Act.—STEWART v. TOALFSON, [1921] 3 W. W. R. 154.—CAN.

t. Sale—salesman of implement firm of own implements.—A person employed on salary by a farm implement co. as a travelling salesman & collector is not a "dealer" within Farm Implement Act, 1920, & therefore a sale by him of his own implements used by him in farming is not one to which the said Act applies.—*HARMON v. a. ——— Warranties essential to validity of contract—Sale of large implement—Warranty that machine is "well made & of good materials."—Under Farm Implement Act, 1915 (Sask.), there must be inserted in a contract for sale of a "large implement" the clause that "the vendor warrants that the said machinery is well made & of good materials," without which clause the contract is invalid.—*FROST v. bb. ——— Duty of seller to incorporate current improvements.—It was within the intention of the legislature in imposing upon the implement cos. a warranty that machinery is so designed as to do satisfactory work, to impose upon them the obligation of keeping up to date in adapting, with reasonable promptness, improvements which have become generally recognised as such, & to the end that they are not to be permitted to go on selling their old stock of implements when it has become generally recognised that much more satisfactory implements adapted for the same purpose are on the market. Said statutory warranty goes far beyond the warranties implied by virtue of Sale of Goods Ordinance that the goods are merchantable & suitable for the purpose intended.—JOHN DEERE PLOW CO. v. PALMER, [1923] 1 D. L. R.

Breach of warranty—Failure of purchaser to notify or remedy defect—Limitation of damages.—A tractor in working lost compression because the pistons were too small for the cylinders & therefore it lacked the power which it otherwise would have had.—Held: this was a breach of the statutory warranty on sale contained in Farm Machinery Act, s. 5; but because the purchaser, although complaining to the vendors of lack of power, failed to notify them of the defect which caused the trouble, although he knew of it & could have remedied it at small expense, his duty being to remedy it even if the vendors had been notified of it & had disregarded it, his right to damages was limited to the cost of remedying it & incidental loss & expenses whilst this was being done.—NOYRON v. SMITH, [1920] 2 W. W. R. 121.—CAN.

dd. ——— Right to reject goods—Whether right lost by retention & user—User pending efforts of seller to put goods in proper condition.—Purchasers were held entitled to rescission, where an engine sold was not such as was contracted to be sold, inasmuch as it did not, on being properly operated, develop the horse power set out in the description of the engine in the contract. The use of the engine by the purchasers was held not to amount to an acceptance, in view of repeated requests on their part to the vendors to make it work properly, the vendors having made two unsuccessful efforts to do so.—DAVENPORT v. MINNEAPOLIS THRESHING MACHINE CO., [1920] 3 W. W. R. 153.—CAN.

S. 1920, c. 128, s. 24, that a vendor on repossessing a large implement must have the same appraised by arbitrators is not retrospective & is not applicable to a contract for the sale of a large implement made prior to the date of the Act.—*J. ff. ——— Rights & remedies on invalid contract—Right of vendor to return of goods.—An agreement for the sale of machinery which does not comply with Farm Implement Act is invalid & will not support an action; it is, however, not illegal & the vendor has an equitable right to the return of the property parted with or compensation for the same.—*WHITE & SONS CO., LTD. v. The ets., however, will not allow either party to enrich himself at the expense of the other party, but will order a return to the vendor of the machinery, compensation for its use, & compensation for any depreciation not due to ordinary use, on the other hand. The return of the machinery will not be ordered to be made conditional on the return of the purchase money & notes.—SUMNER v. SQUIRES, [1924] 4 D. L. R. 1309; 17 Sask. L. R. 98; [1923] 2 W. W. o. ————.]—Where a contract of sale of farm machinery under Farm Implement Act, 1920, made after Mar. 31, 1920, is invalid by reason of failure to comply with sect. 31 of the Act, the transaction is void & the vendor cannot recover the price nor can the purchaser recover damages, but the vendor is entitled to the return of the machinery, payment by the purchaser for its use during the time it was in his possession, & damages for any depreciation caused by the negligence of the purchaser.—SASKATCHEWAN GRAIN GROWERS' ASSOCN., LTD. v. HATLIN (Sask.), [1923] 4 D. L. R. 611; [1923] 3 W. W. R. 282.—CAN.

p. ————.]—Return not conditional on repayment of purchase money.—SUMNER v. SQUIRES, [1924] 4 D. L. R. 1309; 17 Sask. L. R. 98; [1923] 2 W. W. R. 243; varying, [1923] 1 D. L. R. 1192; [1922] 3 W. W. R. 1174.—CAN.

q. ————.]—Right of assignee of vendor.—To recover purchase price from buyer.—Where an order for a grain separator & the lien notes given in respect of the price were altered in a material particular after they had been signed by the purchaser, & where the contract under Farm Implement Act, 1920, was admittedly invalid, pltf., the assignee of the vendor, was held to be not entitled to recover the price. Pltf., however, was granted equitable relief by way of a return of the separator & payment by the purchaser of any financial benefit which the latter had derived from the use of the machinery, it being made a condition of the granting of such equitable relief that pltf. should repay to the purchaser the amount paid by him on account of the price together with the interest thereon at the legal rate, & should return to the purchaser the lien notes given in respect of the price.—ROYAL BANK OF CANADA v. FRANK, [1924] 3 D. L. R. 479; [1924] 2 W. W. R. 949; 18 Sask. L. R. 485.—CAN.

r. ————.]—Right of purchaser.—Cancellation & return of lien notes & money paid.—FROST v. COMPAGNIE DES JARDIN (Sask.), [1919] 2 W. W. R. 457.—CAN.

t. ————.]—On the sale of a traction engine the vendors failed to deliver or post to the purchaser a copy of the contract as required by Farm Implement Act, s. 19. The engine did not satisfy the warranty as to working properly & the vendors did not make it work properly. The purchaser did not give the notice of rejection provided for by Form A. of the Act within the proper time. The purchaser's use of the machine was not such as to give rise to the presumption that he had accepted it prior to his repudiation of the contract by letter:—Held: the purchaser was entitled to recover the moneys paid with interest, return of his notes, & cancellation of the contract, & costs; the vendor to have possession of the engine.—EDGINGTON v. JONES TRACTOR & IMPLEMENT CO., LTD., [1921] 2 W. W. R. 733.—CAN.

a. ————.]—Where a contract of sale of farm machinery under Farm Implement Act, 1920, made after Mar. 31, 1920, is invalid by reason of failure to comply with sect. 31 of the Act, the transaction is void & the vendor cannot recover the price nor can the purchaser recover damages, but the latter is entitled to a return of the lien note signed by him

& of the money paid by him on account of the price.—SASKATCHEWAN GRAIN GROWERS' ASSOCN., LTD. v. HATLIN (Sask.), [1923] 4 D. L. R. 611, [1923] 3 W. W. R. 282.—CAN.

b. ————.]—Return of purchase price less profits made on machine.—Deft. sold to pltf. a tractor, but the written agreement purported to be made between M. co. & pltf., whereas M. co. had nothing to do with the sale. The ct. therefore found that there was no agreement in Form A. under Farm Implement Act between vendor & purchaser for the sale, & judgment was given to pltf. for return of the purchase-price less the profits made by him with the machine, & deft. to have repossession.—TAYLOR v. JONES (Sask.), [1919] 2 W. W. R. 789.—CAN.

c. ————.]—Return of purchase money.—Waiver in absence of fraud by payment with full knowledge.—Although where a contract for the sale of a "large implement" does not comply with Farm Implement Act, 1920, it is not enforceable, it is, nevertheless, the statute not being prohibitory, one which the parties may make & carry out if they wish; & where money has been paid voluntarily thereunder, with full knowledge of all the facts, & there has been no fraud, compulsion, or undue influence, the money cannot be recovered.—HAUBRICH v. KEEFNER, [1922] 1 W. W. R. 1079; 65 D. L. R. 50; 15 Sask. L. R. 271.—CAN.

d. ————.]—Rectification.—A written contract of sale of a farm motor failed to comply with Farm Implement Act in not stating the purposes for which it was to be used. On application by the vendors the ct. refused to rectify it, because the form of the agreement goes to the agreement itself.—DAVENPORT v. MINNEAPOLIS THRESHING MACHINE CO., [1920] 3 W. W. R. 153.—CAN.
